In the present suit, the bill of complaint was filed by the South Park Commissioners, who, in pursuance of negotiations with Kerr, had advanced certain sums of money to enable the latter to protect his title to a part of the lands taken for the purposes of the park, and as security for the same took an assignment of certain incumbrances by way of mortgage or deed of trust upon the premises, but in fact intending that the money so advanced should be treated as a payment on account of the value of the lands of Kerr taken by them for public uses. Notwithstanding that, the present suit was pressed to a decree for the foreclosure of the lands covered by the deed of trust, and a strict foreclosure in substance was decreed, by directing that unless the representatives of Kerr repaid to the complainants the amount of their advances, the trustee holding the legal title to the premises in controversy should convey them to the complainants in payment of a further small sum of $3,454.[illegible] The present appeal is from this decree.

In the cause just disposed of, the same advances made by the South Park Commissioners are allowed to them in the decree as credits on account of payment of the value of the whole tract of [illegible] acres, which, of course, is inconsistent with the decree now complained of.

[369] That decree is accordingly reversed, and the cause is remanded for further proceedings in conformity with equity and justice and not inconsistent with this opinion.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

---

[496] SIOUX CITY AND ST. PAUL RAILROAD COMPANY AND ALEXANDER H. RICE AND E. F. DRAKE, Trustees, Appts.,

v.

CHICAGO, MILWAUKEE AND ST. PAUL RAILWAY COMPANY.

CHICAGO, MILWAUKEE AND ST. PAUL RAILWAY COMPANY, Appt.,

v.

SIOUX CITY AND ST. PAUL RAILROAD COMPANY, ALEXANDER H. RICE, ELIAS F. DRAKE, JOHN H. GEAR, ET AL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 496-528.)

Land grants in aid of railroads—overlapping claims—construction of grants—costs.

1. Where in case of a grant, by an Act of Congress to a State in trust for each of two railroads, of every alternate section of land for ten miles in width on each side of the roads, and in case any of these lands had been disposed of, a grant of lands in lieu of them to be selected within twenty miles of the road, it was found that the grants overlapped, held:

a. That the title acquired from the United States related back to the date of the grant and that neither company could, by any act of its own (as by prior location or construction) or by any omission of the other company, obtain any superiority, provided there was no forfeiture of the grant.

b. That this principle did not apply to lieu lands, outside the ten mile limit.

c. That as to overlapping lands within ten miles of each road the companies each took an undivided moiety.

d. That as to lands within ten miles of one road and more than ten miles from the other, the nearest took the entire title, though otherwise the further road might have been entitled to indemnity lands therein.

e. That as to lands more than ten miles but less than twenty from each road, the decree of the court below, dividing these lands equally was, under the circumstances, correct.

2. Each party having appe[illegible]y having secured the reversal of the judgment in an important point, the costs in this court are divided.

[Nos. 169, 517.]

Argued and submitted March 16, 1896. Decided March 29, 1896.

APPEALS from the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Iowa.

The case is stated by the court.

Mess. John C. Spooner and J. H. Swan, for the Sioux City and St. P. R. R. Co. et al.

Mr. John W. Cary, for Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co.

Mr. Justice Miller delivered the opinion of the court:

These are cross appeals from a decree of the Circuit Court for the District of Iowa.

In that court the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad Company brought its bill in chancery on the 4th day of March, 1879, against the Sioux City and St. Paul Railroad Company, which in due time was answered.

The subject of contest in this suit was the right to certain lands granted by Congress to the State of Iowa to aid in building two railroads, whose right to the lands became vested in one or both of these companies, however named originally. The grant of the lands was by a single statute, and was to the State as a trust for the construction of two roads which necessarily crossed each other, and by the Act of Congress the place of crossing was to be in O'Brien County. The Act granted for the aid of each road every alternate section of land designated by odd numbers for ten sections in width on each side of said roads; and in the event that any of these odd sections had, when the lines of the roads were definitely located, been sold or otherwise disposed of, the usual grant of lands in lieu of them should, by the Secretary of the Interior, be caused to be selected, provided they were in no case to be located more than twenty miles from the lines of the roads. 13 Stat. at L. 72, chap. 84.

The roads to be benefited by this grant have both been completed, and both Companies are entitled to the odd sections within ten miles of their lines of road, and to the indemnity lands so far as they can be found of odd numbers within twenty miles. But as these roads cross each other these limits also cross and overlap, and the claims to the odd sections within those limits necessarily conflict. This presents questions which, at the time the suit was brought, were important, because the value of the land in controversy is large and because many other land grants to railroad companies presented the same difficulty. But during the pendency of this suit in the circuit court and on appeal here all these questions have, it is believed, been decided by this court, so that nothing remains but to apply the principles of these decisions to the admitted facts of this case. Cedar Rapids, etc. R. R. Co. v. Herring, 110 U. S. 27; Kansas Pacific R. Co. v. Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé R. R. Co. and St. Paul, etc. R. R. Co. v. Winona, etc. R. R. Co. 112 U. S. 414, 720 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 56, 794, 872].

1. It was claimed by the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Company, which, for brevity will be called the Milwaukee Company, that by reason of the prior location of the line of its road through the lands where the crossing finally took place, it acquired a priority for its entire claim to the exclusion of the other Company, within the limits of the lap. That is, that when its line was definitely located it became immediately entitled to every odd section within ten miles of the road and to the paramount right of selection of indemnity lands within twenty miles.

2. The Sioux City road asserted, by virtue of the fact of the prior construction of its road through the overlapping lines of the grant, that it had secured the paramount right which the other Company claimed by reason of prior location.

Both these contentions are wrong. The title acquired from the United States relates back to the date of the grant; and neither Company can obtain any superiority of title by any act done by it or by any omission to act by the other, provided there is no forfeiture of the grant. This principle is fully decided in the case of St. Paul, etc. R. R. Co. v. Winona, etc. R. R. Co. [supra]. In such case the companies take the lands coming within the conflicting lines in equal undivided moieties.

In the opinion above referred to it was held that while this rule applied to what are called lands in place, that is, those odd sections found within the ten mile limit of the road, as those ten miles conflicted with each other, it did not apply to lieu lands or indemnity lands which were to be selected outside of the ten mile limit. The reason of this was said to be that, with regard to the odd sections found within the original limits of the grant undisposed of when the line of the road was definitely located, that location ascertained the sections which passed by the grant and fixed the right to such sections, whether it was the whole or the moiety of them.

But no title to indemnity lands was vested until a selection was made by which they were pointed out and ascertained, and the selection made approved by the Secretary of the Interior. In a case, therefore, where two companies had this right of selection within the same limits, priority of title might be created by priority of selection, or some other mode than location of the road or priority of construction.

The circuit court, in its decree, disregarded this distinction between lands found in place within ten miles of each road and those within the indemnity limits, and applied the tenancy-in-common principle to the lands claimed as indemnity for others not found within the ten miles, as well as to those found within those limits and not sold or disposed of.

It appears from the record in this case that there are within the lap of the twenty mile limits of both roads, subject to the grants to these roads, both for lands in place and for lieu or indemnity lands, $189,595\frac{95}{100}$ acres which constituted the subject matter of this controversy.

1. Of these, $63,796\frac{24}{100}$ acres are within the ten mile limit of the Sioux City road, and not within the ten mile limit of the Milwaukee road, although they are within its twenty mile limit. The result of the rule on which the circuit court acted was to divide these lands equally between the two Companies.

But the principles we have stated, and which were fully considered in St. Paul, etc. R. R. Co. v. Winona, etc. R. R. Co. exclude the Milwaukee Company in this case from invading the ten mile limit of the Sioux City road to seek indemnity for losses by reason of lands within its own ten mile limit previously disposed of. This $63,796\frac{24}{100}$ acres being odd sections within the ten mile limit of the Sioux City road, and not within the ten mile limit of the Milwaukee road, belonged exclusively to the former, and the latter Company had no interest in them. The decree is in that respect erroneous and must be reversed, and all these lands given to the Sioux City Company.

2. Of the lands in controversy there were $33,071\frac{8}{100}$ acres within the ten mile limit of the Milwaukee road and not within the ten mile limit of the Sioux City road, but within its twenty mile limit, which, according to the ruling of the circuit court, were equally divided between the two Companies. For the same reasons which govern with regard to the $63,796\frac{24}{100}$ acres just disposed of, this part of the decree must be reversed and these $33,071\frac{8}{100}$ acres given to the Milwaukee Company.

3. Of the lands in controversy there were $50,539\frac{73}{100}$ acres within the ten mile limits of both roads. This the decree of the circuit court held to belong to the companies in equal undivided moieties, and appointed commissioners to make partition of them. This part of the decree was upon the principles we have stated correct, and must be affirmed.

4. There remains to be considered $42,188\frac{88}{100}$ acres found to be within the twenty mile or indemnity limit of both roads, and not within the ten mile or absolute grant limit of either road. As these lands are within the category of those to which no title accrued until a selection of them was made for one road or the other, there might arise some difficulty about priority of right between the two Companies. But we are of opinion that the circumstances in which the title to these lands has been placed by the action of the State of Iowa, which was a trustee in the matter for both parties, and of the Commissioner of the General Land-Office, the decree of the court dividing these lands equally between the parties was just. [410]

So far as any selection was made of these lands it was by the State of Iowa, and the legal title was conveyed to her. Though they were certified to her by the Secretary of the Interior for the benefit of the Sioux City Company, and though the State conveyed them to that Company, it is obvious that both the Secretary of the Interior and the Governor of Iowa acted under the mistaken idea that the earlier construction of its road or its earlier location by the Sioux City Company gave it a priority of right in these indemnity lands; and as there was not enough to satisfy the demands of both Companies nor, indeed, of either of them, they, for that reason, conveyed them all to the Sioux City Company. We think the action of the Secretary of the Interior and of the Governor of Iowa, under this mistake of law and of their powers, and especially the Governor of Iowa, the common trustee of both of these Companies, cannot have the effect of destroying the rights of the parties. There was in fact no selection. All were wrongfully conveyed to the Sioux City Company.

That part of the decree, therefore, which divides these lands equally and directs the commissioners to make partition of them is also affirmed.

As both parties appealed from the decree of the circuit court, and as each of them has succeeded in obtaining a reversal of an important part of the decree, the costs of the appeal will be equally divided between them, and the case remanded to the Circuit Court, with instruction to render a decree in conformity with this opinion.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

CALVIN LITTLEFIELD, Appt.,

[419] v.

WILLIAM D. BLOXHAM, Governor, HENRY A. PENGLE, Treasurer, WILLIAM D. BARNES, Comptroller, J. P. RANEY, Attorney-General, AND P. W. WHITE, Commissioner of Land and Emigration of the STATE OF FLORIDA, Trustees of the INTERNAL IMPROVEMENT FUND OF THE STATE OF FLORIDA.

EDWARD J. REED, Appt.,

v.

WILLIAM D. BLOXHAM, Governor, HENRY A. PENGLE, Treasurer, WILLIAM D. BARNES, Comptroller, J. P. RANEY, Attorney-General, AND P. W. WHITE, Commissioner of Land and Emigration of the STATE OF FLORIDA, Trustees of the INTERNAL IMPROVEMENT FUND OF THE STATE OF FLORIDA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 419-430.)

Ownership of bonds—foreclosure of R. R. mortgages—practice—estoppel.

Where trustees of a state fund had sold certain railroads under authority of law, and claimed as part of the purchase money certain mortgage bonds of said roads, and during the pendency of a suit to establish their title, other parties proceeded to foreclose a mortgage junior to theirs, and it became necessary to fix the amount of their prior lien, and the trustees to save themselves from loss in case their claim to the ownership of the bonds should be defeated, took a decree in such foreclosure suit for what would be their due if their title should fail, such action on their part, and the ascertainment of the amount so due, will not estop them in the pending proceedings to establish their title to the bonds.

[Nos. 155, 174.]

Argued and submitted Mar. 9, 10, 1886. Decided Mar. 29, 1886.

APPEALS from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Florida.

The case is stated by the court.

Mr. Horatio Bisbee, Jr., for appellant Littlefield.

Messrs. J. Aug. Johnson and John A. Henderson, for appellant Reed.

Mr Wayne MacVeagh, for appellees.

Mr. Chief Justice Waite delivered the opinion of the court:

These appeals relate to the ownership of $103,000 in amount of certain bonds of the Pensacola and Georgia Railroad Company and the Tallahassee Railroad Company. For convenience they will be hereinafter referred to as "one hundred and three bonds." Many of the matters involved were under consideration by this court in Florida v. Anderson, 91 U. S. 667 [Bk. 23, L. ed. 290], and R. R. Cos. v. Schutte, 103 U. S. 118 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 327], to which reference is made for a general history of the transactions out of which the present controversy arose.

The facts on which the rights of these parties depend we find to be as follows:

The railroads of the two companies above named were sold by the Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund of the State of Florida on the 20th of March, 1869, under the provisions of the Internal Improvement Act of Florida, passed January 6, 1855, to pay certain bonds, of which those now in dispute are a part. A statement of the provisions of this Act will be found in the report of the case of Florida v. Anderson, beginning at page 670 [294]. A conveyance of the railroads to the purchasers at the sales was obtained, to use the language of the counsel for the appellant in Littlefield's Case, "through a well planned and cleverly executed fraud," without the payment of about $472,000 of the purchase money. This sum represented an equal amount of bonds outstanding, which included the 103 now in question. A history of the facts connected with this transaction will be found in the report of Railroad Companies v. Schutte, beginning at page 121 [328]. George W. Swepson was under obligations to pay what remained due on the purchase money, or, which is the same thing, to get up and surrender to the Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund the outstanding bonds for cancellation.

On the 24th of June, 1869, an Act was passed by the General Assembly of Florida, by which George W. Swepson, Milton S. Littlefield, and their associates, were incorporated under the name of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company. The important provisions of the charter of this company will be found in the report of the Schutte Case at page 123 [329] and following. Afterwards the title to the two railroads which had been purchased was transferred to the corporation thus created. On or before the 10th of November, 1869, Milton S. Littlefield succeeded to all the rights of George W. Swepson in the premises, and became bound to take up and surrender the outstanding bonds, or pay the balance due on the purchase money in cash.

On the 2d of August, 1869, drafts were drawn by George W. Swepson on and accepted by Milton S. Littlefield, in favor of Edward Houston, for $109,140. These drafts grew out of transactions between the parties relative to the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company and the Florida Central Railroad Company; and in some way Houston held 110 of the bonds of the Pensacola and Georgia Railroad Company and Tallahassee Railroad Company as collateral security. These bonds were part of those outstanding which Swepson was bound to take up and surrender, and they included the one hundred and three now involved. The drafts were likewise among the obligations which Littlefield assumed to pay when, in November following, he took Swepson's place in these transactions.

On the 13th of May, 1870, Littlefield entered into a contract with Houston, by which he bought the drafts above mentioned, and certain shares of the stock of the Florida Central Railroad Company, and gave his draft for $163,020.70 on S. W. Hopkins & Co., the financial agents of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company, therefor. Under this contract Houston was to hold the one hundred and ten bonds as collateral for the draft then given, and to deliver them to Littlefield when this draft was paid. Various other contracts were afterwards made between Littlefield and Houston which looked to a payment of the draft through the securities of the Florida Central Railroad Company, but no payment was in fact made before June 8, 1870, when Littlefield, as president of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company, was in negotiation with Harrison Reed, Governor of Florida, for an exchange of the bonds of the company for those of the State, under the provisions of the charter. In the progress of these negotiations it was found that the unpaid purchase money stood in the way of the exchange, and thereupon Littlefield, still acting as president of the company, addressed a letter to the Governor, who was also ex officio one of the Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund, a copy of which is as follows:

"Tallahassee, Fla., June 8, 1870.

"Hon. Harrison Reed, Gov. State of Florida.

Sir: I have the honor to state that in addition to the bonds of the Pen. & Geo. and Tallahassee Railroad Companies already deposited with the Board of Trustees Int. Imp. Fund, I have at the railroad office $41,350.

Bro't over		$41,350
And have secured	$110,000
" "	70,000
" "	15,000
		195,000
		$236,850
Total outstanding		$227,250

Respectfully, M. S. Littlefield,
Pres't J., P. & M. R. R. Co."

The $110,000 bonds here referred to were those held under the contracts between Littlefield and Houston. After this letter Littlefield delivered to the Governor a draft of which the following is a copy:

"$227,250. Tallahassee, June 8, 1870.

On demand, when in funds, pay to the order of His Excellency, Harrison Reed, Gov., two hundred and twenty-seven thousand two hundred and fifty dollars, value received, and charge the same to account of—

M. S. Littlefield,
Pres't J., P. & M. R. R. Co.

To Messrs. S. W. Hopkins & Co., 71 Broadway, N. Y."

This draft was never paid, but on its delivery the exchange of bonds of the State for those of the company was made by the Governor, acting for the State, and by Littlefield, acting for the railroad company. Out of this exchange, the suits of Florida v. Anderson and Railroad Companies v. Schutte arose, as well as much other litigation in the courts of the State and of the United States. [423]

After the delivery of the state bonds to Littlefield the draft of $163,020.70 held by Houston was paid by Hopkins & Co. out of the proceeds of the sale of these bonds, or upon their security, and on the 12th of April, 1871, an agreement was made between Houston and S. W. Hopkins & Co., the drawees, by which the 103 bonds in question were deposited with Mariano D. Papy, to be held by him and not delivered to any person unless directed to do so by M. S. Littlefield and S. W. Hopkins & Co. jointly, or unless directed to be delivered to Littlefield by Hopkins & Co., or to Hopkins & Co. by Littlefield. It was also further agreed that there should be no delivery to Littlefield until certain suits, which had been begun against Houston and which were particularly described, had been dismissed. On the 14th of June, 1872, Papy was directed by Hopkins to deliver the bonds to Littlefield on the dismissal of the suits. It was stipulated at the hearing of the present case below, that these suits had then been dismissed, but at what precise time does not appear.

On the 17th of July, 1872, Edward C. Anderson, Jr., and others, holders of some of the $472,000 of unpaid bonds, began a suit in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Florida, for themselves and all other holders of like bonds who might choose to become parties plaintiff, on the usual terms, against the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company and others, including Milton S. Littlefield and the Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund, to subject the railroad of the railroad company, defendant, to the payment of their bonds.

On the same day the 103 bonds in the hands of Papy were by him delivered, under an order of the Superior Court of Chatham County, Georgia, to "T. Mayhew Cunningham, cashier of the Central Railroad and Banking Company of Georgia, to be by him deposited in the vault of the said bank, and there to be safely kept subject to the further order of the court." Afterwards, in April, 1873, they were deposited by Cunningham with the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Florida, subject to the orders of that court in the Anderson suit, where they have ever since remained. [424]

On the 18th of June, 1875, the following order in reference to these bonds was entered in the Anderson suit:

"It is further ordered, that the said master shall give immediate notice through the public gazettes heretofore used by him for such purpose, to all parties who may claim an interest, direct or indirect, in the bonds which have been deposited with him by T. Mayhew Cunningham, trustee, that he holds said bonds in his custody subject to the final order of this court; that the said bonds are claimed by the Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund as having been purchased from Edward Houston by the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, under agreement with said trustees, for the purpose of cancellation; that upon petition filed with him, the said master, and ten days' notice to the said trustees, and at any time before the first day of the next term of the court, he will take testimony touching the claim or interest or title of any such petitioner upon or to the said bonds, or any part thereof; and that unless petition be filed in accordance with this order, all right, title and interest of any such person to or in the said bonds would be forever adjudged to be barred."

The notice required by this order was duly given, and on the 13th of July, 1876, the Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund filed their petition in the master's office, asking that the bonds be delivered to them, claiming title under the transaction between Littlefield and the Governor on the 8th of June, 1870, at the time of the exchange of bonds, and also under a decree of the Circuit Court of Duval County, Florida, on the 20th of August, 1875, in a suit brought by them on the 20th of March, 1872, against the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, Milton S. Littlefield and others, in which their right to the bonds under their claim was fully established as against all the parties to that suit. Calvin Littlefield was, however, not a party.

[425] On the 18th of March, 1872, John H. Miller began a suit against Milton S. Littlefield in the Circuit Court of Duval County, Florida, to recover a debt of $50,000. In this suit a judgment was rendered April 18, 1872, for $50,708, and on the 15th of November, 1872, Miller filed a creditors' bill in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Florida to subject the 108 bonds to the payment of the judgment as the property of Milton S. Littlefield. Under this bill a decree was rendered December 2, 1873, directing a sale of the bonds for that purpose. Afterwards, on the 5th of August, 1875, the bonds were sold to Robert J. Washington, whereupon he appeared in the Anderson suit and asked leave to defend his interest and title. Washington afterwards, on the 22d of December, 1881, assigned his interest in the bonds to Edward J. Reed.

On the 23d of May, 1877, J. Fred. Schutte and others, holders of state bonds given in exchange for the bonds of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, brought a suit in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Florida for the foreclosure of the statutory lien of the State as security for the bonds of the railroad company given in exchange for those of the State. In the bill it was claimed, among other things, that this lien of the State was superior to that of the Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund for the balance of the original purchase money, and as to the one hundred and three bonds the following averment was made:

"Complainants are informed and believe that said defendant, Milton S. Littlefield, made some agreement with said George W. Swepson to perform the obligations which the latter undertook with said trustees to do, viz.: to purchase said unpaid Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee Railroad Companies' bonds; that said Littlefield did in fact purchase of said Edward Houston one hundred and three of said bonds in performance of such contract, which bonds are now deposited in the registry of this court to the credit of a cause therein pending, in which Edward C. Anderson et al. are plaintiffs and the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company et al. are defendants; that said bonds are claimed by divers persons under some contract with said Littlefield, which persons had full knowledge that said bonds were paid for out of the money for which the bonds issued by Governor Reed to the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company were sold as before set forth; said one hundred and three bonds have never been in the actual possession of said Littlefield. Complainants are advised that they should be delivered to said Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund, and they should take such proceedings as may be necessary to procure the same to be done."

On the 31st of May, 1879, a decree was entered in the cause declaring that the Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund had a first lien on the property of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company "to secure the payment to said trustees of the sum of $463,175.27, and interest thereon since March 20, 1869, at the rate of 8 per cent per annum," and directing a sale for the benefit of the Schutte bondholders, subject to this prior lien. This prior lien was on account of the unpaid purchase money at the original sale, and the amount found due included the one hundred and three bonds; but there was no express adjudication as to the ownership of these bonds, or as to the right of the railroad company or of the Schutte bondholders to have them applied towards the satisfaction of the debt to the trustees. From this decree the Schutte bondholders did not appeal, but on appeals by some of the other parties to the suit the decree was affirmed by this court January 17, 1881 (Railroad Companies v. Schutte), and under its authority the road was afterwards sold.

On the 14th of February, 1882, Calvin Littlefield filed in the Anderson suit a petition to have the one hundred and three bonds delivered to him, and in his petition he stated that the Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund and Edward J. Reed also claimed an interest. As to his own title, he stated that on the 13th of July, 1871, Milton S. Littlefield assigned the bonds "in possession and control of M. D. Papy" to him as security for the payment of a debt of $50,000, and that on the 11th of January, 1872, this assignment was made absolute, "that the expenses of a foreclosure may be avoided."

The evidence shows that while the suit of Miller v. Littlefield, above referred to, was pending, and under which the bonds were sold to Washington, these title papers of Calvin Littlefield were sent by him to J. J. Finlay, an attorney at law at Jacksonville, Florida, for some purpose, and that under date of December 24, 1873, Finlay wrote a letter to Littlefield which contained the following:

"As General Littlefield had not yet been examined before the master in chancery in the matter of the creditor's bill, about which I wrote you in my last, the agreement above mentioned reached me in time to enable him to answer more fully and satisfactorily as to the ownership of the stocks and bonds mentioned in said agreement. He will answer that these securities belong to you and not to him. I am of the opinion that you are the bona fide owner of these securities under and by virtue of said agreement, and that any decree made in the case of Miller v. Littlefield is not binding on you, for the reason that you were not and are not a party to said suit. For the present, therefore, I do not see that it is necessary to take any step or incur the expense of any independent proceeding in the matter. As things progress, however, if it should become important for the protection of your interests to institute proceedings it can be done."

It does not appear that Calvin Littlefield gave any notice of this assignment to Papy while the bonds were in his hands, or to any one else claiming an adverse interest prior to the filing of his petition.

Edward J. Reed answered the petition, setting up his title as the assignee of Washington, and asking that the bonds be delivered to him. The Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund also answered, setting up their title and asking that the bonds be surrendered to them and credited on the decree in the Schutte Case "as of and for the amount due on said bonds, principal and interest, on the 12th of April, 1871."

The circuit court, on the 23d of June, 1882, decreed that the bonds be surrendered to the Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund, and applied in accordance with the prayer of their answer. From this decree Calvin Littlefield and Edward J. Reed took appeals, which have been docketed here as separate causes.

Upon the facts found, and about which there is substantially no dispute, we have no hesitation in affirming the action of the circuit court. Although the contracts under which the bonds passed from the hands of Houston to Papy, and from Papy to the circuit court in the Anderson suit, were in the name of Milton S. Littlefield, all payments for the bonds after June 8, 1870, were made from the funds of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company. What was done by Littlefield, at the time of the exchange of bonds with the Governor, had the effect of transferring the one hundred and three bonds to the Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund, subject to the lien of Houston as security for his draft of $163,020.70. When that draft was paid and the lien satisfied, the equitable title of the trustees was perfected, and thereafter the bonds were held by Papy and his successors in possession, for them. It follows that at the time Littlefield undertook to transfer the bonds to Calvin Littlefield, he had nothing to transfer. All his interest had long before been passed to the trustees. Neither does Calvin Littlefield occupy the position of a purchaser without notice of the prior claim of the trustees, because when he took his title the bonds were in the possession of Papy, who was in legal effect trustee for whom it might concern.

The same is true of the claim under which Edward J. Reed holds. When the bill was filed by Miller to subject the bonds to the payment of his judgment against Littlefield, they belonged to the trustees and not to Littlefield, and consequently nothing passed by the sale in that suit.

It is contended, however, that, as the trustees "insisted in the Schutte Case on a lien for the full amount of the unpaid purchase money which was decreed to them, and that the 103 bonds were outstanding," they "are estopped now from claiming that these 103 bonds should be delivered to them and cancelled, and a credit given therefor on such decree." This it is claimed amounted to an abandonment by the trustees of their title to the bonds under the arrangement between Littlefield and the Gov- [429] ernor, which inured to the benefit of Milton S. Littlefield or his assigns. To this we cannot agree. No issue was made in that suit as to the actual ownership of the bonds. The Trustees of the Improvement Fund did not claim that they were not entitled to the bonds, nor that the amount due on them should not be credited on the account for unpaid purchase money if their title should be established, but that until it was established no such credit should be given. Neither did the Schutte bondholders claim that the credit should be given at once, but that the necessary proceedings be had to establish the title and thus secure the application. When the decree was rendered the title had not been settled, and so no credit was then allowed, but nothing was done to prevent the trustees from making good their claim then pending in the Anderson suit, and, if successful, from giving the proper credit on the decree. That is what they are seeking to do here. Having presented their petition for a delivery of the bonds, they were met by the counter petitions of Calvin Littlefield and Reed, and thus the rights of all the parties have been presented for final adjudication. The question involved is not one of security but of title. The bonds are held by the court for whom it may concern, and the point to be settled is to whom shall they be delivered. Aside from the claim of abandonment put forth by Calvin Littlefield, they belong, as we have seen, to the Trustees of the Improvement Fund, as Milton S. Littlefield, the common source of title, first conveyed to them. It is conceded that the trustees have never actually reconveyed to Milton S. Littlefield; neither have they executed any formal conveyance or release to Calvin Littlefield. All they have done is to take a decree in their favor for what would be due them if their title should fail; and this, while a suit was pending to establish that title. Other parties were foreclosing a mortgage junior to theirs, and it became necessary to fix the amount of their prior lien. This the other parties were willing should be done before their disputed title was settled, and so to save themselves from loss in case of defeat they took a decree for what would be their due in that event. To that the junior mortgagees did not [430] object. Their effort had been to defeat the prior lien altogether. Having failed in that, they were willing to submit to a decree for the larger amount, leaving the disputed question as to the 103 bonds to be settled afterwards in the proceeding that had been begun for that purpose, or any other that might be instituted. This was not an abandonment by either party. The decree was silent as to these bonds, and the petition for their delivery to the trustees on file in the Anderson suit, where the bonds were, was allowed to remain. It is now being prosecuted by the trustees as a mode of obtaining satisfaction of the decree in their favor. If they succeed it may inure to the benefit of the purchasers at the sale under the Schutte decree, but of this Calvin Littlefield has no right to complain.

If he did not own the bonds it is a matter of no importance to him what disposition the trustees may make of them. All his rights depend alone on his ownership. If he is not the owner he is entirely out of all the litigation between the rest of the parties. Neither the railroad company nor the Schutte bondholders, who are alone interested in the amount for which the sale was made, are here to complain. The trustees alone can control the bonds. Having protected all who had the right to look to the original unpaid purchase money for the satisfaction of their bonds, they have performed their whole duty as trustees, so far as the bondholders are concerned.

The decree of the Circuit Court is affirmed.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

---

[519] NEW YORK LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

THOMAS C. FLETCHER, EXR. of CHINONDA S. ALFORD, Deceased.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 519-536.)

Life insurance—fraudulent acts of agent—when policy avoided—ratification by insured—retention of policy.

1. Where both the assured and the insurer are deceived by fraudulent acts of an agent in inserting in the application false answers, where the assured answered truthfully, if both parties acted bona fide, the policy should be canceled and the premiums returned.

2. An insurance company can limit the authority of its agents and thus bind all parties dealing with them with knowledge of the limitation. A party insured is presumed to have read his application and to be cognizant of the limitations therein expressed.

3. An instruction that the assured was bound by his application, if it was not avoided for fraud, and that it was so avoided, and that, therefore, the representatives of the assured could recover, was incorrect. If the application was avoided, the policy was also avoided.

4. A retention of the policy containing a copy of the application was an approval of the application by the assured.

[No. 184.]

Argued March 19, 1886. Decided March 29, 1886.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Missouri.

The case is stated by the court.

Messrs. Frederick N. Judson and John H. Overall, for plaintiff in error:

The limitation upon the authority of the soliciting agent having been brought home to the knowledge of the insured by the express terms of the application and policy, such limitation was binding, and the written application was thereby made the sole basis of the contract of insurance, and oral statements, by and to the soliciting agent and not reduced to writing, were expressly excluded from consideration.

Globe, etc. Ins. Co. v. Wolff, 95 U.S. 329 and Ins. Co. v. Norton, 96 U.S. 240 (Bk. 24, L.ed. 388, 691); Loehner v. Home M. Ins. Co. 17 Mo. 250; Richardson v. Maine Ins. Co. 46 Me. 394; Chase v. Hamilton Ins. Co. 20 N.Y. 52; May, Ins. §§ 137, 140, 141; Planters Ins. Co. v. Meyers, 55 Miss. 479; Ryan v. World Mut. Life Ins. Co. 41 Conn. 168; Ins. Co. v. Wilkinson, 13 Wall. 222 (80 U. S. bk. 20, L. ed. 617); Ins. Co. v. Mahone, 21 Wall. 152 (88 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 598); Hoffman v. Ins. Co. 92 U. S. 164 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 541); Ins. Co. v. McCain, 96 U. S. 86 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 654); Geib v. Ins. Co. 1 Dill. 449; Baubie v. Ætna Ins. Co. 2 Dill. 158); Flynn v. Equitable L. Ins. Co. 78 N.Y. 568; Ins. Co. v. Davis, 95 U. S. 428 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 454); Shattuck v. Mut. Life Ins. Co. 4 Cliff. 608.

As a corollary from the foregoing, written application thus being the sole basis of the contract of insurance, the insured cannot "avoid" the effect of materially false statements therein contained, and recover on the policy, by proof that such statements were inserted in the application before signature by him, through fraud on part of the soliciting agent.

Ryan v. World Mut. Life Ins. Co. 41 Conn. 168 Loehner v. Home M. Ins. Co. 17 Mo. 250; Pomery v. Rocky Mt. Ins. Co. 14 Ins. L. J. 708.

Irrespective of the foregoing, the acceptance and retention by Alford, of the policy with copy of the application thereto attached, for a period of nearly three years, his attention being specifically called to the importance of correcting errors or omissions thereon, was in law a waiver of an objection to the written application as the basis of the policy; and his representative is bound in an action on the policy by the answers contained in the said application.

Swan v. Watertown F. Ins. Co. 96 Pa. St. 43 Am. Ins. Co. v. Neiberger, 74 Mo. 173; Goddard v. Monitor M. F. Ins. Co. 108 Mass. 57; Richardson v. Maine Ins. Co. 46 Me. 394.

Even conceding all the foregoing propositions, and resting the case upon the court's theory of the law, there was no evidence warranting the finding that Alford did not knowingly sign the application. And on this ground alone the court should have directed a verdict for defendant.

Mr. George D. Reynolds, for defendant in error:

The main question presented by the case is, whether the clause in the application and in the policy, to the effect that no statements, representations or information made or given by or to the person soliciting or taking the application, or to any person, shall be binding on the Company, or in any manner affect its rights unless such statements, etc., be reduced to writing and presented to the officers of the Company at the home office, in the application referred to, is such a notice to the applicant or to the insured, of the limitation of the powers of the soliciting agent, as exempts the Company from responsibility and liability on the policy, when the solicitor is proved to have fraudulently inserted wrong answers and concealed the fact that he had done so from the applicant.

As to this, it is respectfully submitted that this clause is nothing more than an attempt to make the solicitor the agent of the applicant, instead of the agent of the insurer; and that it falls within the principle of the cases of Insurance Co. v. Wilkinson and Insurance Co. v. Mahone, supra; N. J. Mut. Life Ins. Co.

NOTE.—Life insurance: effect of agent's inserting false statements in application. See Union Mut. Ins. Co. v. Wilkinson, 80 U. S., bk. 20, 617, note.

v. Baker, 94 U. S. 610 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 268); Carpenter v. Washington Ins. Co. 2 Am. L. Cas. 919.

A man cannot adopt or profit by a contract without becoming responsible for the means through which it was procured, although they may have been used without his knowledge or contrary to his express commands. He may, no doubt, return what he has received within a reasonable time, and rescind the contract; but this cannot be done after a breach has occurred and when it is too late to restore the other party to his original position.

The authorities supporting the above propositions are numerous and are fully collated in the work referred to.

See also, Bliss, Life Ins. 2d ed. §§ 76–81, and 290–297.

It is to be remembered that Roeslein was the person who solicited the risk, who delivered the policy, who collected the first premium and the subsequent renewals. So far as Alford was concerned, Roeslein was the Company. Roeslein knew of the fraud he had perpetrated on Alford.

Alford did not write any of the answers; they were all written by the solicitor for the Company.

He delivered it to Alford for the Company, with full knowledge of facts upon which its validity could be disputed; "then to insist upon these facts as grounds of avoidance, is to attempt a fraud."

May, Insurance, 2d ed. ch. 22, § 497, and also § 498.

Roeslein continued, as agent of plaintiff in error, to receive the premiums. He knew of the false statements in the application but, notwithstanding that knowledge, went on receiving the premiums. His act estops his principal, the plaintiff in error.

Wing v. Harvey, 27 Eng. L. & E. 140; Ins. Co. v. McCain, 96 U. S. 84 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 653).

Notwithstanding the clause in the policy, he was the agent of the Company in soliciting the insurance and in collecting the premiums. These matters are within the scope of his agency, and the Company is bound by his acts.

Bliss, Life Ins. 2d ed. § 81; Commercial Ins. Co. v. Ives, 56 Ill. 402. Also cases supra; May, Insurance, 2d ed. § 142.

The Company selected him; it is the one to bear the consequences of his fraud.

Ætna Ins. Co. v. Maguire, 51 Ill. 342.

The second point made in the brief by counsel for plaintiff in error, that the written application was the sole basis of the contract, and that to avoid the effect of false statements in that, and recover notwithstanding their insertion, is to recover on a new and different contract, is a point always made by counsel for the insurance companies in cases of this kind.

A notable instance of that is the very able brief of counsel in the Wilkie v. Case, Bk. 20, L. ed. at pages 617 to 621

But this court has there settled the point against plaintiff in error.

See also Bliss, Life Ins. 2d ed. §§ 80, 81; Horwitz v. Eq. Mut. Ins. Co. 40 Mo. 557; Franklin v. Atlantic Fire Ins. Co. 42 Mo. 456; Combs v. Hannibal S. & I. Co. 43 Mo. 148; Hayward v. Nat. Ins. Co. 52 Mo. 181.

Mr. Justice Field delivered the opinion of the court:

The New York Life Insurance Company, on the 22d of December, 1877, issued at its home [519] office in the City of New York to Chinonda S. Alford a policy of insurance upon his life for the sum of $10,000. The consideration was $263.80 paid at the time, and the promise to pay a like sum on the 22d of December each year. The Company is a corporation under the laws of New York, but it also transacts business in Missouri through agents residing there; and of course, with reference to the business done in that State is subject to its laws. The assured was a resident of Missouri, and in December, 1877, he applied to an agent of the Company there for such a policy, and submitted to an [520] examination. He also made certain statements and representations respecting himself, his life and his past and present health, to which he appended a declaration, warranting their truthfulness and agreeing that they should be the basis of any contract between him and the Company, and that if they or any of them were in any respect untrue, the policy which might be issued thereon should be void, and that all moneys paid on account of the insurance should be forfeited; and further agreeing that, inasmuch as only the officers at the home office had authority to determine whether or not a policy should issue on any application, and as they acted only on the written statements and representations referred to, no statements or representations made or information given to the persons soliciting or taking the application for the policy, should be binding on the Company or in any manner affect its rights, unless they were reduced to writing and presented at the home office in the application. The statements and representations with this declaration accompanying the application and forming a part of it, were forwarded to the home office. The policy was thereupon issued and sent to its agent at St. Louis for delivery to the assured. It recited that it was issued in consideration and upon the faith of the statements and representations contained in his application; all of which had been warranted by him to be true, and also in consideration of the cash payment and the annual premiums to be paid. It stipulated for the payment of the amount of the insurance within sixty days after due notice and satisfactory proof of his death, subject to the conditions specified therein. To the policy was annexed a copy of the application, and upon it was indorsed the following notice in red type and conspicuously printed:

"For the information of the assured, and in order that any unintentional errors or omissions which hereafter may be found to exist may be corrected, an abstract of the application upon which this policy is based may be found in the third page within. If corrections are desired, when satisfactory to the Company, a certificate to that effect will be issued over the signature of the president and actuary."

The cash payment was made by the assured [521] on the receipt of the policy, and the subsequent annual premiums were regularly paid to the agents of the Company in Missouri until his death, which occurred September 24, 1880. The plaintiff was appointed his executor. Due no-

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] Dr. Brokaw for diabetes, and that the doctor's office was adjacent, and they could go there and find out all concerning, they wanted to know and the agent, not knowingly misrepresented in the questions, but the agents inserted in the blank line answers that he had no reason to suppose that the answers were taken down differently from those given; that after answering all their questions he was asked to sign his name to the paper to identify him as the party for whose benefit the policy was to be issued; and for that purpose he signed the paper twice, without reading it or the written answers; that the agents did not read to him any part of the application except the questions, and did not read the clause set forth in the defendant's answer, nor call attention to the fact that his signatures were intended as an acceptance or assent to that clause; that when the policy was delivered to him he neither read it nor the copy of the application attached to it; that the agent who delivered it informed him that it was all right, and he was insured, and he gave no further attention to the matter; that the annual premiums, as they fell due, were paid to said agent, who received them with full knowledge of all the facts; and that, therefore, the Company was estopped from pretending that any of the answers as written rendered the policy void.

The Company demurred to this reply, as constituting in law no cause of action and no reply to the facts set forth in the answer; but the demurrer was overruled.

On the trial it was proved by the Company that the assured was a resident of St. Louis; and that Dr. Brokaw had been his regular physician for ten years, and had treated him some years before his death for diabetes, of which disease he died.

It was also proved that on the day he made application to the defendant he also applied to the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company, of Pennsylvania, for insurance on his life, and stated that he had had diabetes in 1875, and that Dr. Brokaw was his physician. That Company refused to issue a life policy, but granted a fifteen year endowment policy at a largely increased premium.

It was also proved that diabetes is commonly known as a disease of the kidneys, though primarily a disease of nutrition and not necessarily affecting their structure in its early stages; that it is a very serious disease and of doubtful curability; that the policy was issued solely upon the written application; and that no other application, statement or representation was received from the applicant.

The law of Missouri provides that "No misrepresentation made in obtaining or securing a policy of insurance on the life or lives of any person or persons shall be deemed material or render the policy void, unless the matter misrepresented shall have actually contributed to the contingency or event on which the policy is to become due and payable, and whether it so contributed in any case shall be a question for the jury" (R. S. Mo. § 596); and that in suits brought upon life policies "No defense based upon misrepresentation in obtaining or securing the same shall be valid unless the defendant shall, at or before the trial, deposit in court, for the benefit of the plaintiffs, the premiums received on such policies." Id. § 597.

[522]

Under this last section the defendant tendered in court to the plaintiff $888.26, the premiums received, with interest to the date of trial; but the plaintiff declined to receive the amount in full payment.

On the part of the plaintiff a witness was allowed, against the objection of the defendant, to testify to statements made by the assured and the agent at the time of the application, tending to establish some of the matters alleged in reply to the answer. He could not give the specific words used, but he remembered that in one part of the conversation Alford stood up, at the time he was asked as to his having had kidney disease, and pointed through the window and said: 'My medical examiner has an office across the way; you can go there and find out from him. I have been afflicted in the kidneys, but he says I am well, and I feel well now." He also testified that at one time he heard the assured say to the agent: "Your Company ought not to insure me; you know I have been afflicted with kidney disease;" and that the agent replied: "Just give me your application and I will see if I can get it through."

The witness was also permitted to testify that he did not think the paper was read over to the assured. He did not hear it read, nor did he remember the questions asked, except the specific one as to the kidneys; and he remembered that because the assured stood up and pointed across the street.

There was no evidence that the application was not read by the assured before he signed it, or that there was any imposition practised upon him, or that after receiving the policy he applied to correct his answers, which, as written down, are conceded to be false.

Upon the conclusion of the testimony, the defendant requested the court to charge the jury, among other things, substantially as follows:

1. That it is competent for any party, corporation or individual employing an agent in the negotiation of a contract, whether of insur-
[525] ance or otherwise, to limit his powers, provided the limitation is brought home to the knowledge of the other contracting party, otherwise the principal will be bound by the apparent as well as the actual powers of the agent; and as, in this case, the limitation was made a part of the contract between the parties, it was binding upon them.

2. That the stipulation between the parties, limiting the powers of the soliciting agent and providing that the contract should be based upon the written application, was binding upon the parties, and it was, therefore, immaterial what may have been said by or to the agent at the time of making the application, which was not reduced to writing and presented to the officers of the Company at the home office in New York.

3. That whether the statements and answers contained in the application of the assured were made by him or not, yet when he afterwards received the policy, with a copy of the application attached and a memorandum indorsed thereon, calling his attention to the copy thus attached, with a request that any errors in the application be reported to the Company for correction, it was his duty to report any answers incorrectly written down and thus enable the Company to correct them; and that by his failure to do so he must be presumed to have accepted the policy upon the faith of the answers, and to have acquiesced and agreed that it should remain as the basis of the contract of insurance. But the court refused to give any of these instructions, and the defendant excepted. It recognized, however, in its charge, the competency of the Company to limit the powers of the agent, and the binding force of the limitation if brought home to the other contracting party; and instructed the jury that there was such limitation in the present case; that the Company was not bound by any representations to or by the assured, unless they were put in writing and submitted to the Company; that, therefore, what was contained in the application must be regarded as constituting the basis of the contract, unless it could be avoided for fraud; that if the jury found that at the time of making the application he told the agent that he had had diabetes and referred him to his physician concerning it, and that [526] such agent committed a fraud upon the assured by inserting false answers in the application and by suppressing the answers actually given, and by concealing from the assured what he had written in the application, and thereby induced him to sign it without knowing what it contained, then the plaintiff was not estopped to recover. The court also charged that if the assured ascertained before the contract was consummated, that is, before the policy was delivered to him and the first premium paid, that the agent had committed a fraud upon him and upon the Company, it was his duty to stop and decline to go any further with the transaction; but if he did not discover this before the policy was delivered and the first premium paid, he was not called upon afterwards to take any steps for the cancellation of the contract. To this the defendant excepted. The plaintiff obtained a verdict for the full amount of the insurance money with interest, upon which judgment was rendered.

It is conceded that the statements and repre-
[528] sentations contained in the answers, as written, of the assured to the questions propounded to him in his application, respecting his past and present health, were material to the risk to be assumed by the Company, and that the insurance was made upon the faith of them and upon his agreement accompanying them, that if they were false in any respect, the policy to be issued upon them should be void. It is sought to meet and overcome the force of this conceded fact by proof that he never made the statements and representations to which his name is signed; that he truthfully answered those questions; that false answers written by an agent of the Company were inserted in place of those actually given, and were forwarded with the application to the home office; and it is contended that such proof being made, the plaintiff is not estopped from recovering. But on the assumption that the fact as to the answers was as stated, and that no further obligation rested upon the assured in connection with the policy, it is not easy to perceive how the Company can be precluded from setting [529] up their falsity, or how any rights upon the policy ever accrued to him. It is, of course, not necessary to assume that the agent had no authority from the Company to falsify the answers, or that the assured could acquire no right by virtue of his falsified answers. Both he and the Company were deceived by the fraudulent contract of the agent. The assured was placed in the position of making false representations in order to secure a valuable contract, which, upon a truthful report of his condition, could not have been obtained. By them the Company was imposed upon and induced to enter into the contract. In such a case, assuming that both parties acted in good faith, justice would require that the contract be canceled and the premiums returned. As the present action is not for such a cancellation, the only recovery which the plaintiff could properly have upon the facts he asserts, taken in connection with the limitation upon the powers of the agent, is for the amount of the premiums paid, and to that only would he be entitled by virtue of the statute of Missouri.

But the case as presented by the record is by no means as favorable to him as we have assumed. It was his duty to read the application he signed. He knew that upon it the policy would be issued, if issued at all. It would introduce great uncertainty in all business transactions, if a party making written proposals for a contract, with representations to induce its execution, should be allowed to show, after it had been obtained, that he did not know the contents of his proposals, and to enforce it, notwithstanding their falsity as to matters essential to its obligation and validity. Contracts could not be made or business fairly conducted, if such a rule should prevail; and there is no reason why it should be applied merely to contracts of insurance. There is nothing in their nature which distinguishes them in this particular from others. But here the right is asserted to prove not only that the assured did not make the statements contained in his answers, but that he never read the application, and to recover upon a contract obtained by representations admitted to be false, just as though they were true. If he had read even the printed [530] lines of his application, he would have seen that it stipulated that the rights of the Company could in no respect be affected by his verbal statements or by those of its agents, unless the same were reduced to writing and forwarded with his application to the home office. The Company, like any other principal, could limit the authority of its agents, and thus bind all parties dealing with them with knowledge of the limitation. It must be presumed that he read the application, and was cognizant of the limitations therein expressed.

In Globe, etc. Ins. Co. v. Wolff, 95 U. S. 329 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 388], the policy declared that the agents of the company were not authorized to waive forfeitures, and this court held that effect must be given to the provision, except so far as the subsequent acts of the company permitted it to be disregarded.

In Ins. Co. v. Norton, 96 U. S. 240 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 691], the policy contained an express declaration that the agents of the company were not authorized to make, alter or abrogate contracts or waive forfeitures; and this court held that the company could have insisted upon those terms had it so chosen.

In Ledwar v. Home Mutual Ins. Co. 17 Mo. 256, the Supreme Court of Missouri passed upon this point. The charter of that company provided that if the assured failed to state in his application, which was made a part of the policy, any incumbrance that existed on the insured premises, his policy should be void. There was also indorsed on the policy a memorandum that the company would not be bound by any statement of the agent unless contained in the application. The answer to the action on the policy set up that the application did not truly state the incumbrances. A small incumbrance upon the premises was not stated, and on the trial evidence was offered that its existence was made known to the agent of the company at the time of the application, but that he refused to write it down, saying that the amount was too trifling. The evidence was excluded, and the supreme court sustained the ruling, holding that the objection that the incumbrance was not stated could not be obviated in that way. "Independently of the statute of the State," said the court, "which requires the incumbrance to be expressed in the policy at the peril [5 of its being void, there was a memorandum indorsed on it which made known that the company would be bound by no statement made by the agent not contained in the application. The facts being as represented, they could not give the plaintiff a right of action on the policy in the teeth of the statute and against the terms of the contract. If the conduct of the agent was such as is alleged, he was guilty of a gross fraud, as is shown by his setting up this defense, which would avoid the policy and give a right of action for the recovery of the premium, but could not for the reason given, entitle the plaintiff to an action on the policy."

The present case is very different from Ins. Co. v. Wilkinson, 13 Wall. 222 [80 U. S. bk. 20, L. ed. 617], and from Ins. Co. v. Mahone, 21 Wall. 152 [88 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 593]. In neither of these cases was any limitation upon the power of the agent brought to the notice of the assured. Reference was made to the interested and officious zeal of insurance agents to procure contracts, and to the fact that parties who were induced to take out policies rarely knew anything concerning the company or its officers, but relied upon the agent who had persuaded them to effect insurance, "as the full and complete representative of the company in all that is said or done in making the contract," and the court held that the powers of the agent are prima facie coextensive with the business intrusted to his care, and would not be narrowed by limitations not communicated to the person with whom he dealt. Where such agents, not limited in their authority, undertake to prepare applications and take down answers, they will be deemed as acting for the companies. In such cases it may well be held that the description of the risk, although nominally proceeding from the assured, should be regarded as the act of the company. Nothing in these views has any bearing upon the present case. Here the power of the agent was limited, and notice of such limitation given by being embodied in the application, which the assured was required to make and sign, and which, as we have stated, he must be presumed to have read. He is, therefore, bound by its statements.

The case of Ryan v. World Mutual Life Ins. Co. is in some respects similar to the one before us. There a policy obtained on the life of Patrick Ryan for the benefit of his wife declared that it was issued and accepted on the condition and agreement that the statements and declarations made in the application therefor, and on the faith of which it was issued, were in all respects true. The application was a part of the policy. It appeared that when the application was made, he was asked whether he had had any of the following diseases: bronchitis, consumption, spitting of blood, or any serious disease; and the answer, as written, was that he had had "none of them." To the inquiry, whether, during the previous seven years, he had had any severe sickness or disease, or had employed or consulted any physician, the answer as written was "no." The authority of the agent was limited to receiving the application, forwarding it to the home office, receiving, countersigning and delivering the policy, and collecting the premiums. The insured having died, action upon the policy was brought by his widow. On the trial she offered to prove, not that the answers were true, but that different answers were in fact given, both by her and him; and that the answers were wrongly written by the local agent of the company without the knowledge or consent of herself or her husband. The application was signed without being read. It was held that the company was not bound by the policy; that the power of the agent would not be extended to an act done by him in fraud of the company and for the benefit of the insured, especially where it was in the power of the assured, by reasonable diligence, to defeat the fraudulent intent; that the signing of the application without reading it or hearing it read, was inexcusable negligence; and that a party is bound to know what he signs. After observing that the courts of the State had construed the powers of an insurance agent liberally, and held that, in writing the application and explaining interrogatories and the meaning of the terms used, he was to be regarded as the agent of the company, and, referring to the case of Ins. Co. v. Wilkinson, [supra] the court said: "But it cannot be supposed that these defendants intended to clothe this agent with authority to perpetrate a fraud upon themselves. That he deliberately intended to defraud them is manifest. He well knew that if correct answers were given no policy would issue. Prompted by some motive he sought to obtain a policy by means of false answers. His duty required him not only to write the answers truly as given by the applicant, but also to communicate to his principal any other fact material to the risk which might come to his knowledge from any other source. His conduct in this case was a gross violation of duty, in fraud of his principal, and in the interest of the other party. To hold the principal responsible for his acts, and assist in the consummation of the fraud, would be monstrous injustice. When an agent is apparently acting for his principal, but is really acting for himself or third persons and against his principal, there is no agency in respect to that transaction, at least as between the agent himself, or the person for whom he is really acting, and the principal. * * * The fraud could not be perpetrated by the agent alone. The aid of the plaintiff or the insured, either as an accomplice or as an instrument, was essential. If she was an accomplice, then she participated in the fraud, and the case falls within the principle of Lewis v. Phœnix Mutual Life Ins. Co. 39 Conn. 100. If she was an instrument she was so because of her own negligence, and that is equally a bar to her right to recover. She says that she and her husband signed the application without reading it and without its being read to them. That of itself was inexcusable negligence. The application contained her agreements and representations in an important contract. When she signed it she was bound to know what she signed. The law requires that the insured shall not only, in good faith, answer all the interrogatories correctly, but shall use reasonable diligence to see that the answers are correctly written. It is for his interest to do so, and the insurer has the right to presume that he will do it. He has it in his power to prevent this species of fraud and the insurer has not." 41 Conn. 168-171, 172. With these views we fully agree.

The instruction given to the jury in the case before us is, in effect, that the assured was bound by his application if it was not avoided for fraud; and that it was so avoided by reason of the false statements contained in it; and that, therefore, the plaintiff, as his representative, could recover. But if the application was avoided, it would seem to be a necessary consequence that the policy itself was also avoided, and his right limited to recovering the premiums paid. But such was not the conclusion of the court. It directed the jury that if the application was avoided for fraud, he could recover. It does not seem to have occurred to the court that had the answers been truthfully reported, and the fact of the assured having had diabetes within a recent period been thus disclosed, the insurance would in all probability have been refused. If the policy can stand with the application avoided, it must stand upon parol statements not communicated to the Company. This, of course, cannot be seriously maintained in the face of its notice that only statements in writing forwarded to its officers would be considered. A curious result is the outcome of the instruction. If the agents committed no fraud the plaintiff cannot recover, for the answers reported are not true; but if they did commit the imputed fraud he may recover, although, upon the answers actually given, if truly reported, no policy would have issued. Such anomalous conclusions cannot be maintained.

[534]

There is another view of this case equally fatal to a recovery; assuming that the answers of the assured were falsified, as alleged, the fact would be at once disclosed by the copy of the application, annexed to the policy, to which his attention was called. He would have discovered by inspection that a fraud had been perpetrated not only upon himself but upon the Company, and it would have been his duty to make the fact known to the Company. He could not hold the policy without approving the action of the agents and thus becoming a participant in the fraud committed. The re-

[illegible]

[illegible] The court held, [illegible] by accepting the policy, was [illegible] and that he ratified the [illegible]

[illegible] the subject further. [illegible] the court below erred, both in [illegible] asked and in its [illegible] the particulars mentioned. [illegible] therefore be reversed, and the [illegible] for a new trial.

[illegible]

[illegible] Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

[illegible] Assignee in Bankruptcy of [illegible], Appt.,

v.

[illegible] AND WILLIAM HARMON.

([illegible])

[illegible] contract—partnership—assignment—sections [illegible] and [illegible] R. S.—estoppel—evidence—contribution to expenses of litigation.

1. Where three persons form a partnership and agree to bear the losses and share the profits in proportion to their contribution to the capital and two of the partners furnish all the capital and do all the work, they are entitled to be repaid their advances out of the assets before payment of the individual creditors of the other partner.

2. Where a person, in anticipation of obtaining a government contract, forms a partnership with two other parties for the execution of the contract, such partnership contract was not, under the circumstances, a violation of sections 3677 and 3737, R. S.

3. When two or three partners are entitled, under the articles of partnership, to a sum due from the government on a contract with the third partner, an agreement executed by the third partner to pay the sum due to each out of moneys he might thereafter receive from the government does not deprive the other partners of their right to the funds paid by the government as against the assignee in bankruptcy of such third partner.

4. The right of action for the recovery by two of three partners, as assets of the firm, of moneys collected on a contract (the subject of the partnership between the third partner and the government, does not accrue until the money has been actually received by the defendant. The bankruptcy and death of the third partner and the substitution of his assignee as defendant in no respect affects this question.

5. The exceptions in section 858, R. S., to the provisions that parties can testify in federal courts in their own behalf, cannot be extended by the court so as to exclude parties from testifying in their own behalf against assignees in bankruptcy.

6. Where, in an action by one of three partners against the government, the other two partners testify in behalf of the plaintiff that they have no interest in the claim except as shown by a certain memorandum, such witnesses are not estopped thereby from showing (in an action by them against the assignee of the claimant) that they had an interest.

7. Where one brings adversary proceedings to take possession of trust property from those entitled to it, in order that he may distribute it to those who claim adversely, and fails in his purpose, he has no right to reimbursement of his expenses out of the trust fund, or contribution from those whose property he sought to misappropriate.

[No. 170.]

Argued March 17, 18, 1886. Decided March 29, 1886.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of Iowa.

Statement by Mr. Justice Woods:

The appellees were the plaintiffs in the circuit court. The record showed the following facts: On August 19, 1876, Major Card, a quartermaster in the Army of the United States, advertised for bids for furnishing 6,000 cords of wood and 800 tons of hay at the Tongue River Military Station, in Montana Territory. Campbell K. Peck, whose assignee in bankruptcy is the appellant, put in a bid, and, believing that the contract would be awarded to him, on August 19, 1876, entered into articles of copartnership with the plaintiffs, McLean and Harmon, for the purpose of carrying out the contract with the United States which he expected to make. These articles provided that Peck should furnish one half the capital necessary to carry on the partnership business, and McLean and Harmon each one fourth, and that the profits and losses of the partnership should be divided in like proportions. Harmon agreed to take charge of the office of this partnership, which was to be at Fort Lincoln, and superintend the business at that place, and McLean agreed to go to the place of delivery on the Yellowstone, and superintend the business there, but neither was to make any charges for his services. The articles of partnership further provided that when the contract with the government was completed, a settlement of profits and losses should be made "on the basis of the above terms of partnership;" and, "if a dissolution is decided on, first, all debts shall be paid, and then all profits divided in the proportions heretofore mentioned." After the signing of these partnership articles the bid of Peck was accepted, and on August 25 the contract between him and the United States was signed and delivered.

The partners did not deliver the hay required by the contract, because, as they claimed, they were prevented from so doing by the officers of the Army of the United States, but did cut and deliver the wood. McLean and Harmon did all the work that was done, and advanced all the money that was expended in performing the contract, except about $100, which was furnished by Peck.

The wood delivered under the contract amounted in value at the contract price to $51,900, but the United States refused to pay that sum, claiming damages for the failure to deliver the hay; but consented to pay and did pay, $10,919.37. McLean and Harmon received $10,000 of this sum, and Peck $919.37, which was over $800 more than he advanced for the performance of the contract. The parties interested being dissatisfied with the action of the government in refusing payment in full for the wood delivered, Peck, who was the only person to whom the government was bound, filed, on November 7, 1877, his petition in the court of claims against the United States, demanding $55,003.63 damages for the breach of the contract. The United States traversed the petition, and upon final hearing in the court of claims, judgment was rendered for Peck, the claimant, for $43,113.63. From this judgment both parties appealed to this court, which, in February, 1880, affirmed the judgment of the court of claims and allowed the claimant, in addition to the amount already awarded him, the further sum of $2,660, making the entire judgment in favor of the claimant $45,773.63.

While the case was pending in the court of claims, to wit: on August 31, 1878, Peck was, on his own petition adjudicated a bankrupt in the District Court of the United States for the District of Iowa, and Hobbs, the appellant in the present case, was appointed assignee. While [570] the case was pending in this court Peck, on December 2, 1879, died, and his widow, Helen A. Peck, was afterwards appointed his administratrix, and in January, 1880, was substituted in the place of her intestate as the plaintiff in the cause. The case still being in this court, and after Mrs. Peck had, as administratrix, been made party plaintiff, Hobbs, as assignee, moved the court to be substituted as plaintiff in her stead, which motion was denied. The cause having been remanded to the court of claims, Hobbs, the assignee in bankruptcy, moved that court to substitute him as plaintiff in place of the administratrix, which motion was, on May 10, 1880, granted, and the money recovered from the United States was, after deducting about $10,000 attorney's fees, paid over to Hobbs, the assignee.

McLean and Harmon, fearing that Hobbs would distribute the fund thus recovered among the general creditors of Peck, and believing that the fund belonged to them, filed in the Circuit Court for the Southern District of Iowa the bill in the present case, to which they made Hobbs, as assignee in bankruptcy of Peck, and John B. Sanborn and Charles King, lately partners as Sanborn & King, and Edward F. Brownell, defendants, and in which they set out in detail the facts above recited, set up their claim to the fund as surviving partners, and prayed that the balance found due them from the partnership on an accounting might be paid them out of the fund, so far as it should be sufficient to pay the same.

The defendant Hobbs, as assignee, answered the bill, and the plaintiffs filed the general replication. Upon final hearing upon pleadings and proofs the circuit court adjudged and decreed as follows: after reciting the making of the partnership between the plaintiffs and Peck and the performance by the partnership of the contract made by Peck with the United States, it found that after charging to the partners all the moneys received by them respectively, it appeared that Peck had received more money than he had paid out in performing the contract, and that the plaintiffs had expended for the same purpose $41,032.31, more than they had received; that Hobbs, the assignee, had collected and received on the judgment against the United States recovered by Peck's administratrix $35,773.63; and it was, therefore, adjudged and decreed that said sum was the money and [571] property of the plaintiffs, and that they recover it of the defendant Hobbs, who was ordered to pay it to the plaintiffs, with interest on the investment thereof, and that the plaintiffs also recover of Hobbs, as assignee, their costs and disbursements in the suit, to be paid by him out of any money in his hands as assignee. The appeal of Hobbs, as assignee, brings this decree under review.

Messrs. James Hagerman, Frank Hagerman and John H. Craig, for appellant:

The alleged partnership agreement and assignments are illegal, null and void, as to passing any interest in Peck's contract or claim as between assignor and assignee; and also as between the United States and assignee:

Secs. 3477, 3737, R. S.; Burke v. Child, 21 Wall. 441 (88 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 623); U. S. v. Gillis, 95 U. S. 407, and Spofford v. Kirk, 97 U. S. 484 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 503, 1032); Wanlass v. U. S. 6 Ct. of Cl. 123; St. Paul, etc. R. R. Co. v. U. S. and Flint & Pere Marquette R. R. Co. v. U. S. 112 U. S. 733, 737 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 861, 862); Billings v. O'Brien, 45 How. Pr. 399; Wack v. Bosworth, 61 Wis. 78; Mellison v. Allen, 30 Kan. 382.

The sworn testimony of complainants in the court of claims, that they had no interest in Peck's contract, and the verification of their attorney to their petition in that case, were solemn admissions of record which, in the absence of testimony or pleading that they were made through mistake or under misapprehension, become conclusive.

2 Whart. Ev. § 1110; 1 Greenl. Ev. § 204–206; Mulligan v. Illinois Cent. R. R. Co. 36 Iowa, 181; Marsh v. Mitchell, 26 N. J. Eq. 497; Gridley v. Conner, 4 La. Ann. 416; Denton v. Erwin, 5 La. Ann. 18; Edson v. Pavet, 11 La. Ann. 710.

Such testimony and such verification operate as an estoppel.

1 Greenl. Ev. § 204; R. S. §§ 1079, 1072, 3737; Brenson v. Worth, 17 Wall. 82 (84 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 566); Stone v. U. S. 19 Wall. 13 (86 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 144); Stagg v. Ins. Co. 10 Wall. 569 (77 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 1068); U. S. v. Bank of Metropolis, 15 Pet. 377 (40 U. S. bk. 10, L. ed. 774); Bank of Pittsburg v. Neal, 22 How. 96 (63 U. S. bk. 16, L. ed. 326).

As impeaching testimony, the evidence of complainants in the court of claims destroys their credibility as witnesses.

1 Greenl. Ev. § 462; 1 Whart. Ev. § 412; 2 Id. § 1120; The Santissima Trinidad, 7 Wheat. 286 (20 U. S. bk. 5, L. ed. 454); Starkie, Ev. 873; Stoffer v. State, 15 Ohio St. 47; Paulette v. Brown, 40 Mo. 52; State v. Mix, 15 Mo. 153; Hargraves v. Miller, 16 Ohio, 338; Burbaker v. Taylor, 76 Pa. St. 83.

Under general principles of law the oaths of complainants without corroboration are insufficient to prove any transaction with Peck, who is dead.

1 Whart. Ev. § 466.

Complainants were incompetent witnesses under section 858 R. S. Assignees in bankruptcy are within the intent of this statute as if fully written therein.

Crocker v. National Bank, 4 Dill. 359; Tiffany v. Boatman's Sav. Inst., and Tiffany v. National Bank, 18 Wall. 375, 409 (85 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 868, 862); Hogan v. Page, 2 Wall. 605 (69 U. S. bk. 17, L. ed. 854); Carpenter v. Rannels, 19 Wall. 138 (86 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 77); Bishop, Stat. Crimes, 2d ed. §§ 189, 190, 190a, 190b, 212, 213, 243, 1102, 1105; 1 Bl. Com. 87–91; Bacon, Abr. Stat. 1; 1 Swift, Digest pp. 11–13; Potter's Dwarris, Stat. pp. 47, 51, 67, 121, 146, 174, 264; Sedgwick, Stat. & Const. Law, pp. 225, 246; Cooley, Const. Lim. 188; Decatur Bank v. St. Louis Bank, 21 Wall. 294 (88 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 560); Pensacola Tel. Co. v. W. U. Tel. Co. 96 U. S. 1 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 708).

The assignee is entitled in any event to have compensation from the fund, for services, expenses and attorneys' fees.

Trustees v. Greenough, 105 U. S. 527 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 1157); Central R. R. etc. Co. v. Pettus, 113 U. S. 116 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 915).

Mesrs. Charles E. Flandrau and Walter H. Sanborn, for respondents:

The court will see that the claim made by Peck against the United States was based upon a violation by the United States of its contract with him, and that he alone was entitled to urge said claim. But the court will also see that this claim grew out of the money advanced by the complainants in this suit, and out of their labor performed to carry out said contract of Peck; that such advances of labor and money made them in equity the owners of such claim; that Peck never owned such claim except subject to the equities of these complainants, and that we claim our interest in the judgment of the court of claims and supreme court, not by virtue of any assignment either in law or fact, but solely on the ground of such equities.

"Indeed, there is in general no difficulty in equity, in establishing a lien, not only on real estate but on personal property, or on money in the hands of a third person, whenever that is a matter of agreement, at least as against the party himself and third persons who are volunteers or have notice; for it is a general principle in equity that as against the party himself and any claiming under him, voluntarily or with notice, such an agreement raises a trust.

2 Story, Eq. Jur. §§ 1131, 1228, 1249; 2 Story, C. C. 566; Warmstry v. Lady Tanfield, 1 Ch. Rep. 29; 3 Smith, L. Cas. pp. 279, 280, 343; 1 Ves. 331; Whitfield v. Fausset, and Wright v. Wright, 1 Ves. 387, 408; Allston v. Bank, 2 Hill Ch. (S. C.) 235; Crocker v. Whitney, 10 Mass. 316; Bigelow v. Wilson, 1 Pick. 485; Gardner v. Hoeg, 18 Pick. 168; Mitchell v. Winslow, 2 Story 630.

There is no case in which a court of equity will not enforce equities growing out of advances made in good faith; the only exception is where fraud has entered into the transaction. This case is free from even the suspicion of fraud.

2 Story, C. C. 564.

It will probably be contended that as Peck could not make a valid assignment of any part of this claim, no equities can arise or grow out of it. It will be seen at a glance that although such a position might have some force as to equities arising after the creation of the claim, it can have none as to those existing prior to its inception.

U. S. v. Gillis, 95 U. S. 407, and Spofford v. Kirk, 97 U. S. 484 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 503, 1032); Goodman v. Niblack, 102 U. S. 556 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 229); Erwin v. U. S. 97 U. S. 392 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 1065).

These cases put an end to all controversy that such claims do pass by operation of law, by will, in bankruptcy; and that all equities arising by advances of the money out of which the claim arose create a valid lien upon it, as between the original parties and all claiming under them as volunteers or with notice.

It is a perfectly well settled principle that the assignee in bankruptcy takes property and rights in the same plight and condition, and with all the equities attached thereto, in the same manner as the bankrupt himself held them.

2 Story, C. C. 564. Brown's Assignee v. Heathcote, 1 Atk. 160; 2 Vern. 564; 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 1411.

Mr. Justice Woods delivered the opinion of the court:

The findings of fact made by the circuit court in its final decree are, in our opinion, amply sustained by the evidence. These findings, and other facts not disputed, establish prima facie the justice and equity of the decree.

Upon the facts of the case, the decree of the court is simply to this effect: that where three persons form a partnership and agree to bear the losses and share the profits of the partnership venture in proportion to their contributions to its capital, and two of the partners furnish all the money and do all the work, they are entitled to be repaid their advances out of its assets before payment of the individual creditors of the partner who paid nothing and did nothing to promote the partnership business. The decree may stand on even stronger grounds. There is no evidence in the record to show that there were any unpaid debts outstanding against the partnership of which Peck and the plaintiffs were the members. The decree of the court is based on the assumption that there were no such debts. The money, therefore, collected on the judgment recovered by Peck's administratrix was assets of the partnership, to which the partners were entitled in proportion to the amount paid in by them, and the record clearly shows that the money so collected was the only assets of the partnership. As McLean and Harmon had paid in all the money, they were entitled to all the money collected on the judgment, not by reason of any right to priority of payment, nor by reason of any lien, but because it was their property, and no other person had any claim to it. The plaintiffs' right to the fund was not at all impaired by the bankruptcy or death of Peck. Their claim was just as strong as if Peck were still living and had received and collected the judgment in his own name, and the money had been taken from his hands and impounded in the registry of the court. The decree might, therefore, stand on the ground which it in fact asserts: that the money in controversy was the absolute property of the plaintiffs.

The defendant, however, assails the decree on several grounds, which we shall proceed to notice.

It was shown by the evidence that on July 20, 1877, Peck executed and delivered to Harmon a paper, of which the following is a copy:

"Fort Abraham Lincoln, July 20, 1877.

For value received, I promise to pay to William Harmon, or order, twenty-three thousand dollars, out of moneys I may hereafter receive on account of my claim against the United States Government, for contract for wood, at Tongue River cantonment, on the Yellowstone River. C. K. Peck."

On the same day he executed and delivered to McLean a paper, similar in terms, for the payment to him of $17,000 out of the same fund. The appellant insists that the contract of partnership between Peck and the plaintiffs, and the promises of Peck above mentioned, were forbidden by the Statutes of the United States, and were, therefore, illegal and void, and gave no rights to the plaintiffs to the fund in controversy. The statutes relied on are sections 3477 and 3737 of the Revised Statutes, which read as follows:

"Sec. 3477. All transfers and assignments made of any claim upon the United States, or of any part or share thereof, or interest therein, whether absolute or conditional, and whatever may be the consideration therefor, and all powers of attorney, orders, or other authorities for receiving payment of any such claim, or of any part or share thereof, shall be absolutely null and void, unless they are freely made and executed in the presence of at least two attesting witnesses, after the allowance of such a claim, the ascertainment of the amount due, and the issuing of a warrant for the payment thereof."

"Sec. 3737. No contract or order, or any interest therein, shall be transferred by the party to whom such contract or order is given to any other party, and any such transfer shall cause the annulment of the contract or order transferred, so far as the United States are concerned. All rights of action, however, for any breach of such contract by the contracting parties, are reserved to the United States." [575]

We shall first consider these two sections in their bearing upon the contract of partnership between Peck and the plaintiffs. It is obvious that section 3477, which forbids assignments of claims against the United States or any interest therein, unless under the circumstances therein stated, can have no reference to such a contract as the partnership articles between Peck and the plaintiffs. When those articles were signed there was no claim against the United States to be transferred. Peck had at that time no contract even, with the United States, and there was no certainty that he would have one. What is a claim against the United States is well understood. It is a right to demand money from the United States. Peck acquired no claim in any sense until after he had made and performed wholly or in part his contract with the United States. Section 3477, it is clear, only refers to claims against the United States which can be presented by the claimant to some department or officer of the United States for payment, or may be prosecuted in the court of claims. The section simply forbids the assignment of such claims before their allowance, the ascertainment of the amount due thereon, and the issue of a warrant for their payment. When the contract of partnership was made Peck had no claim which he could present for payment or on which he could have brought suit. He, therefore had no claim the assignment of which the statute forbids. It is so clear that the articles of partnership do not constitute such an assignment as is forbidden by the section under consideration, that it would be a waste of words further to discuss the point.

Nor are the articles of partnership forbidden by section 3737. They do not transfer the contract or any interest therein to the plaintiffs, and cannot fairly be construed to do so. But if the articles of partnership were fairly open to two constructions, the presumption is that they were made in subordination to and not in violation of section 3737; and if they can be [576] construed consistently with the prohibitions of

[illegible]

[illegible] the plaintiffs, respectively, under the articles of partnership. It would be a strange conclusion to hold that by accepting these papers the plaintiffs lost their right, which they had already acquired under the articles of partnership to have the money therein mentioned [illegible] to them when it should be collected by Peck, their copartner. If the obligation assumed by Peck in his articles of partnership was valid and binding, it was not impaired or [illegible] by the giving and the acceptance of these memoranda. From what we have already said in discussing the articles of partnership, it is clear that they were not forbidden by the language or policy of the sections prohibiting the transfer of claims and contracts.

It is next assigned for error, that the circuit [illegible] did not give effect to the defense of the Statute of Limitation of two years, prescribed by section [illegible] of the Revised Statutes, which was [illegible] in the answer of the defendant.

The section mentioned forms a part of section [illegible] of the Bankrupt Act of March 2, 1867, chap. [illegible], 14 Stat. at L. 517, and provides that no suit at law or in equity shall be maintained in any court between an assignee in bankruptcy and a person claiming an adverse interest, touching any property or rights of property, transferable to or vested in such assignee, unless [illegible] within two years from the time when the cause of action accrued for or against such assignee.

It is plain that the facts shown by the record [illegible] this defense. This suit is for the [illegible] as assets of a partnership, of the money [illegible] on the contract between Peck and the United States, and its distribution among the partners on a settlement of the partnership affairs. If Peck had lived and had not been adjudicated bankrupt, the plaintiffs could not have maintained this suit against him until the money which is the subject of this controversy had been collected from the United States. They had no right under this contract with Peck to demand their share of the money until the money had come to his hands. The bankruptcy and death of Peck did not change the terms of the contract. They could not sue his assignee for a distribution of the fund until the fund had been received. The judgment against the United States in favor of Peck's administratrix was not affirmed by this court until February 10, 1880; and the money was not received by the defendant until after he had been substituted as claimant in the case in place of Helen A. Peck, administratrix, by order of the court of claims, on May 10, 1880. This suit was begun September 22, 1880.

A bill like the present, for the settlement of the affairs of the partnership and the distribution of its assets among the partners, would have been premature until the final determination of the suit of Peck against the United States, for that suit involved all the assets of the partnership, and until it was decided there could be no adjustment of the partnership concerns and no distribution of its assets; in fact, it was uncertain whether there would be any assets to distribute. As, therefore, the plaintiffs were not entitled to the relief prayed in the bill until final judgment in the suit of Peck against the United States, and especially had no demand against the defendant until the fund, which they assert was assets of the partnership, came to his hands, it is plain that the Statute of Limitations was not well pleaded.

It is next assigned for error that the circuit court admitted the testimony of McLean and Harmon, the plaintiffs, offered in their own behalf, in regard to transactions with and statements by Peck, he being dead, and the suit being against his assignee in bankruptcy. It is insisted that the testimony of these witnesses was incompetent under section 858 of the Revised Statutes which provides as follows: "In the courts of the United States no witness shall be excluded * * * in any action because he is a party to or interested in the issue tried; Provided, That, in actions by or against executors, administrators or guardians, in which judgment may be rendered for or against them, neither party shall be allowed to testify against the other as to any transaction with, or statement by, testator, intestate or ward, unless called to testify thereto by the opposite party, or required to testify thereto by the court. In all other respects the laws of the State in which the court is held shall be the rules of decision as to the competency of the witnesses in the courts of the United States, in trials at common law, and in equity and admiralty."

The witnesses admitted by the circuit court were not excluded by the terms of this statute. The suit in which they testified was not an action by or against an executor, administrator or guardian. But the council for the defendant insists that the policy of the Act applies to suits by or against assignees as well as to suits by or against executors, administrators or guardians, and that we ought to construe the Act so as to include such suits. We cannot concur in this view. The purpose of the Act was to remove generally the old incapacity to testify, imposed on parties or persons interested in the suit. This was done by a sweeping provision, subject to certain well defined exceptions; but the exceptions did not include suits by or against assignees in bankruptcy. We cannot insert the exception. When a provision is left out of a statute, either by design or mistake of the Legislature, the courts have no power to supply it. To do so would be to legislate and not to construe. "We are bound," says Mr. Justice Buller, in Jones v. Smart, 1 T. R. 44, "to take the Act of Parliament as they have made it;" and Mr. Justice Story, in Smith v. Rines, 2 Sumn. 854, 855, observes: "It is not for courts of justice proprio marte to provide for all the defects or mischiefs of imperfect legislation." See also King v. Burrell, 12 A. & E. 460; Lamond v. Eiffe, 8 Q. B. 910; Bloxam v. Elsee, 6 B & C. 169; Bartlett v. Morris, 9 Port. (Ala.) 266. The objection made to the admission of the testimony of the plaintiffs was properly overruled.

The next ground of complaint against the decree of the circuit court is that the court did not hold the plaintiffs estopped from asserting title to the fund in controversy, by the fact that they each testified, in the suit of Peck against the United States in which the fund was recovered, that he had no interest, direct or indirect, in the claim of Peck, except that he held one of the notes or memoranda made by Peck, a copy of one of which has already been given.

It must be conceded that this testimony was evasive and disingenuous, but it was not false. But admitting that the testimony was untrue, it is difficult to see how any estoppel is raised which the defendant can set up against a recovery in this case by the plaintiffs. An equitable estoppel is raised when there is some intended deception in the conduct or declarations of the party to be estopped, or such gross negligence on his part as to amount to constructive fraud, by which another has been misled to his injury. Brant v. Va. Coal & Iron Co. 93 U. S. 326 [Bk. 23, L. ed. 927]. If any estoppel could be set up in this case by reason of the testimony of the plaintiffs, it would be one in favor of the United States, who alone could have been injured by that testimony.

It is clear that the estoppel could not be set up by the defendant, for the evidence was given on his side of the controversy, and he is now in possession of and claims the fund which that testimony aided Peck, whose assignee he is, to recover. There was, therefore, no injury to the defendant and no estoppel which he could set up against these plaintiffs. See Cushing v. Laird, 107 U. S. 69 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 391].

It is true, his counsel say that, by reason of the denial by the plaintiffs that they had any interest in Peck's claim, the defendant was induced to employ counsel and move both this [581] court and the court of claims, that he be made, as assignee of Peck, the party plaintiff in the suit against the United States, and to expend a large sum of money in prosecuting his motions. As we have already found that the plaintiffs were entitled to the fund in controversy, and the defendant was not, this contention amounts to this: that the plaintiffs should be precluded from a recovery of their own property, and it ought to be turned over to the defendant, because the defendant, misled by the testimony of the plaintiffs given in a case to which he was not at the time either a party or privy, was induced to expend money in a proceeding to get possession of the subject matter of the controversy, to which, as it turned out, he had no title whatever. Upon such a state of facts no estoppel is raised. But there is no proof in the record that the defendant was misled by the testimony of the plaintiffs, or that he did not know the exact truth when he took the proceedings referred to. In no point of view, therefore, can the defendant assert that the plaintiffs are estopped to claim the fund in controversy.

Lastly, the defendant insists that the circuit court erred in not allowing him compensation for his services, expenses, and attorney's fees in recovering the fund in the court of claims from the United States. In reply to this contention, it is sufficient to say that the defendant rendered no services whatever in the recovery of the fund. Judgment had been rendered in the court of claims in favor of the administratrix of Peck, and had been affirmed by this court, and the mandate of this court had been sent to the court of claims, before the defendant was admitted as plaintiff in the suit for the recovery of the fund. All he did was to get the fund into his possession. As in our view the fund belongs to the plaintiffs in this suit, all that comes out of it for the compensation of the defendant comes out of their pockets. We see no reason why they should pay the defendant,

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

District of Columbia in its conduct of certain public work on which, at the time of such injuries, he was engaged as a laborer in its employment.

It appears that one Smallwood, the supervisor of county roads, undertook the repair of a public highway by the use of material obtained from a gravel bank. McElligott and one Meacham constituted a part of the force of laborers employed for that work. The special duty assigned to Meacham was to prepare gravel to be hauled away, while McElligott was to fill the carts in which the gravel was transported to the place where it was to be used by the supervisor. They reached the bank between 8 and 9 o'clock on the morning of June 12, 1878, observing, upon their arrival, that it had been [625] undermined at one side for two or three feet, and a chamber cut into it; a condition which to some extent increased the chances of the bank falling.

The plaintiff insists that there was evidence tending to show the following facts: that while Meacham and McElligott were at work, Smallwood was giving his attention to the repairing of the public road with the material brought from the gravel bank; that between 9 and 10 o'clock in the morning McElligott sent word to him to provide two additional men for the work at that place, one to watch the bank and the other to aid in filling the carts; that within a very short time an answer came to the effect that the request would be complied with; that plaintiff stopped work at noon for dinner, but before doing so sent a second message, which Smallwood received, to send more men, one to watch the bank and one to assist in loading the carts; that he resumed work about 1 o'clock, and about a half hour after that time (no men having been sent by Smallwood) the bank fell while he was at work five or six feet from it; that the falling bank caught him, despite his efforts to escape, burying him for a time beneath the gravel and inflicting upon him injuries of a serious and permanent character; that, to use the language of the witness Meacham, "it is not safe to stand under a bank that has been undermined;" and that although McElligott recognized from the outset that it was dangerous for him to do his work, without some one being present whose special duty was to give timely notice of the first indications of the bank's falling, he continued to work in reliance upon Smallwood's promise to send some one to watch the bank.

The District claims that there was evidence tending to show that Smallwood did not receive a message from McElligott to send men to watch the bank or to aid in loading the carts; that the former was not in the habit of providing men to watch a gravel bank, except when it was intended to have a "fall;" that there was no such intention on the day McElligott was injured; and that neither the latter nor Meacham had any instructions to make a "fall."

The point upon which the evidence was conflicting was as to whether Smallwood, in fact, [626] received notice that a man was needed to watch the bank while he and Meacham were at work. McElligott states that his first message was sent by Tracey, one of the drivers of the carts, and his second by Anderson, another driver. In his examination in chief by the plaintiff Tracey testified that McElligott told him "to tell Smallwood to send two men out there to help load the carts, and that the other might have the opportunity to watch the bank in case of danger," and that he "delivered the message to Smallwood, at Mr. Brown's, between 9 and 10 o'clock, and he said that he would send men, but he did not do it until after McElligott was hurt." He testified that he told McElligott what Smallwood said; also that "it is necessary to have a man to watch the bank when people are digging under a gravel bank; the bank was undermined that morning when he went there; it is not safe to work at a bank like that without having it watched."

But upon cross examination the same witness, being asked to state what reason was given by McElligott for wanting men to watch the bank said: "He wanted men to load the carts; he did not say anything to me about watching the bank; he simply sent a message to Smallwood to send two men to help load these carts, and that was all; he did not at any time say he wanted a man to watch the bank; I don't recollect his sending a message by any one to Smallwood that he wanted that he should send a man to watch the bank; I don't recollect that I heard anything said about a man to watch the bank before this accident; I told Mr. Smallwood that Mr. McElligott said: send a couple of men to help load the carts; I found Mr. Smallwood near Brown's; I delivered the message to Mr. Mahoney; Smallwood said that he would send a man or two." Upon re-examination the same witness said: "I delivered the message to Smallwood, what McElligott told me; I do not recollect whether what McElligott told me to tell Smallwood was to send men to watch the bank or load the carts; McElligott told me to tell Smallwood to send a couple of men to help load the carts; to help them out; I delivered whatever message McElligott told me to tell Smallwood, no matter what it was."

Anderson, by whom the plaintiff claims to have sent the second message, testifies that he did inform Smallwood, in the morning, of the [627] former's wish, that men be sent "to help load the carts and watch the bank," and that Smallwood said "all right." He did not, however, notify McElligott of what Smallwood said, because he did not himself return to the gravel bank. There was no proof that plaintiff was informed, prior to his being injured, of what it is claimed passed between Smallwood and Anderson. The only evidence tending to show that the plaintiff continued to work at the bank, in reliance upon Smallwood's alleged promise or assurance that he would send some one to watch it, was in the testimony of Tracey.

At the instance of the District, the court gave numerous instructions to the jury. They embodied, among others, these propositions: that it was implied in the contract between the plaintiff and the District, that the former took the risk of the dangers which ordinarily attend or are incident to the business in which he voluntarily engaged for compensation, among which was the carelessness of those in the same work or employment, with whose habits, conduct and capacity he had, in the course of his duties, an opportunity to become acquainted, and against whose neglect or incompetency he could take such precautions as his inclination or judgment [illegible] that, although Smallwood was [illegible] of the highways of the District, and [illegible] such employed and controlled the services of the plaintiff, the latter could not recover on account of any neglect or misconduct of the former in and about the work in which they were both engaged, unless it was shown that Smallwood was incompetent and unfit for the discharge of the duties of his position, of which the District had or ought to have had knowledge; that in contemplation of law the plaintiff took upon himself the risk arising from the negligence of his fellow workmen, including Smallwood; and that, if the plaintiff, believing that the gravel bed was in such condition as to make it dangerous for him to continue work there without some one being appointed to watch the bank while he was so engaged, and deliberately exposed himself to the accident by which he was injured, he was guilty of contributory negligence and could not recover in this action.

[628] To the granting of these instructions the plaintiff made no objection. The parties went to the jury agreeing, in effect, that the principles which those instructions announced should control the determination of their respective rights. We have, therefore, no occasion to consider the general question whether the District of Columbia is, in every case, exempt from liability for the negligence of its supervisor, resulting in personal injury to those who labor under his direction on public work, nor the narrower question whether Smallwood and McElligott were fellow servants within the meaning of the general rule that the common employer is not responsible to one employee for injuries caused by the negligence of a coemployee in the same branch of service. No such questions arise upon the present hearing. We have only to deal with the assignments of error, relating to material matters not covered by the instructions which were given at the request of the defendant, without objection upon the part of the plaintiff. And those matters are to be found in the charge of the court to the jury.

After expressing its approval of the principles announced in those instructions, and referring to the precaution taken by the plaintiff to inform Smallwood of the necessity of providing some one to watch the bank while he and Meacham were engaged in the special work assigned to them, the court said to the jury:

"Now, it is said that if Mr. Smallwood still neglected, after such notice, it would still be a neglect of a fellow servant for which no servant could ever recover any damage. But I have, for the purposes of this trial, instructed you that if the fact of the dangerous condition of that bank was communicated to Smallwood, and a request made of him to send a man there to watch it, and he gave assurance, in reply, that a man would be sent there for that purpose, the plaintiff here might labor, without any imputation of any negligence on his part, for such a length of time as within which that promise might be fulfilled; not to continue there and labor any longer than that, because it would be as much negligence after a reasonable period had expired after receiving this assurance as if no assurance had been given. The law requires [629] that he shall not needlessly expose himself to any danger, to any peril whatever.

"And if he has taken this precaution the decision in Hough v. R. Co. 100 U. S. 213 [Bk. 25, L. ed. 612], is to the effect that it would not be negligence for him to remain a sufficient length of time to give opportunity to have a man sent there.

"Now, this is about all that is necessary to say upon this point.

"The proposition, then, is, if the bank was in a dangerous condition, and the plaintiff sent a notice to that effect to Smallwood, and Mr. Smallwood gave, in reply, this assurance that a man would be sent there, then, until a sufficient length of time had expired within which that promise might be fulfilled, the plaintiff might remain there at his work; and if any injury happened to him by the falling of the bank during that time the District might then be imputed with this negligence. If he remained a longer time than within which the promise might be fulfilled, or if he gave no such notice at all, or no such notice was given to Smallwood, then the plaintiff is without any remedy, however serious that injury may be.

"I do not think that it makes any difference here whether Smallwood had any man he could send there or not.

"Now, the main question, therefore, is, and the one difficulty probably which the jury will have in determining anything in this case will be, as to this matter of notice. On that subject Mr. Smallwood has been examined, as also Mr. Tracey and Mr. Anderson.

"Now, the plaintiff names Tracey and Anderson as the persons by whom he sent this message, first by Tracey and then by Anderson.

"From Anderson he received no response, because Anderson did not return. He had, therefore, no assurance in reply to that message whatever, and I think, upon the whole, that he had no reason to expect any relief, unless he received assurance such as that given in the case in the supreme court. Beyond that I do not think that I ought to go, and I repeat that without he received this assurance of assistance he took the risk of the falling of the bank upon himself."

To so much of the charge as declared that if plaintiff notified Smallwood of the dangerous condition of the bank he would be relieved from the imputation of negligence during such time as was sufficient for Smallwood to provide a man to watch the bank, and to so much of it as declared that the alleged notice by the plaintiff to Smallwood, and the latter's reply thereto, took the case out of the rule laid down in the instructions previously given, the District excepted in proper form.

We are of opinion that, upon the theory of the case declared in the special instructions given, the charge was erroneous. As the court, at the request of the District, instructed the jury that the negligence of Smallwood was one of the risks which the plaintiff took upon himself, and that it was not liable in this action unless he was incompetent for his position, and such incompetency was known, or ought to have been known to the District; as it was neither alleged nor proved that he was incompetent; and as the only neglect complained of, or to which the evidence was directed, was his failure to provide a man to watch the bank after notice of the necessity therefor, it is difficult to perceive how it became important for the jury to inquire whether McElligott continued at work longer than was reasonably sufficient for Smallwood to appoint some one to the duty of watching the bank while the plaintiff and his coemployee, Meacham, were at work. The time during which the plaintiff continued at work after giving the alleged notice, and after receiving an assurance that his request would be complied with, has no relation whatever to the only contingency in which the District, according to the special instructions was liable, viz.: its negligence in employing as supervisor of roads one who was unfit for the place. If the principles embodied in those instructions are sound, upon which point we are not now required to express an opinion, the court would have been justified in directing a verdict for the District. The charge was inconsistent with the instructions previously given, and was calculated to mislead the jury, for it submitted to them a question which those instructions had, in effect if not in terms, declared to be immaterial in the case.

We are also of opinion that the charge was erroneous in its statement of the grounds upon which the jury should determine the particular point submitted to them. It involved a misapprehension of the decision in Hough v. R. Co. [supra], where the court had occasion to consider, among other questions, that of contributory negligence by the party who sues his employer for injuries resulting from the negligence of another employee in the same general service. That was an action against a railroad company, by the representatives of a locomotive engineer. The negligence there complained of and to which, as was claimed, was to be solely attributed the death of the intestate, was that of the company's officers in assigning to the intestate, for his use, an engine which, by proper diligence on the part of such officers might have been ascertained to be defective and unsafe. One of the defects there complained of was in the cow-catcher or pilot of the engine; the other was that the whistle was insecurely fastened to the boiler. By reason of the defect in the cow-catcher, the engine was thrown from the track, whereby the whistle fastened to the boiler was displaced, and from the opening thus made hot water and steam issued, fatally scalding the deceased. It was admitted that the engineer had knowledge of the defect in the cow-catcher; but it was not claimed that he was aware of the insufficient fastening of the whistle, or that the defect, if any, in that respect was of such a character that he should have become advised of it while using the engine on the road. It was proved that he had given notice to the proper officers of the company of the defect in the cow-catcher, and they promised that it should be remedied. But the court of original jurisdiction, in effect, held that knowledge on the part of the engineer of the defect in the cow-catcher was itself sufficient to defeat the action, without reference to the assurances given that the defect in it should be remedied. In considering the question whether his use of the engine with that knowledge was such negligence as prevented a recovery, so far as that defect was the efficient cause of death, the court referred to the general rule upon the subject of contributory negligence, that where a master or his representative has expressly promised to repair a defect, the servant can recover for an injury caused thereby, within such a period of time after the promise as it would be reasonable to allow for its performance, or for an injury suffered within any period which would not preclude a rational expectation that the promise might be kept. But to avoid misapprehension arising from the broad terms in which the general rule was frequently expressed, and that its application in that particular case might be clearly understood, the court said: "We may add that it was for the jury to say whether the defect in the cow-catcher or pilot was such that none but a reckless engineer, utterly careless of his safety, could have used the engine without it being removed. If, under all the circumstances and in view of the promises to remedy the defect, the engineer was not wanting in due care in continuing to use the engine, then the company will not be excused for the omission to supply proper machinery upon the ground of contributory negligence. That the engineer knew of the alleged defect was not, under the circumstances, and as a matter of law, absolutely conclusive of want of due care on his part." That knowledge, it was held, was a fact to be considered by the jury, in connection with other facts, in determining whether the engineer exercised that caution which all the circumstances required. [632]

These principles were not applied in the trial of the case now before us; for, in effect, the jury were instructed that, in determining the question of contributory negligence, they need only inquire whether plaintiff continued at his work longer than was reasonably sufficient to enable Smallwood to provide some one to watch the bank. If that question was solved in favor of the plaintiff, then they were at liberty, under the charge, to find that he was not guilty of contributory negligence, although they may have believed from the evidence that no man of ordinary prudence would have entered upon and continued in the work for any time, however brief, without some one being appointed to watch the bank; in other words, that if the plaintiff, in fact, relied upon the alleged promise of Smallwood, he was not chargeable with contributory negligence, although the jury may have believed that, under all the circumstances, he so acted as to show himself utterly careless of his safety. But such is not a sound exposition of the principles which regulate the rights and obligations of employer and employee. Assuming that the District might be responsible under some circumstances for injuries resulting from the negligence of its supervisor, it certainly would not be liable if the danger which the plaintiff apprehended from the beginning was so imminent or manifest as to prevent a reasonably prudent man from risking it upon a promise or assurance by the proper authority that the cause from which the peril arose would be removed. The plaintiff had had experience in the kind of business in which he was engaged at the time of his injury. He recognized from the beginning, the peril to which he was exposed while working at the gravel bank. There was no express undertaking, upon the part of the District, by its supervisor, that it would save him harmless as [633] to any injury he might suffer prior to the designation of some one to watch the bank; and it was not implied in the contract between him and the District that he might needlessly or rashly expose himself to danger. On the contrary, if liability might come upon the District for the negligence of its officers controlling his services, he was under an obligation to exercise due care in protecting himself from personal harm while discharging duties out of which such liability might arise. If he failed to exercise such care; if he exposed himself to dangers that were so threatening or obvious as likely to cause injury at any moment, he would, notwithstanding any promises or assurances of the District supervisor of the character alleged, be guilty of such contributory negligence as would defeat his claim for injuries so received.

Whether, therefore, we look at the case upon the theory embodied in the instructions given at the request of the District, or as depending upon the issue as to contributory negligence upon the part of the plaintiff, the judgment must be reversed and a new trial awarded.

Reversed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

YALE LOCK MANUFACTURING COMPANY, Appt.,
[373]
v.
JAMES SARGENT.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 373-378.)

Patent law—infringement.

A variation of eccentricity in the rollers is a material feature of the invention secured by letters patent No. 98622, for an improvement in permutation locks, or is made so by the description and claim; and said patent is not infringed by a lock in which the same combination or an equivalent is not used.

[No. 165.]

Argued March 15, 16, 1886. Decided March 29, 1886.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York.

The case is stated by the court.

Mr. Frederick H. Betts, for appellant.

Messrs. Edward Wetmore and George Ticknor Curtis, for appellee.

Mr. Justice Matthews delivered the opin-
[373] ion of the court:

The bill in this case was filed by the appellee for an injunction to restrain the defendant below, the appellant, from an alleged infringement of letters patent No. 98622, dated January 4, 1870, granted to James Sargent, for an improvement in permutation locks; and for an account, etc. On final hearing on bill, answer, replication and proofs, there was a final decree for the complainant for an injunction and for $400.75 damages and costs. The defendant has appealed.

The question involved is the fact of infringement, and that in its turn depends upon the proper construction of the complainant's patent.

The specifications and claim of the patent, with the accompanying drawings are as follows:

"Figure 1 is an elevation of the lock, with the back plate removed to show the interior.

Figure 2, a vertical cross section of the same.

Figure 3, a diagram, showing the cam and and the disconcerting eccentrics in perspective.

Like letters of reference indicate corresponding parts in all the figures.

Nature of the Invention.

This lock is an improvement upon that of Linus Yale, in which an eccentric roller is combined with the cam for disconcerting the action upon tumblers.

The invention consists in combining with the cam an arrangement of two or more eccentric rollers, of varying eccentricity, turning upon the same bearing, so that in revolving one or both may turn and alternate in action, thereby greatly increasing the difficulty of mapping out or locating the position of either.

General Description.

In the drawings—

A represents the case of the lock;

B, the cylinder for holding the tumblers or wheels;

C, the spindle;

D, the cam;

E, the dog, which falls to release the bolt, and,

G, the bolt.

These are the ordinary parts employed in combination locks, and may be arranged in any desired manner; hence, they need no special description here.

A single eccentric roller, H, pivoted, at a, to a suitable arm or bearing, and resting upon the cam D, has been before employed, as already stated.

Its object is to disconcert the action inside the lock, so that an expert lock pick or burglar cannot tell the position of the tumblers when operating upon the lock.

It has been found by experiment, however, that such a device is not proof against the skill of an expert lock pick, for, by the use of a delicate instrument attached to the spindle outside, and by careful manipulation, the shape and position of this roller can be actually mapped out or ascertained and the lock opened.

To obviate this difficulty as far as possible, I combine with this roller one or more rollers H', pivoted to the same arm or bearing, and resting upon the periphery of the cam in the same manner; but all these rollers are made of varying eccentricity, and of different shape, and therefore, when the cam is turned, the several rollers strike at different positions, and when one touches the other may be removed from contact, thus alternating in action. They may also turn in different directions.

By this means, owing to the different contact of the several rollers, the difficulty of mapping out and locating the same is very greatly increased.

In transferring the action from one roller to the next, the loss of contact with the first disarranges the position, and thus renders it indefinite.

In this manner, and for this reason, the addition of another roller to the one already in use does not produce an accumulation of the same effect in action, but produces a different action altogether, by breaking the continuity of rotation and movement and contact.

I disclaim the employment of a single eccentric; but what I claim as my invention, and desire to secure by letters patent, is,

The arrangement of two or more rollers, H, H', of varying eccentricity, when combined with the cam, in the manner and for the purpose specified."

Mr. Henry B. Renwick, an expert called by the complainant, in explanation of the patent, says:

"I have examined the patent, and believe that the words 'varying eccentricity,' as applied to the rollers, mean that the rollers shall have their axes at different points in their diameters. If the two rollers be each $\frac{1}{4}$ of an inch in diameter, and one have its axis $\frac{15}{1000}$ of an inch from the nearest point in its periphery, and the other have its axis $\frac{40}{1000}$ of an inch from the nearest point of its periphery, then they will be of [376] varying eccentricity. This variation of distance of the axis from the nearest point of the periphery need be no greater than the smallest distance that can be measured by the sensitive micrometers used in lock-picking, for the reason that the whole aim of the patented contrivance is to avoid picking by means of a micrometer." [377]

Fig. 1.

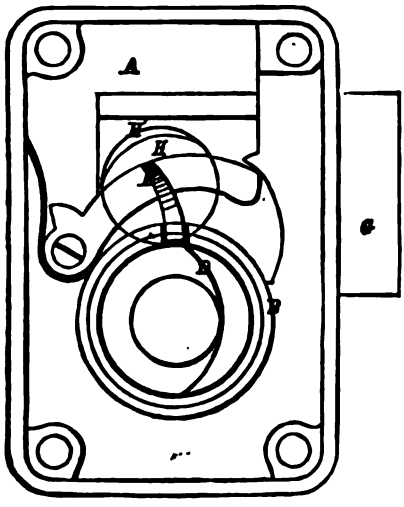

Fig. 2.

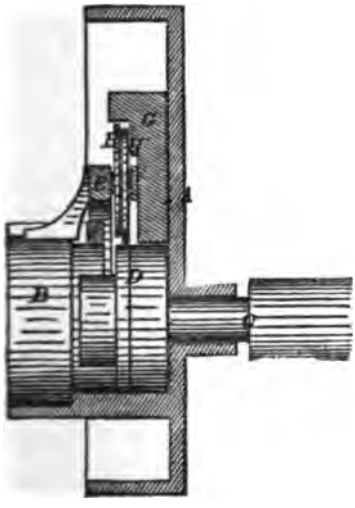

Fig. 3.

The same witness was also examined upon the question of infringement, upon a comparison with the patent, of a lock made by the defendant, marked as an Exhibit Cole No. 1. He said:

"I have examined the lock Cole No. 1. It has two disconcerting rollers in combination with a cam upon which they ride. These rollers being for the purpose of preventing a lock picker from ascertaining the position of the rotary tumblers by means of a micrometer, in this respect it is substantially identical with the contrivance described in the patent. Whether these rollers in the exhibit are of varying eccentricity or not I cannot positively determine, although they appear to be so by examination of them without instruments. A variation of eccentricity between the two rollers, which could be measured by a micrometer only, would be sufficient to secure the object which these rollers are designed to effect, and they may have such eccentricity, and yet it may be impossible to determine it by the eye alone."

On cross examination he admitted that he could not tell with certainty whether the rollers were or were not of varying eccentricity. No other witness on the part of the complainant is able to prove the fact of a variation of eccentricity between the rollers used by the defendant; while on the other hand the testimony on the part of the defendant does not permit us to doubt that the rollers used in its locks are identical in their eccentricity and shape.

If, therefore, a variation of eccentricity in the rollers is a material feature of the invention, or is made material by the description and claim of the patent, no infringement has been proved.

It does not meet and answer the difficulty to say, as has been suggested in argument, that although the rollers in the defendant's locks may be of the same eccentricity and shape as respects each other, yet that when in revolution they vary in eccentricity in reference to the cam [378] which operates them, so that in action their eccentricity varies, and the same result is produced. Because the description in the patent and the claim require that the variation of eccentricity should be between the rollers themselves, and not a variation in action in reference to the cam, and unless the same result is produced by the same means, there is no infringement of the invention. Besides, the fact is not as claimed. It is impossible mechanically for the rollers, being identical in eccentricity and shape with each other, to have the same relation at all times to the cam as though they varied in eccentricity. For, as is pointed out in the evidence on the part of the defendant, when the rollers are the same in eccentricity and shape with each other, there must be intervals of time at which "the two rollers having been rotated to a point at which their peripheries exactly coincided, both would revolve together for a short period, until some slight impediment or change in the periphery of the cam would cause one to bear more directly than the other upon the periphery of the cam, when this one would revolve with the cam, the other remaining stationary; and so on." And this feature in the action of two rollers, identical in eccentricity, it is said, introduces an additional irregularity into the operation of the mechanism, which increases its disconcerting power and adds to the difficulty of calculating the movement which enables the expert to pick the lock. So that the mode of operation is different, accordingly as the rollers are of the same or varying eccentricities.

Were it otherwise, however, it would still be necessary to regard the feature of a variation of eccentricity as essential to the invention, because made so by the description and claim of the patent, although an equally good or even the same result might be obtained without it. The defendant does not use the same combination, and employs no device as an equivalent and substitute for the omitted element. It is not, therefore, liable as an infringer, Water Meter Co. v. Desper, 101 U. S. 332 [Bk. 25, L. ed. 1024]; Gage v. Herring, 107 U. S. 640 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 601].

The decree of the Circuit Court is accordingly reversed and the cause is remanded, with directions to dismiss the bill.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Ct. U. S.

---

[554]

YALE LOCK MANUFACTURING COMPANY, Appt.,
v.
HALBERT S. GREENLEAF.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 554-559.)

Construction of letters patent—what patentable—claim anticipated.

1. The scope of letters patent must be limited to the invention covered by the claim, which may be illustrated but cannot be enlarged by language used in other parts of the specification.
2. A change in a mechanical device which would occur to an unskilled mechanic is not patentable.
3. The first claim of reissued letters patent granted to George Rosner, July 25, 1871, for an improvement in permutation locks was anticipated and is therefore void.

[No. 166.]

Argued March 16, 1886. Decided March 29, 1886.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York.

Statement by Mr. Justice Woods:

This was a bill in equity brought by the appellee, Halbert S. Greenleaf, to restrain the infringement by the appellant, the Yale Lock Manufacturing Company, of the first and fourth claims of the reissued letters patent granted to George Rosner, July 25, 1871, for an improvement in permutation locks. The original patent bore date September 18, 1866.

The defense was that the alleged invention and substantial and material parts thereof claimed as new were, prior to any invention thereof by said George Rosner, known and publicly used by divers persons in this country, and that among such persons were D. H. Rickards, of Boston, and the firm of Evans & Watson, of Philadelphia.

The circuit court decided that the patent was valid, and that the defendant had infringed, and, upon the report of a master of the damages sustained by the plaintiff, rendered a decree in his favor for $2,968.50. The present appeal brings that decree under review.

Mr. Frederick H. Betts, for appellant.
Messrs. Edward Wetmore and George Ticknor Curtis, for appellee.

Mr. Justice Woods delivered the opinion of the court:

It is conceded that the damages for which the court rendered its decree were allowed for the infringement of the first claim only of the Rosner patent, which, therefore, is alone to be considered upon this appeal.

The invention covered by this claim was described as follows in the specification:

"This invention consists in combining with a set of permutation wheels or tumblers, constructed each of a rim and center, an arrangement of bolts or equivalent devices, which fasten and unfasten said rims and centers by the use of a key inserted through holes in the cams in the wheels, by which said bolts or equivalent devices are operated, the effect being to enable the relative position of the rims and centers to be changed so as to make a new combination, by moving the driving pins to different positions relatively to the slots in the wheels. It further consists in the arrangement of parts as hereinafter described. * * *

"Prior to my invention, in order to change the combination, where a single set of wheels only was used, made up each of a center hub and rim, the wheels had to be removed from the lock and adjusted by hand and then replaced.

"I obviate this difficulty by the following arrangement: opposite the center or hub o of each wheel, and located in the outer rim, I place a locking device or bolt, r, which, when forced in against the said center or hub, holds the same firmly in place with the outer rim; but, when thrown out, disengages said parts and allows the centers to turn free while the rims remain stationary. Against the locking device or bolt r rests a cam or eccentric, s. Through each or all of these cams, and also through the back plate of the lock, is inserted a key, P, fig. 6, by turning which it will be seen that said locking or fastening device may be forced in or drawn out at pleasure. When the key is inserted and the fastening device thrown back, it will be seen that the rims of the wheels are held stationary by the key, while the centers may be turned to any different position by the spindle, thus setting the lock to a new combination. * * * "The novelty in the first part of my invention consists in the combination of the fastening devices r with the wheels, constructed of three parts each, an outer rim and a center or hub composed of two parts, secured together so that by inserting the key the parts composing the wheels may be loosened and the outer rims held stationary, while the centers or hubs are turned to a different position by the action of the spindle, to rearrange the combination, and then the parts locked in place again, [557] and all accomplished without removing the wheels themselves from the lock. In all prior locks with a single set of wheels (each wheel made up of a rim and center hub), so far as I am aware, the wheels had to be removed from the lock and the combination changed by hand. * * * "What I claim, and desire to secure by letters patent, is:

"1. In a permutation lock, in combination with a set of wheels consisting each of an outer ring or rim and a central disc or hub, a set of fastening devices or bolts, r r, which is made to fasten or unfasten said parts composing the wheels, by the insertion of a key through each or all of the wheels, whereby the combination of the lock may be changed, substantially as herein specified."

The testimony showed that on the 18th of March, 1852, the D. H. Rickards named in the answer of the defendant, filed in the patent office an application for a patent for an improvement in locks, which was either rejected or withdrawn; and that locks made substantially in accordance with the description contained in Rickards' specification were manufactured and sold by Evans & Watson, safe makers, of Philadelphia, as early as the year 1853. A copy of the application of Rickards is found in the record, and one of the locks made by Evans & Watson in 1853 was produced as an exhibit upon the trial in this court.

A comparison of the specification and model of the plaintiff's patent with the application of Rickards and the lock made by Evans & Watson shows that the device of Rickards and the lock of Evans & Watson were an anticipation of the invention covered by the first claim of the plaintiff's patent.

It is clear from the statement in the specification of Rosner's patent that he believed that prior to his invention it was necessary, in order to change the combination in a permutation lock, to remove the wheels from the lock case and adjust them by hand and then replace them.

But Rosner was in error in making this statement. The evidence shows that what Rosner thought had never been done before had been done by means of the device of Rickards, embodied in the lock of Evans & Watson, which [558] is substantially the same contrivance as that covered by the first claim of Rosner's patent.

The Rickards device embraces a set of wheels consisting of an outer rim or hub and a set of fastening devices or bolts, so constructed as to engage and disengage with a set of cogs on the central hub. When the bolts are in place the outer rim and the central hub are firmly fastened together, when withdrawn the hub may be made to revolve without moving the rim. The bolts are withdrawn by means of a key. Each of the wheels has an opening in it for the passage of the key by which the bolts are moved; these openings in the wheels are placed opposite each other and also opposite a key hole in the lock case, so that the key may be passed from the exterior of the lock case through all the wheels, and thus withdraw the bolts which fasten the rims to the hubs of the wheels; thereby permitting the hubs to be moved and a change to be made in the combination of the lock. When the change is made the key is withdrawn and the bolts are forced back into their places by springs. By this means the combination of the lock is changed without removing the wheels from the lock case, or even opening the case.

The only difference between the Rosner device and that of Rickards which the plaintiff's counsel have been able to point out is thus stated: in the Rosner contrivance the key, in addition to locking and unlocking the fastening devices, performs, when in the lock, the function of holding the outer rims in place while the combination of the lock is changed by moving the hubs. It is insisted that this key is adapted to perform this office by the fact that it fits snugly the series of holes in the rims of the wheels through which it passes, and thereby prevents any motion of the rims.

The Rickards device has a key hole in the lock case which the key neatly fits. But the holes in the rims of the wheels through which the key passes are irregular apertures, not fitted to the shape or size of the key, so that they allow some motion to the rims of the wheels.

We think this difference between the two locks does not give validity to the Rosner pa- [559] tent, for two reasons: first, because the shape and size of the key hole is not mentioned in the claim of the Rosner patent as one of the elements of the combination. The scope of letters patent must be limited to the invention covered by the claim, and while the claim may be illustrated it cannot be enlarged by language used in other parts of the specification. Keystone Bridge Co. v. Phœnix Iron Co. 95 U. S. 274 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 344]; Railroad Co. v. Mellon, 104 U. S. 112 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 639]. Secondly, if it were found to be necessary to hold the rims of the wheels rigidly immovable while the combination of the lock was being changed, the idea of changing the irregular aperture in the wheels through which the key in the Rickards device was thrust to one of the shape and size of the key would occur to the rudest and most unskilled mechanic. The suggestion of such a change could not be called invention, and ought not to be dignified by letters patent. Atlantic Works v. Brady and Slawson v. Grand Street R.

R. Co. 107 U. S. 192, 649 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 438, 576]; Phillips v. Detroit, 111 U. S. 604 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 532].

We are of opinion, therefore, that the first claim of the plaintiff's patent was anticipated by the application and specification of Rickards and by the locks manufactured by Evans & Watson and that it is, therefore, void.

It follows that the decree of the Circuit Court must be reversed and the cause remanded, with directions to dismiss the bill; and it is so ordered.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

---

[536] YALE LOCK MANUFACTURING COMPANY, Appt.,

v.

JAMES SARGENT.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 536-554.)

Patent law—reissue—novelty—infringement—measure of damages—parties—disclaimer—costs.

1. The first claim of reissued letters patent No. 4696, for an improvement in locks, is not an unlawful expansion of the claims of the original patent.
2. The complainant's patent for an improvement in locks is not void for want of novelty.
3. The complainant's patent is infringed by the device of the defendant.
4. In an action for an infringement of a patent for a turning bolt device, an improvement in locks, where the complainant had granted no licenses but was himself the manufacturer of his locks, and where the patented device was an essential feature, both of complainant's and of the infringing lock, and where the patented device could not be sold except as embodied in a lock, and where the complainant had been compelled to reduce the price of his locks by defendant's competition, the defendant's infringement must be held to have caused the entire loss of complainant by reason of such reduction of price, allowance being made for other causes which give the defendant an advantage in selling his locks.
5. The owner of the patent is the proper party to sue to recover damages for infringement, although he may have a partner engaged with him in the manufacture of the patented article.
6. Where a bill alleged infringement of a reissued patent generally, and one claim of the reissue was invalid, but recovery was had for infringement of a valid claim of the reissue, and there had been no unreasonable delay in filing a disclaimer of the invalid claim, this court reverses the decree of the circuit court so far as it awarded costs to the complainant, and orders each party to bear his own costs in this court and one half the expense of printing the record.

[No. 164.]

Argued March 12, 15, 1886. Decided April 5, 1886.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York.

The case is stated by the court.

Mr. F. H. Betts, for appellant.

Messrs. George Ticknor Curtis and Edmund Wetmore, for appellee.

[537] Mr. Justice Blatchford delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a suit in equity, brought in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York, by James Sargent against the Yale Lock Manufacturing Company, to recover for the infringement of reissued letters patent No. 4696, granted to Sargent, January 2, 1872, for an "improvement in locks," on an application therefor filed September 25, 1871 (the original patent, No. 57574 having been granted to him August 28, 1866).

The specification and drawings of the reissue are as follows:

"My invention consists in combining with the ordinary combination wheels and the other working parts of a combination lock which has no sliding lock bolt, a bolt turning on a pivot or bearing, which is so isolated or removed from contact with the said wheels as to receive any pressure or strain which may be applied through the separate bolt work of the safe or vault door, and cut off the communication between the bolt work of the door and the wheels or fence lever of the lock, whereby the position of the slots in the wheels can be determined and the lock 'picked,' as can be done in most cases where the ordinary sliding bolt is used without some mechanical device to prevent.

In the drawings, figure 1 is an elevation of my improved lock, with the back plate removed; figures 2 and 3, an elevation and top view, respectively, of the pivoted bolt, the combination wheels, the cam and the lever work that connects them; figure 4, a perspective view of the pivoted bolt; figure 5, a similar view of the magnet and armatures; figure 6, a view showing the manner of applying the spindle and cam to a safe or vault door.

A, represents the plate of a safe door, and B, the case of the lock which is applied thereto. C, C, C, are the combination wheels, and D, the operating spindle. The spindle passes through a hollow stud, a, of the case, and has screwed upon its inner end the cam E, as shown most clearly in figure 6. The wheels themselves rest on the stud a. I, is the bolt, turning on a pivot or bearing, q. Its location is such as to rest closely in the rear of the stem, t, of the heavy bolt work of the door, and to hold it out when in one position, but to allow it to retract, to free the bolt work, when in the other position, said bolt I, turning on its pivot or bearing to allow this to be done. H is a sliding bar, which gives motion to the bolt as it is thrown forward or backward, being connected together by cog teeth p r. The bar slides on studs, n n, by which it keeps its horizontal position. G is a lever pivoted at f, to bar H, and serving to throw the latter back. It has a hook, b, figure 2, which engages with the bit, d, of the cam, to draw the bar back. The forward motion is given by the cam striking the end o, of the bar H. L is a magnet of the form shown in figure 5, which is suspended on a pivot, i. Its open end rests between armatures h k, which are separated by a brass pendant l. The armature h is attached to the end of lever G. When the magnet is in contact with the lower armature h, the dog g will be held away from the wheels; but when raised and brought in contact with the upper armature k, the lever is released and the dog is then allowed to fall into the notches of the wheels, to release the bolt. The magnet is raised by a roller, c, of the cam, which strikes a bearing, m, of the magnet.

In general principle the magnet is the same as that covered by the patent of Sargent and Covert, May 2, 1865; but the construction and arrangement of the magnet and armatures are much simpler and more effective and constitute one feature of my present invention.

An important feature in my invention is the employment of the bolt I, turning on a pivot or bearing, instead of the sliding bolt heretofore in use. It is isolated, so to speak, from the combination wheels and the other main working parts of the lock; and, therefore, any strain which is brought to bear upon it by the heavy bolt work will be expended on the bolt itself and not upon the wheels. In the old form of lock the sliding bolt extends back so as to connect with or come near to the wheels, and any strain thereon is liable to disarrange the lock works.

Another important advantage of the isolation of the bolt is that it increases the difficulty of 'picking,' by being removed from all contact with the wheels. A common mode of picking ordinary locks is to force the bolt back, so as to get a contact with it and the edges of the wheels, by which their position is ascertained. In my lock this cannot occur, as the bolt simply turns on its bearing or pivot; and no back action can bring it or the lever work against the wheels.

The bolt may not only be of the circular form shown in the drawings, but of a segmental form, which will serve the same purpose. [540]

I am aware that the combination wheels themselves have been made with notches, and so arranged that the ordinary sliding bolt which rests against their edges may fall back and within the notches, when they are all set. Such is not the equivalent of my invention, as my express purpose is to avoid all contact of the bolt with the edges of the wheels." [541]

The claims of the reissue, five in number, are as follows, but only claim 1 is alleged to have been infringed:

"1. In a combination lock for safe or vault doors, a bolt, I, which turns on a pivot or bearing, when said bolt, I, is used in a lock having no ordinary sliding lock bolt, and in connection with the separate bolt work of the door, and so arranged as to receive the pressure of the said bolt work without transmitting it to the wheels or other equivalent works of the lock.

2. In a combination lock for safe and vault doors, I claim the combination of the bolt I, bar H, and cog connection p r, when said bolt, I, turns on a pivot or bearing, and receives the pressure of the bolt work situated outside the lock works, and intervenes between the bolt work and the wheels.

3. I claim, in combination with the bolt I, the bar H and lever G, arranged and operating as herein set forth.

4. I claim, in combination with the vibrating magnet L, the armatures h k and pendant l, arranged as herein described.

5. I claim the combination and arrangement of the wheels C C, cam E, lever G, bar H, and bolt I, as herein described."

The defenses set up were want of novelty, noninfringement, and invalidity of the reissue. After a hearing on pleadings and proofs, an interlocutory decree was entered finding the reissued patent to be valid and to have been infringed, and awarding a perpetual injunction and an account of profits and damages. The master reported $7,771 damages in favor of the plaintiff. The defendant excepted to the report, but the exceptions were overruled by the court and a final decree was entered for the plaintiff, for $7,771 damages and $650.17 costs. The defendant has appealed to this court.

It is contended that the first claim of the reissue is void for unlawful expansion, after unreasonable delay in applying for the reissue.

The original patent had three claims, as follows:

"1. The rotating tumbler I, when separated and isolated in action from the permutation wheels, and so arranged that any inward pressure upon the bolt will be exerted on the bearing of said tumbler, and have no action or effect upon the said permutation wheels, substantially as and for the purpose herein specified.

[542]

2. In combination with the turning tumbler I, the cog bar H and lever G, arranged and operating as herein set forth.

3. The combination and arrangement of the combination wheels C, cam disk E, pivoted lever G, cog bar H, and turning tumbler I, the whole operating as herein specified."

Claim 3 of the reissue is substantially the same as claim 2 of the original, and claim 5 of the reissue is substantially the same as claim 3 of the original, while claims 2 and 4 of the reissue are new claims.

The defendant directs attention to these facts. When Sargent applied originally for his patent, on February 6, 1866, he asked for claim 1 in this form: "The turning bolt I, resting on its bearing q, in combination with the mechanism of a combination lock, in such manner as to practically isolate or disconnect it from the main operating parts, substantially as set forth." Claim 1 having been rejected on the 24th of March, 1866, Sargent on the 29th of June, 1866, changed the claim to the form it has in the original patent as issued, and his attorneys at the same time, in a letter to the patent office, explained the new form of claim thus: "The substance of the first substituted claim consists essentially in providing a rotating tumbler in connection with the bearing on which it rests and the stem of the bolt work which rests against it, when said tumbler is isolated or disconnected from the combination wheels, so that any inward motion of the bolt against this tumbler will expend its force against the bearing on which the tumbler turns and rests, and will not reach or affect the permutation wheels." The attorneys also said: "In Mr. Sargent's device it will be observed that the combination or permutation wheels are on a different bearing, and located at a distance from the revolving tumbler I, and never in contact therewith, so that the two are practically isolated from each other, and there is no connection between them except through the lever H, which is not within the reach or influence of the pick lock." And the specification of the original patent contained this language: "The principal advantage of this tumbler consists in its isolation, so to speak, from the combination wheels and the main working parts. It rests alone on its bearing q, the only part connected being the cog bar H. In ordinary locks the sliding bolt extends back in direct connection with the main working mechanism, and by its constant action and the strain that comes upon it frequently disarranges those parts. This is especially true when the stem or projection t of the heavy bolt of the safe door rests against the sliding bolt. In this case, when force is applied to the bolt, the wrenching strain upon the bolt and mechanism is very great. In my lock it will be seen that this difficulty is obviated, for any strain that comes upon the circular tumbler, either from the stem t or any other source, is simply expended upon the strong bearing q, and does not reach back to the combination wheels or any part of the working mechanism. This is of the utmost importance."

It is urged that emphasis was thus laid on the fact that the turning bolt or tumbler was mounted on a different bearing from the permutation wheels, and that it was that arrangement which prevented pressure on it from reaching back to the permutation wheels; that the original claim, in speaking of the rotating tumbler as "separated and isolated in action from the permutation wheels," meant that it was mounted on its own separate bearing, and did not allow of its being mounted in any other way; that the specification of the reissue does not say that the tumbler I "rests alone on its bearing q;" that the limitation thus contained in claim 1 of the original patent is not found in claim 1 of the reissue; and that thereby an unlawful expansion was made, the application for the reissue having been filed more than five years after the original patent was granted.

But we think the reissue is not fairly open to this objection. The tumbler in the one claim and the bolt in the other are the same instrument. The words "rotating tumbler I," in the original claim, refer to the tumbler described as resting on a bearing "around which it turns." The claim of the reissue, in saying that the bolt I "turns on a pivot or bearing," expresses the same idea. The words in the claim of the reissue, "when said bolt I is used in a lock having no ordinary sliding lock bolt, and in connection with the separate bolt work of the door, and so arranged as to receive the pressure of the said bolt work without transmitting it to the wheels or other equivalent works of the lock," are justified by these words in the original claim, "and so arranged that any inward pressure upon the bolt will be exerted on the bearing of said tumbler, and have no action or effect upon the said permutation wheels." The word "bolt" in the claim of the original meant what in the claim of the reissue is called "the separate bolt work of the door," because what is called in the former "the rotating tumbler I," is called in the latter "a bolt, I, which turns on a pivot or bearing." The proviso in the claim of the reissue, that the bolt I is to be "used in a lock having no ordinary sliding lock bolt" does not expand the claim but, if anything, restricts it. The statement, in the claim of the reissue, that the bolt I is so arranged as to receive the pressure of the separate bolt work of the door without transmitting it to the wheels, is justified by the statement in the original claim, that the rotating tumbler I is so arranged that any inward pressure upon the bolt will be exerted on the bearing of the tumbler, and have no action or effect on the permutation wheels.

The words in the original claim, "when separated and isolated in action from the permutation wheels," applied to the rotating tumbler, do not indicate that the mounting of the tumbler alone on its bearing is required, but mean no more than that the tumbler shall be separated and isolated in action from the wheels; and the words of the claim of the reissue have no broader meaning in that regard. If the rotating tumbler or bolt is thus isolated in action from the wheels, the arrangement referred to in both claims is reached. The patentee set forth, as he was bound to do, the method he used and which he thought advisable; but any method of mounting the revolving bolt which effects the isolation referred to is within either claim. The words "or other equivalent works of the lock" have no expanding force.

The invention of Sargent consists in combining with the ordinary combination wheels, and the other working parts of a combination lock which has no sliding lock bolt, a bolt turning on a pivot or bearing, which is so isolated or removed from contact with the said wheels as to receive any pressure or strain which may be applied through the separate bolt work of a safe door, and cut off the communication between the bolt work of the door and the wheels or fence lever of the lock, so that the position of the slots in the wheels cannot be determined, for picking the lock, as in the use of the ordinary sliding lock bolt, which extends back so as to connect with the wheels. The turning bolt is an incomplete cylinder, or one in which parts of the periphery are cut away. An extended part of the bolt work of the door bears against a part of the complete periphery of the turning bolt, in such manner that the turning bolt receives all pressure and does not allow it to reach the combination wheels. The ordinary sliding lock bolt is, therefore, dispensed with.

Three alleged anticipating devices are set up: defendant's exhibit A, defendant's exhibits C and D, and defendant's exhibit E.

Exhibit A has in the lock casing a sliding bolt and also what is alleged to be a turning bolt. But the latter is only the well known swiveling dog, long used to prevent the retraction of sliding bolts, and so arranged as to be swiveled by a spring when the combination wheels are gated. As a consequence, the stump or fence bears on the wheels not only with the pressure of its own weight but with the added force of the spring. Any swiveling force applied to the dog causes the stump to bear on the peripheries of the wheels, and the picking of the lock is facilitated. The dog prevents the retraction of the sliding bolt. In Sargent's patent the lever which carries the stump is so constructed that no turning of the revolving bolt can bring the lever work against the wheels. The Sargent revolving bolt must be acted upon by the user, while the swiveling dog in exhibit A is an automatic latch. In Sargent's structure the revolving bolt, the lever which carries the stump, and the wheels are sufficient to prevent the retraction of the bolt work; while in exhibit A the sliding bolt, the swiveling dog, the stump lever and the wheels are all of them necessary.

The drawings exhibits C and D show the [546] Linus Yale lock, which is also illustrated by a lock mechanism. It is a revolving lock which permits and prevents the retraction of the bolt work of the door, and there is no sliding bolt. But there are no permutation wheels or revolving tumblers, nor any oscillating or sliding tumblers; but the ancient device of pins is used to prevent the revolution of the bolt, the pins entering into holes in the bolt; and a cross strain can be brought upon the pins, making the picking of the lock comparatively easy. Moreover, the bolt is not isolated from the pins as it is from the wheels in Sargent's lock, but parts of the pins are in sockets in the bolt. The pins are thus in immediate connection with the bolt, while Sargent interposes lever work between the bolt and the wheels, to effect the isolation of the bolt.

In the Butterworth padlock, exhibit E, there is a revolving bolt combined with the wheel tumblers by means of a lever; but there is no "separate bolt work of the door," which is one element of the claim in Sargent's reissue. Of this padlock the plaintiff's expert, Mr. Henry B. Renwick, says: "The padlock has the ordinary hasp attached to the case, and the bolt acts to prevent this hasp from being drawn away from the axis upon which the bolt revolves, and not to prevent bolt works from being forced towards that same axis. The hasp is a contrivance which must be used with two staples, or one staple and a slotted bar, all of which must be outside of the door. Whereas, on the contrary, bolt works must be inside of the door, and shoot into sockets in the jambs, it being clear that the hasp could not be used in place of bolt works, or bolt works in place of a hasp, even if the former were located outside of the door. I do not think that this lock would even suggest the idea of the combination referred to in the first claim of the Sargent reissue. In order to make the lock fit to be used in combination with bolt works, even after such idea had been suggested, it would be necessary: first, to provide the lock case with means of securing it to the door; second, to elongate the spindle and so contrive it and the dial plate that they could be separated from the wheel tumblers and put together again, with the door between them; [547] third, to alter the direction of the slot in the case through which the hasp enters, so that the tail of the bolt works could press upon the revolving bolt in the line of a radius thereof. If the tail of bolt works were introduced into the present slot, any hammering of the bolt works by the handle upon the periphery of the revolving bolt would tend to turn the revolving bolt upon its axis, and thus cause the stump to be pressed upon the wheel tumblers in such a manner as to facilitate picking, this result being due to the fact that the line of direction through the slot is not in line of the radius to the bolt, but in line of a sector thereof; further, the revolving bolt in a padlock, owing to its being necessary that it should enter a slot in the hasp, is weakest at the very point where it should be strongest, if it were to be used in connection with bolt work; and any good constructer would alter the revolving bolt of the padlock, so that it would be strongest where it is now weakest, in case it was desired to use a revolving bolt in combination with bolt works." It is a marked feature of Sargent's lock that the direction of the pressure of the bolt work of the door on the revolving bolt is in the line of a radius of that bolt, so that the pressure has no tendency to revolve the bolt. This feature is not found in the Butterworth padlock.

We are of opinion that, as against anything found in the old structures, there was patentable novelty in what Sargent did and what he claimed.

As to the question of infringement, the defendant's lock, Cole No. 2, has in it a bolt which turns on a pivot, and is substantially identical with the like bolt in Sargent's patent. It prevents and permits the retraction of the bolt work of the door in the same manner as Sargent's bolt. There is no sliding bolt. The turning bolt is arranged to serve as a stop to two sets of bolt works, instead of one; but in respect to one set, there is the same mode of operation in both locks. As the claim of Sargent's reissue does not require that the bearing of the rotating bolt should be distinct from the bearing of the wheels, the fact that in Cole No. 2 the bearing of the turning bolt is on the stud on which the wheels turn, makes no difference in principle, because the action of the bolt is as wholly separated and isolated from the wheels in the one lock as in the other, and in each the [548] strain from the bolt work is expended on the turning bolt and not on the wheels. So, too, the fact that in Sargent's patent the fence lever is connected with the turning bolt by a rack on the end of the lever engaging with cog teeth on the bolt; while in Cole No. 2 the end of the lever is pivoted directly to the turning bolt, does not affect the identity of the arrangement as part of the combination covered by claim 1 of the reissue. The defendant's lock must be held to infringe that claim.

On the question of damages, the defendant contends, that there was no sufficient or legal proof that the plaintiff suffered the damages reported and adjudged, or any other damages. The action of the master, the character of the exceptions to his report, and the view taken by the circuit court, are fully shown by its opinion, reported in 17 Blatchf. C. C. 244, which was as follows:

"The master reports that there is no basis, from the proofs adduced before him, to find what profits have been made by the defendant by the use of the 'turning bolt' (the infringing device) in the locks made and sold by it; and that therefore, on the testimony before him, he cannot find what profits, if any, are due from the defendant for the use of the 'turning bolt.'

The patent on which this suit is brought is a reissue granted January 2, 1872. The master reports that, after that time and in 1873, in consequence of the defendant's offering and selling to the plaintiff's principal customers and to the trade generally, locks containing the infringing device, at a less price than the plaintiff was obtaining, a reduction of prices was enforced on the plaintiff, such reduction being, in round numbers, $1 on each No. 5 lock and $2 on each No. 8 lock. Exception one, of the defendant, is to such finding and report, and alleges that the master should have reported that no such reduction was enforced and that there was no proof of the amount of any reduction caused by the defendant's infringement and that there was no method of computing such reduction, even if it actually existed.

The master also reports that it is in evidence that, during the period covered by the accounting, the plaintiff could have manufactured, in addition to the locks he did manufacture and without materially increasing his manufacturing facilities, all the locks manufactured and sold by the defendant. Exception 2 of the defendant is to such finding and report, and alleges that the master should have reported that no such additional manufacture by the plaintiff was possible, or that it was impossible without a very great extension of his facilities.

The master also reports that it is in evidence that, during the period covered by the accounting, the plaintiff would have made sales to many of the persons who were induced to purchase from the defendant, at his own established prices, had not the defendant offered its locks at lower prices. Exception 3 of the defendant is to that part of the report, and alleges that the master should have found and reported that no such sales would have been made; or that, even if made, they would not have been at the plaintiff's own established prices.

The master also reports that the plaintiff has suffered damage in respect to the matters to which exceptions 2 and 3 relate. Exception 4 of the defendant is to that part of the report, and alleges that the master should have found and reported no damage whatever from the competition of the defendant.

The master further reports that the locks sold by the defendant contained, in addition to the 'turning bolt,' a device patented by the Rosner patent, for which infringement a claim is made against the defendant in another suit; that as to the proportion of the reduction of prices above set forth, which should be allowed to the device claimed under the Rosner patent, it is claimed by the plaintiff and nowhere effectually disputed by the defendant, 'that, in computing the profits on these locks, one third belonged to and was charged by him to the Rosner patent;' and that, admitting this proportion, and allowing, in addition thereto, for any superior external attractions of the defendant's locks, and for the number of combinations which they had over those of the plaintiff, and for the shape of the case of the lock, and for the commercial success of the defendant in effecting sales, where the plaintiff would have failed, the master is of opinion that the plaintiff is entitled to recover from the defendant, as damages, one half of the amount of the reduction in prices caused by the defendant since January 2, 1872; that is, on 1,009 No. 3 locks, $1 per lock, being $1,009, and on 13,524 No. 5 locks, at 50c. per lock, $6,762, being a total of $7,771. Exception 5 of the defendant excepts to the finding and report that the plaintiff is entitled to recover from the defendant, as damages, one half of the amount of the reduction in prices caused by the defendant since January 2, 1872, and alleges that the master should have reported 'no reduction in prices, or no proof of such,' caused by any infringement by the defendant since said date, and 'hence no damages' to the plaintiff, 'and, consequently, no method of calculating them.' Exception 6 of the defendant excepts to the report for that the master erred in making the apportionment of the alleged reduction in the plaintiff's prices, charging one half thereof to the alleged infringement of the 'turning bolt' patent, and alleges that no basis existed, in the proof or in law, for such or for any apportionment, or for any award of damages. Exception 7 of the defendant excepts to the report for that the master erred in assessing damages which are not the damages suffered by the plaintiff, but are those suffered by the firm of Sargent & Greenleaf, and alleges that the master should have reported that the damage, if any, found to have been suffered by said firm, is not the damage of the plaintiff, who is only one member of said firm, but that the plaintiff's damage is merely a portion thereof. Exception 8 of the defendant excepts to the report for that the master erred in finding and reporting, as damages, the sum mentioned in his report, or any damages whatsoever, and in not reporting that there was no proof of any actual damage suffered by the plaintiff from the alleged infringement.

The defendant contends that the competition of the defendant was not the sole cause of the reduction of the plaintiff's prices, and that the proportionate effect of the defendant's competition is not attempted to be estimated or ascertained by the proofs. It alleges that the defendant is not responsible for the reduction made in 1873; that there were many other causes which contributed to this reduction; and that the lowering of prices was caused principally by the competition of other fire-proof safe lock makers, and notably the New Britain Lock Co., by the fact that safe makers were making and threatening to make their own safe locks, and by the general lowering of the prices of material and labor and the depression of business.

Reduction of prices, and consequent loss of profits, enforced by infringing competition, is a proper ground for awarding damages. The only question is as to the character and sufficiency of the evidence, in the particular case. I think that on the whole evidence, the reduction of prices by the plaintiff, after January 2, 1872, on safe locks containing his invention, is shown to have been directly and solely caused by the defendant's infringement.

The master, in his report, allows damages only for the reduction of prices on the locks sold by the plaintiff; that is, 1,009 No. 3 locks and 13,524 No. 5 locks. Although the master states that the plaintiff suffered damage in losing the sale of locks sold by the defendant, he awards no damages for that cause. He confines his award to the loss on the locks which the plaintiff sold.

The defendant also contends that the plaintiff is not entitled to recover from the defendant, as damages, the entire amount of the reduction enforced by the defendant's competition, but only the damages occasioned by the effect of the presence of the infringement; that the burden of proof is on the plaintiff to fix the value of, and to separate the effect of, the infringing devices; that he failed to do so by any proper proof; and that no basis was afforded to the master on which such damages could be computed. But, as the master allowed damages only for the reduction of prices on the locks sold by the plaintiff, and as the essential feature of those locks was the 'turning bolt' device, and as an essential feature of the infringing locks was the infringing 'turning bolt' device in them, and as the plaintiff could not sell his 'turning bolt' device unless it was embodied in a lock, and as he was thereby enabled to make his profit on the entire lock, and as he was deprived (by the acts of the defendant in selling at low prices locks containing the patented 'turning bolt' device) of the profit he would otherwise have made on the locks which [552] he actually sold containing the 'turning bolt' device, it seems plain that the defendant's infringement must be held to have caused the entire loss of the plaintiff by the reduction of prices, after allowing a proper sum for any other patented device contained in the defendant's locks and for any other causes which gave to the defendant an advantage in selling its locks. This is the basis on which the master proceeded, and it seems to me, on a consideration of the evidence, that the master has made all proper allowances and has arrived at a correct conclusion in fixing as damages, one half of the amount of reduction in prices.

The plaintiff, as the owner of the patent, is entitled to recover the damages in this case. He may be accountable to his copartner for a part of them, but the copartner could not sue on the patent, for such damages or any part of them."

This is a case where the patentee granted no licenses and had no established license fee, but supplied the demand for his lock himself, and was able to supply that demand. The market for the lock was limited to safe makers. No one but a safe maker wanted or would buy such a lock. The master was unable to determine, from the proofs, what profits, if any, the defendant had made from the use of the turning bolt. He disallowed all items of damage from the loss to the plaintiff of the sale of infringing locks sold by the defendant, and confined his award to the enforced reduction of price on the locks which the plaintiff sold, caused by the infringement. That this is a proper item of damages, if proved, is clear. It is a pecuniary injury caused by the infringement, and is the subject of an award of damages, although the defendant may have made no profits and the plaintiff may have had no established license fee. As the plaintiff, at the time of the infringement, availed himself of his exclusive right by keeping his patent a monopoly, and granting no licenses, the difference between his pecuniary condition after the infringement and what his condition would have been if the infringement had not occurred is to be measured, so far as his own sales of locks [553] are concerned, by the difference between the money he would have realized from such sales if the infringement had not interfered with such monopoly, and the money he did realize from such sales. If such difference can be ascertained by proper and satisfactory evidence, it is a proper measure of damages. The damages to be recovered (R. S. §§ 4919, 4921) are "actual damages;" and they may properly include such losses to the plaintiff as were allowed in this case. McComb v. Brodie, 1 Woods, 153, 161; Philp v. Nock, 17 Wall. 460, 462 [84 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 679].

The turning bolt was the essential feature of the Sargent lock. The defendant adopted Sargent's arrangement, and then reduced the price of the lock, forcing Sargent to do the same in order to hold his trade. The evidence shows that the reduction of prices by Sargent was solely due to the defendant's infringement. The only competitor with Sargent in the use of his turning bolt arrangement, during the period covered by the accounting, was the defendant.

We think the master made proper allowances for all other causes which could have affected the plaintiff's prices; that the proper deduction was made for the use of the Rosner device in the defendant's lock; and that the damages awarded are no greater than the testimony warranted.

The decision that the plaintiff, as owner of the patent, was entitled to recover the damages, was correct.

The bill alleges infringement of the reissue generally and especially of the first claim. The answer alleges that the reissue is not for the same invention as the original patent. The defendant contends that this is true as to claims 2 and 4 of the reissue, and that as no disclaimer of those claims was entered at the patent office before this suit was brought, the recovery in this case should have been without costs, under the provisions of sections 4917 and 4922 of the Revised Statutes, and the decision in Gage v. Herring, 107 U. S. 640, 648 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 605]. That case holds that the invalidity of a new claim in a reissue does not impair the validity of a claim in it which is only a repetition and separate statement of a claim in the original patent. It also holds that a reissued patent is within the letter and the spirit of the provisions of sections 4917 and 4922; and that where a [554] defendant has infringed such a restated valid claim of a reissue, the plaintiff, on filing a disclaimer of the new and invalid claims of the reissue, may have a decree, without costs, for the infringement of such valid claim, where there has been no unreasonable delay in entering the disclaimer.

There can be no doubt that claim 4 of the reissue was invalid, as an unlawful expansion of the original patent, on an application for the reissue filed more than five years after the original patent was granted. But the patent has expired, and therefore no disclaimer can now be filed. There was no unreasonable delay in filing a disclaimer, as the validity of claim 4 was sanctioned by the commissioner of patents in granting the reissue, and this suit was commenced in July, 1872, and the claim was not held invalid by the circuit court (both the interlocutory and final decrees having been entered before the decisions of this court, at October term, 1881, on the subject of reissued patents, were made).

The result, therefore, is that the decree below must be reversed as to the award of costs and affirmed in all other respects, with interest until paid, at the same rate per annum that decrees bear in the courts of the State of New York, and the case be remanded to the Circuit Court, with a direction to modify the decree accordingly. Each party will bear his own costs in this court and one half of the expense of printing the record. Silsby v. Foote, 20 How. 378, 387 [61 U. S. bk. 15, L. ed. 953, 956].

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

ABBY KNAPP, Plff. in Err.,
v.
HOMŒOPATHIC MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 411-415.)

Life insurance—construction of policy.

A policy of insurance provided that after two annual premiums had been paid, the insured should, in case of default in payment of premiums, be entitled to have the policy continued in force for a period of time to be determined in a way provided, or to receive a paid up policy for the full amount of premium paid, but with this proviso: "that unless this policy shall be surrendered, and such paid up policy shall be applied for within ninety days after such nonpayment as aforesaid, then this policy shall be void and of no effect." Held, that failure of the insured to surrender the policy and make election within ninety days after default deprived her of the right to have the policy temporarily continued in force, as well as of the right to a paid up policy.

[No. 167.]

Submitted Mar. 16, 1886. Decided Apr. 5, 1886.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Massachusetts.

Statement by Mr. Justice Gray:

This was an action brought March 19, 1878, by a citizen of Massachusetts against a corporation established by the laws of New York, upon a policy of insurance, by which the Company, "in consideration of the representations made to them in the application for this policy, which is hereby made a part of this contract, and of the sum of $47.40 to them in hand paid by Abby Knapp, wife of Charles L. Knapp, and of the quarterly payment of a like amount on or before the sixteenth days of July, October, January and April in every year during the continuance of this policy," insured the life of the husband, for the sole use of the wife, in the amount of $5,000 for the term of his natural life, beginning on April 16, 1869, payable at the office of the Company in New York to her, if living, in thirty days after notice and proof of his death.

The application declared that "neglect to pay the premium on or before the day it becomes due shall and will render the policy null and void, and forfeit all payments made thereon, unless otherwise specially provided for in the policy."

The policy contained the following clause: "This policy of insurance, after two annual premiums shall have been paid thereon, shall not be forfeited or become void by reason of the nonpayment of premium; but the party insured shall be entitled to have it continued in force for a period to be determined as follows, to wit: the net value of the policy when the premium becomes due and is not paid shall be ascertained according to the 'combined experience' or 'actuaries' rate of mortality, with interest at 4 per cent per annum. Four fifths of such net value shall be considered as a net single premium of temporary insurance, and the term for which it will insure shall be determined according to the age of the party at the time of the lapse of premium and the assumptions of mortality and interest aforesaid; or, at his option, may receive a paid up policy for the full amount of premium paid; Provided, that unless this policy shall be surrendered and such paid up policy shall be applied for within ninety days after such nonpayment as aforesaid, then this policy shall be void and of no effect."

A trial by jury having been duly waived, the circuit court found the following facts: the policy was issued April 14, 1869, in the City of New York, where the husband and wife then lived. It was taken out by the husband, who signed the application in the wife's name as her attorney. It was in the possession of the wife in 1871, and of the husband before and afterwards. The premiums were paid for several years, mostly by the husband, but one or two by the wife. She lived apart from her husband nearly all the time after February, 1872. On January 16, 1874, a premium became due and was not paid. On February 26, 1874, the husband represented to the Company that his wife was dead; the Company believed the representation to be true, and he surrendered the policy, taking from the Company $260 in money, and a new policy, concerning which the only evidence was that it had been forfeited before his death, which happened September 17, 1874. Very soon after his death, the wife sent to the Company for information about the policy, and her agent was told by the Company that it was forfeited. A considerable time after this, being advised that she might have some rights under the policy, she gave due notice and proof of loss, and more than thirty days afterwards brought this action to recover the full amount insured. The net value of the policy when the nonpayment of the premium occurred, if reckoned in the mode pointed out in the policy, would have been sufficient to continue it in force until after the death of the husband.

On these facts, the circuit court ruled as matter of law that the policy was forfeited by the neglect to pay the premiums and to call for a paid-up policy, and rendered judgment for the defendant and allowed a bill of exceptions tendered by the plaintiff.

Messrs. Saml. W. Clifford, Jr., and Mark A. Blaisdell, for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Stillman B. Allen and Alfred Hemenway, for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Gray, after stating the case as above reported, delivered the opinion of the court: [413]

The canceling of the policy, in consequence of the husband's fraudulent representation that the wife was dead, had no effect upon her rights. It is not relied on by the defendant, and there is nothing in the case to show that it in any way influenced the conduct of the plaintiff by preventing her from paying the premiums or making the election required by the policy.

The contract of insurance, made and to be performed in New York, between a corporation and a citizen of that State, is to be governed by the law of New York. By that law, in respect to the payment of or the neglect to pay premiums, a married woman stands like any other person insured. Baker v. Union Mut. L. Ins. Co. 43 N. Y. 283. And there is no statute which affects this case. [414]

The decision, therefore, depends upon the true construction of the nonforfeiture clause in the policy.

The single purpose of this clause is that, after two annual premiums shall have been paid, a failure to pay any subsequent premium shall not have the effect of avoiding the whole insurance, but the assured shall have the right to an insurance for such a sum and such a time as the premiums already paid would equitably cover. The policy does not declare that it shall continue of itself, without any act of the assured. On the contrary, it stipulates that "The party insured shall be entitled to have it continued in force for a period to be determined" by ascertaining, according to certain rules, the net value of the policy at the time of failure to pay a premium, and making the amount of that value, considered as a single premium, the basis for determining the time for which there shall be a temporary insurance for the full amount of the original policy. It then prescribes an alternative by which the party insured, "at his option, may receive a paid-up policy for the full amount of premium paid."

In short, the forfeiture of the policy, by a failure to pay any premium after the first two, is not absolute but qualified; and the party insured is entitled to be insured according to the sum already paid in premiums, either for the full amount of the original policy, so long as that sum would pay for it, or else for the full term of the original policy for such amount as that sum would pay for.

Then follows the proviso "that unless this policy shall be surrendered and such paid-up policy shall be applied for within ninety days after such nonpayment as aforesaid, then this policy shall be void and of no effect."

It is contended on behalf of the plaintiff that the words "such paid-up policy" show that this provision refers only to a new insurance determined by the second method; that is, for the full term of the original policy and for an amount depending upon the sum already paid in premiums; and that if the assured does not seasonably apply for such an insurance, she still remains insured for the full amount for a time computed according to the sum paid. [415]

But the proviso does not say that upon a failure to surrender the original policy and to apply for a paid-up policy, the original policy shall stand good for a temporary insurance; but that it "shall be void and of no effect." The result of either of the two methods already prescribed, for determining the extent of the insurance, is a paid-up policy. According to either method, there is to be no further payment of premium, nor is the original policy continued in force; but the assured is to have the benefit of the sum already paid in premiums, by being insured, either for the amount of the original policy for a time to be determined, or for the time of the original policy for an amount to be determined. Taking the whole clause together, it is clear that the assured is to have the benefit of that sum in one of two ways at her election, and that election must be made within a certain time. As that time expired without any election or any excuse for not making one, the forfeiture became complete under the express provisions of the policy, and the circuit court rightly held that the action could not be maintained.

Judgment affirmed.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

---

[430] WILLIAM STONE, Plf. in Err.,

v.

STATE OF SOUTH CAROLINA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 430-433.

Removal of causes—when jurisdiction of state court ceases—trial of issues—State as party—separable controversy.

1. A state court is not bound to surrender its jurisdiction of a suit on a petition for removal until a case has been made which on its face shows that the petitioner has a right to the transfer.

2. All issues of fact made on the petition for removal must be tried in the circuit court, but the state court is at liberty to determine for itself whether, on the face of the record, a removal has been effected; and if it decides against the removal, its action will, after final judgment, be reviewable in this court.

3. An action in which a State is a party is not removable from a state to a federal court, on the ground of citizenship.

4. An action against partners for money paid to them as such is not removable, unless all the parties on one side of the controversy unite in the petition for removal.

[No. 144.]

Argued Mar. 5, 1886. Decided Apr. 5, 1886.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of South Carolina.

The case is stated by the court.

Mr. Wm. E. Earle, for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Charles Richardson Miles, Atty-Gen. of South Carolina, and James Lowndes, for defendant in error.

[431] Mr. Chief Justice Waite delivered the opinion of the court:

This suit was brought by the State of South Carolina, in the Court of Common Pleas of Richland County, on the first of August, 1877, against Daniel T. Corbin and William Stone, partners, as attorneys at law under the name of Corbin & Stone, to recover a balance claimed to be due for moneys collected by the firm for the State and not paid over. On the 27th of April, 1878, Stone presented to the court a petition for the removal of the suit to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of South Carolina. The statement in the petition material to the question arising on this writ of error is as follows

"That the petitioner is now, and was at the time when this action was commenced, a citizen of the State of New York and a resident therein; and his codefendant is a citizen of South Carolina; and the plaintiff is also a citizen of the State of South Carolina. That under and by virtue of the Statutes of the United States and of the State of South Carolina, this suit is one in which there can be a final determination of the controversy, so far as the petitioner is concerned, without the presence of his codefendant as a party to the cause."

The state court proceeded with the suit notwithstanding the petition, and after a trial gave judgment against both defendants. During the whole of such proceeding Stone denied the jurisdiction of the court after the filing of his petition. The supreme court of the State affirmed the judgment of the common pleas; and to reverse this judgment of affirmance the present writ of error was brought.

A state court is not bound to surrender its jurisdiction of a suit on a petition for removal, until a case has been made which on its face shows that the petitioner has a right to the transfer. Yules v. Voss, 99 U. S. 545, and Removal Cases, 100 U. S. 474 [Bk. 25, L. ed. 356, 600]. It is undoubtedly true, as was said in Steamship Co. v. Tugman, 106 U. S. 122 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 89], that upon the filing of the petition and bond—the suit being removable under the statute—the jurisdiction of the state court absolutely ceases, and that of the Circuit Court of the United States immediately attaches; but still, as the right of removal is statutory, before a party can avail himself of it, he must show upon the record that his is a case which comes within the provision of the statute. As was said in Ins. Co. v. Pechner, 95 U. S. 185 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 427], "His petition for removal when filed becomes a part of the record in the cause. It should state facts which, when taken in connection with such as already appear, entitle him to the transfer. If he fails in this, he has not, in law, shown to the court that it cannot 'proceed further with the suit.' Having once acquired jurisdiction, the court may proceed until it has been judicially informed that its power over the cause has been suspended." The mere filing of a petition for the removal of a suit, which is not removable, does not work a transfer. To accomplish this the suit must be one that may be removed, and the petition must show a right in the petitioner to demand the removal. This being made to appear on the record, and the necessary security having been given, the power of the state court in the case ends and that of the circuit court begins.

All issues of fact made upon the petition for removal must be tried in the circuit court, but the state court is at liberty to determine for itself whether, on the face of the record, a removal has been effected. If it decides against the removal and proceeds with the cause notwithstanding the petition, its ruling on that question will be reviewable here after final judgment under section 709 of the Revised Statutes.

Removal Cases [supra]; R. R. Co. v. Miss. 102 U. S. 141; Kern v. Huidekoper, 103 U. S. 485, and R. R. Co. v. Koontz, 104 U. S. 15 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 98, 354, 646]; Chesapeake & Ohio R. R. Co. v. White, 111 U. S. 137 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 379]. If the state court proceeds after a petition for removal it does so at the risk of having its final judgment reversed if the record on its face shows that when the petition was filed that court ought to have given up its jurisdiction. What effect the writ of certiorari provided for in section 7 of the Act of 1875, to require the state court to make return of the record to the circuit court, would have upon the further power of the state court to proceed, we do not now decide, as no such writ was issued in this case.

It only remains to consider whether on the face of this record it appears that the suit was removed from the state court by the presentation of the petition of Stone, and about that little need be said. It is not pretended that the suit was one arising under the Constitution or laws of the United States, and it certainly is not one between citizens of different States. The State of South Carolina is the sole plaintiff; and the defendants are citizens, one of South Carolina and the other of New York. The cause of action is joint, and only one of the defendants petitions for removal. There is no statute which authorizes the removal of a suit between a State and citizens on the ground of citizenship, for a State cannot in the nature of things be a citizen of any State. In Ames v. Kansas, 111 U. S. 449 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 482], the removal of a suit arising under the Constitution and laws of the United States brought by a State against a corporation amenable to its own process, was sustained; but this was because of the subject matter of the action, and not because of the citizenship of the parties.

Neither is there any separable controversy in the case such as might, if the necessary citizenship existed, allow Stone alone to remove the suit without joining Corbin with him in the petition for removal. The money sued for was received by the defendants as partners, and they are liable jointly for its payment, if they are liable at all. Such a case is not removable unless all the parties on one side of the controversy unite in the petition. Removal Cases, 100 U. S. 457 [Bk. 25, L. ed. 593]; Blake v. McKim, 103 U. S. 336, and Hyde v. Ruble, 104 U. S. 409 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 563, 824].

The judgment of the Supreme Court of South Carolina is affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

UNION TRUST COMPANY OF NEW YORK, Appt.,
v.
ILLINOIS MIDLAND RAILWAY COMPANY ET AL.

SIMON BORG ET AL., Partners, as S. BORG AND CO., Appts.,
v.
ILLINOIS MIDLAND RAILWAY COMPANY ET AL.

WILLIAM WARING ET AL., Partners, as WARING BROTHERS, Appts.,
v.
UNION TRUST COMPANY OF NEW YORK ET AL.

STOUGHTON J. FLETCHER ET AL., Partners, as S. A. FLETCHER & CO., Appts.
v.
ILLINOIS MIDLAND RAILWAY COMPANY ET AL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 434-451.)

Railroads—consolidation—bond secured by mortgages—receiver's certificates—priority of lien—jurisdiction—practice—notice—costs.

The Peoria, Atlanta and Decatur Railroad Company, the Paris and Decatur Railroad Company, and the Paris and Terre Haute Railroad Company, three Illinois corporations, each constructed a certain line of road and issued bonds secured by mortgages thereon. Subsequently each of the other companies conveyed all of its property to the Peoria, Atlanta and Decatur Company, and that company soon thereafter changed its name to that of the Illinois Midland Railway Company, and issued its bonds secured by a mortgage to the Union Trust Company covering all of its property, including that purchased from the other companies. Pending subsequent litigation in a state court and the court below, to which various stockholders, judgment creditors, bondholders and others were or became parties, the property was controlled and operated under direction of said courts by successive receivers, who issued eighteen distinct series of receiver's certificates on account of repairs, taxes, betterments and operating expenses. Many of the questions presented here arise out of the issue of said receiver's certificates, the contest being substantially one between the Paris and Decatur bondholders and those who claim priority of lien as holders of said certificates or otherwise; and this court holds:

1. That certificates issued for necessary repairs are entitled to priority.
2. That the power of a court of equity having charge of railroad property to make necessary repairs does not depend upon the consent of those interested, nor upon prior notice to them.
3. That a subsequent opportunity to be heard, on evidence, as to the propriety of the expenditures and of making them a first lien, is judicially equivalent to prior notice, the receiver and those lending money to him, on certificates issued on orders made without prior notice, taking the risk of the final action of the court. But such action will only be affected by such objections to the merits of the orders as would have been availing if made before their entry.
4. That the bill filed in the state court by Hervey (the holder of a majority of the stock of the corporations), and certain judgment creditors, was sufficient to enable the court to administer the property as a trust fund and marshal the debts, making proper parties before adjudging the merits.
5. That certificates issued to pay tax liens are entitled to priority.
6. That third persons, not connected with the case or with the parties, who bought directly from the receiver his certificates, were not bound to see to the application of the proceeds.
7. That holders of certificates sold within the limit of discount fixed by the court, are entitled to their face with interest.
8. That certificates issued to replace earnings diverted from paying for operating expenses and ordinary repairs, to pay for necessary betterments or improvements, leaving large debts on account of such expenses and repairs, are entitled to priority.
9. That, in view of the facts of the case, the Paris and Decatur bondholders cannot insist that the want of affirmative assent by them or their trustee deprived the court of power to create, on the corpus of the property, any lien taking priority over the mortgage lien.
10. That while the ordinary expenses of the receiver in operating the road are first payable out of income, if any, the corpus may be resorted to when the items are proper, after scrutiny and opportunity for those opposing to be heard.

11. That wages due the employés of the Illinois Midland Company within six months immediately preceding the appointment of the first receiver, were properly allowed priority.

12. That the terms of the orders appointing the various receivers did not impair or exclude the ample authority of the court to order said ordinary expenses and "six months' labor claims" paid out of of the property itself, with priority.

13. That the final decree of the court below properly provided that the receiver's certificates, so made liens prior to the bonds, should be borne by the three several railroad properties in proportion to their relative lengths, although the terminal rentals and charges of the different roads were relatively unequal.

14. That the legality of the sales of their properties by the other companies to the Peoria, Atlanta and Decatur Company cannot now be questioned by the Paris and Decatur bondholders, their acquiescence pending the litigation and the contraction of debts by the receivers, with respect to the whole line operated as a unit, amounting to an estoppel.

15. That the expenses of the various receivership, incurred under the direction of the court for the benefit of all the roads, should be borne by each in proportion to its length, such expenses not being chargeable to the purchasing company alone.

16. That 994 bonds of the Paris and Decatur issue held by Waring Brothers, having been surrendered and exchanged for Illinois Midland bonds, were canceled and are now invalid and cannot be placed on a footing with other Paris and Decatur bonds not so exchanged, surrendered and canceled.

17. That no valid objection lies to the clause in the decree which provides that the several properties shall be offered for sale separately and then en masse; that the highest bid received for the entire properties shall be accepted, if it exceeds the aggregate of the highest bids for them when offered separately; and that the proceeds shall then be applied in proportion to said separate bids.

18. That certain claims for terminal facilities, track rents, traffic balances and labor performed, are entitled to priority.

19. That claims for certain large amounts borrowed from various banks by one of the receivers without previous authority of the court are not entitled to priority, although they were applied toward the payment of the proper expenses of the receivership.

20. That eight receiver's notes aggregating a large amount, although representing, in the main at least, proper expenses of the receivership are not entitled to priority, the receiver having borrowed the money for which they were given without previous authority of the court.

21. That claims for rent and extraordinary depreciation of rolling stock, right of way and certain other claims, are not entitled to priority.

22. That, with the exception of debts for taxes and receiver's certificates issued to pay taxes, there should be no priority or preference among debts and claims allowed precedence over mortgage bonds of any road, notwithstanding certain orders made by the court below.

[Nos. 1212, 1213, 1214, 1225.]

Submitted Jan. 11, 1886. Decided April 5, 1886.

APPEALS from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of Illinois.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court:

Messrs. Wheeler H. Peckham, and Edward S. Isham, for the Union Trust Company.

Messrs. Edward S. Isham, Robert T. Lincoln and Leopold Wallach, for Simon Borg and others, partners, as Borg & Co.

Messrs. John M. Palmer and Josiah M. Clokey, for William T. Sylvester and others.

Messrs. John M. Butler, John T. Dye and W. P. Fishback, for Fletcher and Churchman.

Messrs. H. Crea and Charles A. Ewing, for Waring Brothers.

Mr. H. S. Greene, for the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific R. Co.

Mr. Justice, Blatchford delivered the opinion of the court:

The Peoria, Atlanta and Decatur Railroad Company was incorporated as an Illinois corporation, in 1869, to construct a railroad from Peoria, in Tazewell County, in a general southeasterly direction, through Atlanta, in Logan County, to Decatur, in Macon County. Such of the road as was constructed was built in 1873 and 1874, from a point five miles east of Peoria, on what is now the Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific Railroad, to a place called Maroa, on the Illinois Central Railroad, thirteen miles north of Decatur. It did not reach either Peoria or Decatur, and the company owned no station grounds or terminal facilities at either place, but used, by lease, five miles of what is now the Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific Railroad, to reach Peoria, and thirteen miles of the Illinois Central Railroad, to reach Decatur. On the 25th of April, 1872, the company executed a mortgage to James F. Secor, as trustee. The mortgage recited that the company had commenced to construct a railroad to "extend from Cunningham's crossing, five miles from the City of Peoria, on the Toledo, Peoria and Warsaw Railway, thence southeast, to a point at or near to the City of Decatur," "a distance of about sixty-seven miles," and it covered the company's franchises, and its road and property, as constructed and to be constructed, acquired and to be acquired, "commencing at Cunningham's crossing, five miles from the City of Peoria, on the Toledo, Peoria and Warsaw Railway, to the City of Decatur," "a distance of sixty-seven miles." It was given to secure 1,300 coupon bonds of the company, of $1,000 each, payable to bearer, amounting to $1,300,000, carrying semi-annual interest at 7 per cent per annum, and payable May 1, 1902. The mortgage provided that on default continuing more than sixty days in the payment of any interest on any bond, the trustee, on the request of the holders of a majority of the bonds, might and should take actual possession of the mortgaged property, and operate the road, and receive its income, to pay the bonds, or, on the written request of the holders of at least one half of the outstanding bonds, cause the mortgaged property to be sold at public auction, and convey it to the purchaser, and, "after deducting from the proceeds of said sale the costs and expenses thereof, and of managing such property," apply the proceeds to pay the principal and interest of the bonds. The mortgage also provided that the trustee should "be entitled to have proper compensation for every labor or service performed by him in the discharge of this trust, in case he shall be compelled to take possession of said premises and manage the same." This mortgage was delivered and duly recorded.

The Paris and Decatur Railroad Company was incorporated as an Illinois corporation, in 1861, to construct a railroad from Paris, in Edgar County, westwardly to reach Decatur. This road was constructed, in 1871 and 1872, from Paris to a point on the Illinois Central Railroad about two miles south of Decatur, and although it had its own station and grounds at Decatur, it entered them by using, by lease, about two miles of the track of the Illinois Central Railroad. On the first of July, 1871, the Paris and Decatur Company executed a mortgage to Joseph U. Orvis and William Adams, Senior, covering its franchises and its line of road and property, constructed and to be constructed, acquired and to be acquired, extending from Paris to Decatur, "a distance of seventy-five miles," to secure 800 coupon bonds of $1,000 each, and 800 coupon bonds of $500 each, in all $1,200,000. The mortgage was delivered and recorded, and the bonds were put into the hands of the trustees, and some of them were issued but afterwards retired, and all of them were destroyed, but the mortgage remains on record, not released. On the first of July, 1872, the Paris and Decatur Company executed a mortgage to the Union Trust Company, a New York corporation, covering its franchises, and its road and property, constructed and to be constructed, acquired and to be acquired, extending from Paris to Decatur, "a distance of seventy-five miles," to secure 2,400 coupon bonds, of $500 each, payable to bearer, in all $1,200,000, carrying semi-annual interest at 7 per cent per annum, and payable July 1, 1892. The mortgage provided that in case default in paying any interest on any bond should continue for six months after demand, the principal of all the bonds should forthwith become due, and the lien might be at once enforced, in which case it should be lawful for the trustee to enter on the mortgaged property, and to use and operate it until it should be sold under the power contained in the mortgage, or under the decree of a competent court; "And until such time, and from time to time, to make all needful repairs and replacements, and such useful alterations, additions and improvements to said railroad as may be necessary for the proper working of the same, and to receive the tolls, freights, incomes, rents, issues and profits thereof, and after deducting the expenses of operating and managing the said railroad and other property, and of the said repairs, replacements, additions and improvements, as well as just compensation for its own services and for the services and disbursements of such attorneys and counsel as it may employ, to apply the moneys accruing as aforesaid to the payment of said bonds pro rata." The mortgage also provided that, in case default should be made and should continue as aforesaid, the trustee might and, upon the written request of the holders of at least one thousand of the bonds outstanding, should, foreclose the mortgage by legal proceedings, or should sell the mortgaged property at public auction at New York or at Paris, and convey it to the purchaser; and that in case of such sale, the trustee should deduct from the proceeds its just allowances for the expenses thereof, including attorney's and counsel fees and disbursements, "and all expenses which may be incurred in operating, managing or maintaining the said railroad, or in managing the business thereof, as well as just compensation for the services of said trustee," and thereafter apply the proceeds to pay the principal and interest of the bonds pro rata. This mortgage was delivered and duly recorded.

The Paris and Terre Haute Railroad Company was organized as a corporation, under the general railroad laws of Illinois, in 1873, and the road was built in 1873 and 1874. It runs eastwardly from Paris to Farrington, in Illinois, a point on the St. Louis, Vandalia and Terre Haute Railroad, seven miles west of Terre Haute, and the company uses, by lease, the track of the latter road to reach Terre Haute. On the first of April, 1874, the company executed a mortgage to the Union Trust Company covering its franchises and its road and property, constructed and to be constructed, acquired and to be acquired, extending from Paris to the junction with the St. Louis, Vandalia and Terre Haute Railroad, a distance of about fourteen miles, to secure 280 coupon bonds, of $1,000 each, payable to bearer, in all $280,000, carrying semi-annual interest at the rate of 7 per cent per annum, and payable April 1, 1894. The mortgage contained like provisions with the Paris and Decatur mortgage as to what might be done after six months' default in interest, and as to taking possession of the property, and as to the powers of the trustee, and as to foreclosure or sale and disposition of the proceeds. This mortgage was delivered and duly recorded.

On the 19th of September, 1874, the Paris and Decatur Company, conveyed by deed to the Peoria and Atlanta and Decatur Company in consideration that the latter company thereby assumed all the bonded and floating indebtedness of the former company, the railroad then in operation, described as extending from Paris to Decatur, "passing into and through the Counties of Edgar, Coles, Douglas, Moultrie and Macon," including the franchises of the former company, and all its property acquired and to be acquired. [441]

On the same day the Paris and Terre Haute Company conveyed by deed to the Peoria, Atlanta and Decatur Company, in consideration that the latter company thereby assumed the payment of "all the bonded and floating indebtedness" of the former company, the railroad then in operation, described as extending from Paris to the line between Indiana and Illinois, "passing into the Counties of Edgar and Clark," including the franchises of the former company, and all its property acquired and to be acquired.

These purchases on these terms were authorized by the stockholders and directors of the purchasing company, and by the respective stockholders and directors of the selling companies, and the deeds were delivered and duly recorded.

On November 2, 1874, the Peoria, Atlanta and Decatur Company, under the provisions of the general law of Illinois, changed its name to that of the "Illinois Midland Railway Company." On the first of January, 1875, that company executed to the Union Trust Company a mortgage covering all of its property, including that so purchased, to secure 8,350 coupon bonds, of $500 each, in all $4,175,000, bearing semi-annual interest at 7 per cent per annum, and payable January 1, 1905. This mortgage was delivered and recorded.

On the 11th of September, 1875, Robert G. Hervey and two other parties filed a bill in equity in the Circuit Court of Edgar County, Illinois, against the Illinois Midland Railway Company. It set forth that Hervey owned a majority of the stock of the corporations above named, and that the other plaintiffs were judgment creditors of the Paris and Decatur Company, with executions returned unsatisfied; that [442] there were judgments to the amount of about $200,000 against the Illinois Midland Company, on account of the construction and operation of the various corporations, and pending suits against it for about $100,000, on like account and executions out against it for over $100,000, on debts of the various corporations, on which its property was advertised for sale; that certain creditors and stockholders of the Paris and Decatur Company, a minority in number and amount, were threatening to have the Illinois Midland Company and its property placed in the hands of a receiver; that the plaintiffs represented a majority of the stock in all of the corporations, and desired to have a receiver of the franchises, railways and rolling stock of the corporations appointed immediately and without further notice, or the rights of the creditors and stockholders would be irreparably prejudiced; that negotiations were pending, which the plaintiffs believed would be successful, to raise sufficient money to pay off all judgments, liens and claims against the company, if left under the present control, or under that of the holders of a majority of the stock; that to effect such loans or advances of money it was absolutely necessary that the respective debts of the various corporations should be ascertained, and when their respective liabilities to each other and to their respective creditors were fixed, they could, on their joint stock and assets, raise sufficient money to relieve them from their embarrassments and pay all their creditors; that, if a receiver was appointed to take charge of them and settle their affairs, their credit would be restored as soon as their condition should be adjudged by the court; and that they had ample assets, if not sacrificed by sales on execution and construction liens, to pay all indebtedness and leave a sufficient surplus to run the road for the benefit of the stockholders. The prayer of the bill was that a receiver be appointed of all the rights and franchises of the Illinois Midland Company, and of all the property in its control; and that an account be taken of all the claims, liens and liabilities of its stockholders and creditors, and of those of the corporations above named, and they be ordered to be paid and adjusted, as the respective rights [443] and interests of such stockholders and creditors should appear; and for further and other relief, according to equity.

On the same day the Illinois Midland Company appeared to the bill by attorney, and waived notice and submitted itself to the court for such order in the premises as might in equity be right and proper; and the judge of the court, at chambers, made an order appointing as receiver George Dole, of Paris, and requiring him to give a bond for $75,000, with security, and then to "forthwith take possession of all the personal, real and mixed property of every kind belonging to or in the possession of said Illinois Midland Railway Company, including the property formerly owned and possessed by the Peoria, Atlanta and Decatur Railroad Company, the Paris and Decatur Railroad Company, and the Paris and Terre Haute Railroad Company; and if necessary to sue for, in the name of said receiver, and recover, all the property of said company or companies, whether real, personal or mixed, and whether in possession or in action." The order also provided as follows:

"It is further ordered, adjudged and decreed, that said receiver be and is hereby empowered and directed to carry on the business of said railway companies until the respective rights of the parties in interest can be fully ascertained and determined, under and subject to the revision and direction of this court, and until otherwise ordered by this court, and to use and employ the property, franchises, rights of way, roadbed, tracks, locomotives, rolling stock, machinery, fixtures, and property of whatever kind or nature; and said receiver shall be, and hereby is, invested with all the rights and franchises vested by law in said railway company or companies, in the execution of the duties and trusts aforesaid. Said receiver shall have authority to employ all necessary and proper agents, attorneys, officers and laborers, and to fix and alter the compensation of said agents, attorneys, officers and laborers, subject to the revision of this court. Said receiver shall also have authority, subject to the revision of this court, to make such repairs and necessary additions to said railway, or railroads, and property, as may be essential to the interests and safety of the same, and proper in his judgment for carrying on said business; also to make all contracts that may be necessary in carrying on the business of said company or companies, subject to like supervision of this court; also to collect in his own name, as receiver aforesaid, all debts, claims or demands, of whatever kind or nature, owing, or that may become due and owing, to the said company or companies, or to said receiver, from any and all sources. Said receiver is also ordered to make a full, true and correct inventory of all the property that may come into his hands as such receiver. It is further ordered, adjudged and decreed, that, out of the moneys that shall come into the hands of said receiver from the operation of said railway, he shall: first, pay all current expenses incident to the creation or administration of this trust, and to the operating of said railway or railroads; second, pay all sums due or to become due connecting or intersecting lines of railroads, arising from the interchange of business, and for track service of other railroads used by said Illinois Midland Railway Company in the operation of its lines, and all amounts now legally due from said railway company or companies for taxes; third, pay all amounts due to all operatives and employés, and attorneys and agents of said company or companies, for any service rendered said company or companies since the 11th day of March, A. D. 1875; fourth, pay all amounts due for supplies purchased and used in operating said railway or railroads by said company or companies, for supplies furnished to laborers and credited against their labor, since the 11th day of March, A. D. 1875; fifth, and all amounts due from said railway company for or on account of the rental of rolling stock; and the money belonging to said railway company, except as heretofore directed, shall be held by said receiver until he is authorized to disburse the same under the order or decree of this court, sixth, and said receiver is further authorized, in case it is proper in his judgment, with the sanction of the court, to use any balance of funds arising from the operating of said railway or railroads, for the purpose of protecting such of the real or personal property of said corporation or corporations, under lien, sale, pledge, mortgage or contract, from sacrifice, by the payment of interest or principal or otherwise, or by the renewal of such pledge or lien, mortgage or contract. It is further ordered that, upon demand, the said company or companies, their officers or agents, shall forthwith [445] deliver over to the receiver all the property aforesaid, and that neither said company or companies, nor any officer or agent or employé of said companies, shall interfere with or molest the possession or enjoyment of any of said property in the possession of or placed under the control of said receiver. It is further ordered that said receiver shall retain possession and continue to discharge the duties and trusts aforesaid, until the further order of this court in the premises; and that he shall, from time to time, make report of his doings in the premises, and may, from time to time, apply to this court for such other and further order and direction in the premises as he may deem necessary and requisite to a due administration of said trust; and said receiver is hereby vested, in addition to the powers aforesaid, with all the general powers of receiver in cases of this kind, subject to the supervision of this court." The bond was given, and was approved by the court, and at September Term, 1875, an order was made entering of record the order at chambers, and the receiver's bond and oath, and directing him to proceed, as before ordered.

On the 16th of October, 1875, an amended bill was filed, the plaintiffs in which were Hervey, and also William Waring, Henry Waring and Charles Waring, partners as Waring Brothers, and thirty-one other persons. It set forth that Hervey then owned 27,500 shares, or $1,375,000, of the 32,000 shares, at $50 each, or $1,600,000, of the capital stock of the Paris and Decatur Company; and 14,200 shares, or $1,420,000, of the 20,000 shares, at $100 each, or $2,000,000, of the capital stock of the Peoria, Atlanta and Decatur Company; and 4,500 shares, at $100 each, or $450,000, being the entire capital stock of the Paris and Terre Haute Company. It also set forth that Waring Brothers then owned one fourth or $500,000 of the capital stock of the Illinois Midland Company, and 1,548 of the bonds of that Company, and 885 others of its bonds, which they had taken in exchange for 885 bonds of the Paris and Decatur Company, of like amount. The other plaintiffs were judgment and general creditors of the four corporations, whose debts were stated at $106,112.23, on account of the construction and operation of the various companies. The amended bill averred that, in con- [446] sequence of the facts set forth in the original bill and which were repeated, the Illinois Midland Company was unable to transact its necessary business; that the executions and levies referred to had removed from its use a large portion of its rolling stock; that the suits and judgments had seriously impaired its credit, and it was unable to procure the necessary supplies, materials and labor to successfully operate the road; and that some of the hands employed in maintaining its track had declined to labor further, whereby its track had become unsafe. The prayer of the amended bill was the same as that of the original bill.

The further action of the court, in regard to the receiver and his successors and their proceedings, will be referred to hereafter, as questions in regard to those proceedings shall be considered.

On the 15th of February, 1876, Albert Grant and Maurice Grant, partners, as Grant Brothers & Co., of London, and also James F. Secor, petitioned and were admitted to be defendants, and on the same day they filed their respective answers to the amended bill; Grant Brothers & Co. claimed to own 1,200, or one half of the Paris and Decatur bonds, 1,200 of the 1,800 Peoria, Atlanta and Decatur bonds, and all (280) of the Paris and Terre Haute bonds; and that the lien of their bonds was superior to the claims of any of the plaintiffs.

The answer of Secor set up his mortgage, and alleged that none of the interest due May 1st, 1875, on the bonds of the Peoria, Atlanta and Decatur Company had been paid, and he had been requested by the holders of a majority of those bonds to take steps to protect their interests; and that by the terms of the mortgage he was entitled to take possession of the road for the benefit of the bondholders. He asked that the court would order the receiver to turn over to him the property covered by the mortgage of the Peoria, Atlanta and Decatur Company.

On the 4th of October, 1876, the Paris and Decatur Company and the Paris and Terre Haute Company were made defendants to the bill, and they severally appeared on October 10, 1876, and at the March Term, 1877, put in answers.

On the 5th of December, 1876, the Union Trust Company filed a bill in the Circuit Court [447] of the United States for the Southern District of Illinois, against the four corporations and Hervey and Secor, to foreclose the three mortgages made to the Union Trust Company. But this suit does not appear to have been further prosecuted, except that by the interlocutory decree of June 11, 1884, hereafter mentioned, it was consolidated with the other causes.

At September Term, 1877, the Union Trust Company was, by order, made a party defendant in the Hervey suit, "with all the rights and privileges as though it had been an original defendant," on its petition setting forth a default July 1, 1875, in the payment of interest on the Paris and Decatur bonds, and that it had demanded and been refused payment of such interest, and that the principal and interest of the bonds had become due, and that a majority of the holders of the bonds had required it to proceed to foreclose the mortgage; and that the same was true as to a default October 1, 1875, in the payment of the interest on the Paris and Terre Haute bonds, and as to a default July 1, 1875, in the payment of the interest on the Illinois Midland bonds.

On the 15th of February, 1878, the Union Trust Company filed a bill in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of Illinois, against the Paris and Decatur Company and the Illinois Midland Company, to foreclose the Paris and Decatur mortgage.

alleging a default January 1, 1876, in the payment of interest on the Paris and Decatur bonds; that the Illinois Midland Company, in issuing its 8,350 bonds, intended to exchange them, dollar for dollar, for the bonds of the other three corporations; and that more or less of the Paris and Decatur bonds were exchanged, and some were, on exchange, marked canceled, but the persons who exchanged them claimed that the purchases by the Peoria, Atlanta and Decatur Company of the other two roads were void, and that the bonds issued by the Midland Company were void, and that the exchange and cancellation of the Paris and Decatur bonds were void, and that those bonds remained the property of their former owners.

[448] On the same day the Union Trust Company filed a bill in the same federal court against the Paris and Terre Haute Company and the Illinois Midland Company, to foreclose the Paris and Terre Haute mortgage, alleging a default October 1, 1875, in the payment of interest on the Paris and Terre Haute bonds, and containing, in regard to the exchange of those bonds, like allegations with those above set forth as to Paris and Decatur bonds, in the bill to foreclose the Paris and Decatur mortgage.

On the same day Secor filed a bill in the same federal court, against the Illinois Midland Company, to foreclose the Peoria, Atlanta and Decatur mortgage, alleging a default May 1, 1875, in the payment of interest on the Peoria, Atlanta and Decatur bonds.

On the 6th of April, 1878, by an order of the state court, the Hervey suit was, on a petition filed by the Union Trust Company, removed into the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of Illinois.

On the 13th of August, 1879, the last two suits brought by the Union Trust Company and the suit brought by Secor were consolidated by the federal court.

On the 31st of August, 1881, Abe Freidenberg, on behalf of himself and other holders of Paris and Decatur bonds, filed a bill to foreclose the Paris and Decatur mortgage, in the same federal court.

The last two suits brought by the Union Trust Company, the suit brought by Secor, the Hervey suit, the Freidenberg suit, and a suit which had been brought in the same federal court by the Kansas Rolling Mill Company, in January Term, 1879, against the Illinois Midland Railway Company and others, were consolidated by an order made June 23, 1882.

Many of the contested questions in these cases arises out of the transactions of the receiver originally appointed and his successors, especially in issuing receiver's certificates; and the contest, as presented to this court, is substantially one between the Paris and Decatur bondholders on one side, and those who claim a priority of lien over the bonds on the other.

On the 31st of August, 1876, Richard J. Rees was, by an order made at chambers, by the judge of the state court, in the Hervey suit, ap-[449] pointed receiver in the place of Dole, resigned, and the order was confirmed by the court at the September Term, 1876. On the 10th of December, 1878, Louis Genis was, by an order made by the federal court in the Hervey suit, appointed receiver in the place of Rees, resigned. On the 4th of April, 1882, by an order made in the Freidenberg suit, David H. Conklin was appointed receiver in the place of Rees, resigned, and on the 13th of April, 1882, a like order was made in the Hervey Case. Genis having filed his final report, the court made an order, on May 13, 1882, appointing a special commissioner to examine and report thereon, and on the correctness of Genis' accounts. By an order made June 13, 1882, power was given to the commissioner to examine witnesses as to the contents of the report and the acts of Genis as receiver. By an order made June 22, 1882, the commissioner was directed to investigate and report in detail the number and amount of certificates of indebtedness issued by the several receivers, and for what purpose they were issued and to whom, and the number and amount of such as were special liens on any of the property, and the character of the charge of all which were not specific liens. By an order made June 23, 1882, it was ordered that the issues in the consolidated causes be made up by a day named, and that by that day the commissioner report the amount of receiver's certificates outstanding, for what they were given and by whom held, and the amount of the receiver's indebtedness and to whom due.

On the 18th of April, 1883, the commissioner made a report as to the matters referred to him, to which exceptions were filed by Freidenberg, by the Union Trust Company and Secor, and by judgment creditors of the Paris and Decatur Company, and by Adams and Orvis. On the 7th of June, 1884, the commissioner filed a supplemental report. He also reported the testimony taken before him. The cases were brought to a hearing in the circuit court before Mr. Justice Harlan (all orders made in them prior to that time, in the federal court, having been made by the district judge), and he passed on the various questions raised, in an opinion [4 filed February 29, 1884. An interlocutory decree was entered June 11, 1884, confirming the report of the commissioner in all things, and making specific adjudications as to the validity and status of eighteen different series of receiver's certificates and of other debts incurred by the receiver, and referring it to the same commissioner to take certain accounts, and to report the amounts due on the various outstanding bonds, and the numbers and amounts of the bonds of the sectional mortgages which had been surrendered and exchanged for Illinois Midland bonds, and what Paris and Decatur bonds remained outstanding, which had not been exchanged for Illinois Midland bonds, and the amount due from one to the other of the three sectional roads, making proper allowance for the use by them respectively of rolling stock or terminal facilities belonging to the others, and for moneys paid by one for expenses or debts properly payable by another; and to report a proper distribution of the liens or obligations on or of the different roads, to pay any of the receiver's certificates or indebtedness; and as to which road should pay for terminal facilities, and what indebtedness the receivers had incurred therefor, and for rent of rolling stock, motive power, and other matters; and to take and report all other testimony offered by any party, pertinent to the issues. The commissioner was also directed to take an account of all the indebtedness of the receivership, and of all claims of employés which accrued within six months before the first appointment of a receiver, and of all claims for rights of way or lands used for railroad purposes, not paid for, and of all bonded indebtedness of the four corporations, properly classified; and to report as to all contested claims, with the testimony thereon.

The commissioner made his report on the 15th of January, 1885, accompanied by the additional testimony he had taken. Freidenberg and other holders of Paris and Decatur bonds filed exceptions to it, as did Waring Brothers and certain judgment creditors of the Paris and Decatur Company and of the Illinois Midland Company.

The case was heard in the circuit court by Mr. Justice Harlan, and on the third of June, 1885, a final decree was entered disposing of the [1] questions litigated, and providing for a sale of the mortgaged property and the distribution of the proceeds. Freidenberg appealed to this court from specified parts of the decree of June 11, 1884, and from specified parts of the decree of June 3, 1885, as representing holders of Paris and Decatur bonds; but this appeal was not perfected and in place of it, Simon Borg, Leo Speyer, and Samuel Lichtenstadter were admitted as parties to the consolidated causes, as holders of Paris and Decatur bonds, and by leave took and perfected an appeal from specified parts of both decrees. Waring Brothers and the Union Trust Company have taken separate appeals from the last decree; and Stoughton J. Fletcher and Francis M. Churchman, partners, as S. A. Fletcher and Company, have appealed, as holders of receiver's certificates, from that decree.

It will be proper to first consider the question of the receiver's certificates.

The final decree declares that the lien of the Paris and Decatur bonds is subject to certain receiver's certificates of the 8th, 12th, 14th, 16th, 17th and 18th series, which are to have priority in payment to the Paris and Decatur bonds, out of the proceeds of sale of the Paris and Decatur road, and which amount, with interest to January 15, 1885, to $200,408.87.

There are six certificates of $5,000 each, of the 8th series, bearing 10 per cent interest. They were issued under an order made October 9, 1876, which states that the court finds that the entire line from Peoria to Terre Haute is in great need of immediate repair, and in an unsafe condition to be operated, and that the line between Paris and Decatur is in a worse condition than any of said line, and requires an immediate outlay, for iron, ties, and other materials, ballasting and labor, to put it in a safe condition, of $34,076, and authorizes the receiver to borrow $34,860, to be expended in repairing the Paris and Decatur road, and to issue receiver's certificates therefor in sums of $5,000 each, bearing 10 per cent interest, and declares that the certificates "shall be a first lien on the right of way, iron, ties, bridges and and entire railway property on said portion of the line between Paris and Decatur." The com- [2] missioner finds that the moneys were expended in accordance with the order.

There is one certificate of the 12th series, for $32,475.20, with 10 per cent interest, issued under two orders, to borrow money to pay off tax liens, the orders declaring that it should be a lien on the Paris and Decatur line superior to the mortgage and to all prior certificates. It was taken at par. When it was issued the legal rate of interest was 8 per cent, 10 per cent having been the legal rate at the time of the first order, and having been the rate specified in that order, and the authority conferred by the first order being made part of the second. The commissioner states that the only dispute was as to the rate of interest; that the money was advanced under the first order, made July 26, 1878, before the issue of the certificate, and at a time when the legal rate of interest was 10 per cent; that that order authorized the sale of the certificate at ninety cents on the dollar; that the mortgagees and bondholders waived any plea of usury, and the corporation itself could not plead usury; and that that defense was made only by the trustee for the holders of surrendered bonds and by judgment creditors. The commissioner reported it as his opinion that the certificate should have effect, as to its amount and lien and rate of interest, as authorized, and according to its purport. The circuit court confirmed this view.

There is one certificate of the 14th series, for $4,876 and 8 per cent interest, issued under the before named order of October 9, 1876, and a subsequent order made January 29, 1881, for money to repair the Paris and Decatur road, being for the balance of money authorized by the first order, the second order declaring the like lien as the first order.

There are one certificate of the 16th series, for $9,505 and 8 per cent interest, and three certificates of the 17th series, two of them for $10,000 each, and one for $5,495, all with 8 per cent interest, issued under an order made June 29, 1881, which set forth that it was necessary to the protection of the railroad property that an outlay should be made forthwith for betterments; and authorized the receiver to expend in betterments on the line between Paris and Decatur $35,000, and to issue certificates [453] to procure money for that purpose, and sell them at not less than ninety cents on the dollar, the same to be a special charge on the line and railroad property between Paris and Decatur, superior to all liens and debts, except receiver's debts before declared by order of court to be special charges or liens on that portion of the railroad. The commissioner states that these certificates were sold, some at 4 and some at 6 per cent discount; and that the holders of the certificates, when they bought them, had no connection with the case or with the parties.

There are four certificates of the 18th series, three of them for $10,000 each, and one for $8,288.98, all at 8 per cent interest, issued under another order made June 29, 1881, which set forth that the receiver had expended on the Illinois Midland road, for side tracks and other betterments, $80,037.98, of which $42,664.98 had been expended on the line between Paris and Decatur; that of the $80,037.98 $63,037.98 had been paid paid out of the earnings of the line, of which $38,288.98 was expended on the line between Paris and Decatur; that the earnings of the whole line had not been sufficient to meet the usual expenses of operation and the ordinary repairs of the permanent way; and that the receiver had incurred unpaid debts to a larger amount than $63,097.88, in the usual operation of the line and in ordinary repairs of the permanent way. The order approved and confirmed the appropriation of the $63,037.98 out of the earnings in payment for betterments; declared that that sum was a special charge and lien on the several portions of the line in proportion to the amounts expended on the respective portions; and authorized the receiver to issue certificates to the amount of $38,288.98, at 8 per cent interest, as representing so much of the $63,037.98 as was expended for betterments on the line between Paris and Decatur, the same to be a special charge and lien on the line and railroad property between Paris and Decatur, superior to all liens and debts except receiver's debts before declared by order of court to be special charges and liens on that portion of the railway; and the certificates to be sold at not less than ninety cents on the dollar. The [454] certificates were sold at a discount within that permitted.

Simon Borg and others appeal because of the priority awarded to the above named sixteen receiver's certificates.

When the order of October 9, 1876, was made, under which the six certificates of the 8th series were issued, neither the trustee nor any of the bondholders of the Paris and Decatur Company were parties to the suit. But before any other order was made under which any of the sixteen certificates referred to were issued, the Union Trust Company had become a party to the Hervey suit as trustee in the Paris and Decatur mortgage, and the default in the payment of the interest on the Paris and Decatur bonds had occurred by January 1, 1876.

The certificates of the 8th and 14th series were issued for necessary repairs; that of the 12th to pay tax liens; those of the 16th and 17th for betterments; and those of the 18th to replace earnings diverted from paying for operating expenses and ordinary repairs, to pay for betterments, while debts to a larger amount had been incurred for the operating expenses and ordinary repairs.

In regard to the certificates issued for necessary repairs there can be no doubt, either on authority or on principle. In Wallace v. Loomis, 97 U. S. 146 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 895], on the filing of a bill by the trustees of the first mortgage on a railroad, to foreclose it, the court appointed receivers, "with power to put the road and property in repair, and to complete any uncompleted portions thereof, and to procure rolling stock, and to manage and operate the road to the best advantage, so as to prevent the property from further deteriorating, and to save and preserve it for the benefit and interest of the first mortgage bondholders and all others having an interest therein;" and with power, also, for those purposes, to raise money, by loan, to an amount limited in the order, by issuing certificates "which should be a first lien on the property." The final decree declared that the moneys raised by loan, or advanced by the receivers and expended on the road pursuant to the order, were a lien paramount to the first mortgage, and should be paid out of the proceeds of sale before the first mortgage bonds were paid. A holder of second mortgage bonds objected to such priority. On that subject, this court said, by Mr. Justice Bradley: "The power of a court of equity to appoint managing receivers of such property as a railroad, when [4 taken under its charge as a trust fund for the payment of incumbrances, and to authorize such receivers to raise money necessary for the preservation and management of the property, and make the same chargeable as a lien thereon for its repayment, cannot at this day, be seriously disputed. It is a part of that jurisdiction, always exercised by the court, by which it is its duty to protect and preserve the trust funds in its hands. It is, undoubtedly, a power to be exercised with great caution, and if possible with the consent or acquiescence of the parties interested in the fund." It is true that the second mortgage trustees in that case were parties to the suit when the order was made, and had due notice of the application, and made no objection. As to that the court said that the bondholders were represented by their trustees and must be regarded as bound by their acts, at least so far as concerned "the power of the court to act, in making the order, and so far as the interest of third persons acting upon the faith of it might be affected." It also said that when the appellant became a party, he suggested no objection to the terms of the order appointing the receivers, and that there was no just exception to the order or the decree.

Property subject to liens and claims and debts of various characters and ranks, which is brought within the cognizance of a court of equity for administration and conversion into money, and distribution, is a trust fund. It is to be preserved for those entitled to it. This must be done by the hands of the court, through officers. The character of the property gives character to the particular species of preservation which it requires. Unimproved land may lie idle, with only payment of taxes. Improved property should be rented. Movable property that is not perishable may be locked up and kept; but if perishable, it must be sold, by way of preservation. A railroad, and its appurtenances is a peculiar species of property. Not only will its structures deteriorate and decay and perish if not cared for and kept up, but its business and good will will pass away if it is not run and kept in good order. Moreover, a railroad is a matter of public concern. The franchises and rights of the corporation which constructed it were given not merely for [4 private gain to the corporators, but to furnish a public highway; and all persons who deal with the corporation as creditors or holders of its obligations, must necessarily be held to do so in the view, that, if it falls into insolvency and its affairs come into a court of equity for adjustment, involving the transfer of its franchises and property by a sale, into other hands, to have the purposes of its creation still carried out, the court, while in charge of the property, has the power, and, under some circumstances it may be its duty, to make such repairs as are necessary to keep the road and its structures in a safe and proper condition to serve the public. Its power to do this does not depend on consent, nor on prior notice. Consent is desirable but is seldom practicable, where the debts exceed the value of the property. Though prior notice to persons interested, by notifying them as parties, first requiring them to be made parties if they are not, is generally the better way, yet many circumstances may be judicially equivalent to prior notice. A full opportunity, as in this case, to be heard, on evidence as to the propriety of the expenditures and of making them a first lien, is judicially equivalent. The receiver, and those lending money to him on certificates issued on orders made without prior notice to parties interested, take the risk of the final action of the court in regard to the loans. The court always retains control of the matter, its records are accessible to lenders and subsequent holders, and the certificates are not negotiable instruments.

The principle laid down in Wallace v. Loomis was applied in Miltenberger v. Logansport R. Co. 106 U. S. 286 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 117]. In that case a bill was filed by a second mortgagee, against the mortgagor, and a first mortgagee, and judgment creditors of the mortgagor, to foreclose a mortgage on a railroad. On the day the bill was filed, and without notice to the first mortgagee, a receiver was appointed and power given him to operate and manage the road, "receive its revenues, pay its operating expenses, make repairs, and manage its entire business; and to pay the arrears due for operating expenses for a period in the past not exceeding ninety days, and to pay into the court all revenue over operating expenses." [7] After that, and without notice to the first mortgagee, who had not appeared, although notified of the order appointing the receiver, and of the pendency of the suit, the court authorized the receiver to purchase engines and cars, and to adjust liens on cars owned by the mortgagor, and to pay indebtedness not exceeding $10,000, to other connecting lines of road, in settlement of ticket and freight accounts and balances, and for materials and repairs, which had accrued in part more than ninety days before the order appointing the receiver was made, and to construct five miles of new road, and a bridge. The petition for the order stated the necessity for the rolling stock and for the adjustment of the liens; that the payment to the connecting lines was indispensable to the business of the road, and it would suffer great detriment unless that was provided for; and that the new road and the bridge would come under the mortgages, and their construction would be to the advantage of the bondholders. After the first mortgagee had appeared and answered, an order was made, but not on prior notice to it, authorizing the receiver to issue certificates to pay for rolling stock he had bought under orders of the court, and to pay debts incurred for building the five miles of road and the bridge, under those orders, and to pay debts incurred for taxes, and rights of way, and back pay and supplies in operating the road, the certificates to be payable out of income, and, if not so paid, to be provided for by the court in its final order. Claims thus arising were afterwards allowed, to be paid out of the proceeds of sale, before the mortgage bonds. This court upheld such priority, as to the debts for the purchase of rolling stock and for the adjustment of liens and for the construction of the five miles of road and the bridge and for the amount due connecting lines, some of which was incurred more than ninety days before the receiver was appointed. On the latter branch of the subject it said: "It cannot be affirmed that no items which accrued before the appointment of a receiver can be allowed in any case. Many circumstances may exist which may make it necessary and indispensable to the business of the road and the preservation of the property, for the receiver to pay pre-existing debts of certain classes, out of the earnings of the receivership, [458] or even the corpus of the property, under the order of the court, with a priority of lien. Yet the discretion to do so should be exercised with very great care. The payment of such debts stands, prima facie, on a different basis from the payment of claims arising under the receivership, while it may be brought within the principle of the latter by special circumstances. It is easy to see that the payment of unpaid debts for operating expenses, accrued within ninety days, due by a railroad company suddenly deprived of the control of its property, due to operatives in its employ, whose cessation from work simultaneously is to be deprecated, the interests both of the property and of the public, and the payment of limited amounts due to other and connecting lines of road for materials and repairs, and for unpaid ticket and freight balances, the outcome of indispensable business relations, where a stoppage of the continuance of such business relations would be a probable result, in case of nonpayment, the general consequence involving largely, also, the interests and accommodation of travel and traffic, may well place such payments in the category of payments to preserve the mortgaged property in a large sense, by maintaining the good will and integrity of the enterprise, and entitle them to be made a first lien. This view of the public interest in such a highway for public use as a railroad is, as bearing on the maintenance and use of its franchises and property in the hands of a receiver, with a view to public convenience, was the subject of approval by this court, speaking by Mr. Justice Woods, in Barton v. Barbour, 104 U. S. 126 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 672]."

In allowing the certificates of the 8th and 14th series, for necessary repairs, with priority, the master acted, and we think properly, on the authority of the cases of Wallace v. Loomis and Miltenberger v. Logansport Railway Co.

In this connection it is objected that in those cases the suits were foreclosure suits brought by trustees under mortgages, and that a different rule should obtain in a case where the trustees or the bondholders do not come into court initially, asking the aid of equity in the appointment of a receiver. It is said that the Hervey suit was not such a suit. But the co-plaintiffs with Hervey were judgment creditors [459] of the Paris and Decatur Company, with executions returned unsatisfied. The bill set out the precarious condition of all the property held and used by the Illinois Midland Company, and the necessity for a receiver in the interest of all the creditors of all four of the corporations, to prevent the levy of executions on such property; and it prayed for a judicial ascertainment and marshaling of all the debts of all the corporations, and their payment and adjustment as the respective rights and interests of the creditors might appear, and for general relief. The plaintiffs set forth that they represented a majority of the stock in all the corporations. This bill was quite sufficient to enable a court of equity to administer the property and marshal the debts, including those due the mortgage bondholders, making proper parties before adjudging the merits.

In regard to the fact that neither the Paris and Decatur bondholders nor their trustee were parties to the suit when the order of October 9, 1876, was made, the commissioner took the view, which the circuit court confirmed, that while they ought to be heard before the order was made conclusive against them, yet, as the objections to the merits of the order would not have been availing if made before it was entered, and the money had been actually and faithfully applied, under the order of the court, to the improvement of the mortgaged property, no equitable reason appeared why the bondholders should keep the benefits and escape the burden.

The certificate of the fourteenth series was issued not only under the order of October 9th, 1876, but under that of January 29, 1881. The Union Trust Company was admitted, on its own petition, to be a party defendant in the Hervey suit in September, 1877. That petition stated that the interest on the Paris and Decatur bonds had been in default since July 1, 1875. The order of January 29, 1881, was made by the federal court. The Union Trust Company had removed the Hervey suit into the federal court in April, 1878, and had filed in that court a foreclosure bill on the Paris and Decatur mortgage as early as December, 1876, and another such bill in February, 1878. The interest on the Paris and Decatur bonds had been in [460] default, as the latter bill alleged, since January 1, 1876, and the receiver was in open possession of the entire line of road and running it, and exercising the powers which the orders of the courts had conferred upon him. Under these circumstances, the Paris and Decatur trustee and its bondholders in court, through it, can be heard to make no other objections to the orders except such as arise as to the merits of the expenditures made under them. The view of the commissioner and the circuit court was that the bondholders should have such rights and equities as they could have properly claimed as parties ab initio, and that this view should apply against them as well as for them. In this we concur.

The principles properly applicable to this branch of the case were well expressed by Mr. Justice Harlan in his opinion of February 29, 1884, as follows: "Those who take receiver's certificates must be deemed to have taken them subject to the rights of parties who have prior liens upon the property, and who have not, but should have, been brought before the court. While the court, under some circumstances, and for some purposes, and in advance of the prior lienholders being made parties, may have jurisdiction to charge the property with the amount of receiver's certificates issued by its authority, it cannot, without giving such parties their day in court, deprive them of their priority of lien. When such prior lienholders are brought before the court, they become entitled, upon the plainest principles of justice and equity, to contest the necessity, validity, effect, and amount of all such certificates, as fully as if such questions were then, for the first time, presented for determination. If it appears that they ought not to have been made a charge upon the property, superior to the lien created by the mortgages, then the contract rights of the prior lienholders must be protected. On the other hand, if it appears that the court did what ought to have been done, even had the trustee and the bondholders been before it when the certificates were authorized to be issued, the property should not be relieved from the charge made upon it, in good faith, for its protection and preservation. Of these rules or principles the parties who inaugurated this litigation cannot justly complain. They were not ignorant of the fact that there were existing mortgages upon this property, and that fact should have been brought to the attention of the court at the very outset. Nor have the bondholders any ground of complaint if the court charges upon the property such expenditures as now appear to have been rightfully made in the interest of all concerned in its management, while in the hands of a receiver. As to receiver's certificates issued, with the sanction of the court, after the trustees became parties, the purchasers and holders should be accorded such rights as, by the settled principles of equity, are accorded to those who deal with judicial tribunals having jurisdiction in the premises."

The propriety of the allowance of the certificate of the twelfth series for tax liens needs no argument, and we think the interest, as allowed, was proper.

As to the $35,000 of certificates of the sixteenth and seventeenth series, issued to pay for betterments, the present holders, who bought them directly from the receiver, had no connection with the case or with the parties. A question was made before the commissioner that the receiver did not faithfully apply the money as directed by the court. He held, and the circuit court sustained him, that these purchasers were not bound to see to the application of the proceeds, citing the decision to that effect by Mr. Justice Woods, in Stanton v. Alabama, etc. R. R. Co. 2 Woods, 506. In this view we concur.

It was also contended before the commissioner that all that the holders of these certificates were equitably entitled to was the money they paid, and without interest, and not the face of the certificates and interest. The view taken by the commissioner, and confirmed by the circuit court, was that as the certificates were issued for debts contracted by the court, when it had jurisdiction of the parties and of the subject matter, to persons who in good faith invested their money, for the benefit of the property in the possession of the court, the certificates should be paid according to their tenor, as authorized. We concur in these views. It may be added that as the order of June 29, 1881, authorized the certificates to be sold at not more than 10 per cent discount, it must be presumed that the parties taking the certificates relied on the promise to pay their face, and would not otherwise have trusted the receiver or the fund. The court which made that order thought the limit of discount a reasonable one, and the certificates were sold within that limit.

In regard to what the order calls "betterments," it appears from the petition of the receiver, on which the order was made, that the $35,000 were to be expended for ties, rails, new turn table and foundations, bridges and fences, on the existing line of road, and not for any new extent of road. An affidavit annexed to the petition, made by the road master of the Illinois Midland Company, states that in order to place the railway in a suitable condition for the safe transportation of business, the expenditure contemplated was absolutely necessary. The commissioner finds that the money was expended in substantial compliance with the order of the court, and that the improvements made by the receiver no more than made up for the deterioration of the road, especially in view of its imperfect construction and inferior material from the beginning. This finding was approved by the circuit court.

As to the certificates of the eighteenth series, issued to replace earnings diverted from paying for operating expenses and ordinary repairs, to pay for betterments, while debts to a large amount had been incurred for the operating expenses and ordinary repairs,—it appears by the petition of the receiver, and the affidavit of the road master annexed to it, on which the order of June 29, 1881, under which the certificates were issued, was made, that the expenditures for new side tracks and betterments so paid for out of earnings consisted principally of expenditures for roadbed, bridges, iron and ties, which were in a worn out and insufficient condition.

The commissioner and the circuit court rested the allowance of these certificates on what was said by this court in the case of Fosdick v. Schall, 99 U. S. 235, 253, 254 [Bk. 25, L. ed. 339, 343], which views were applied in Burnham v. Bowen, 111 U. S. 776 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 596], to the effect that when the current income of a railroad in the hands of a receiver is diverted to the improvement of the property by the receiver, and debts for operating expenses are not paid, provision should be made, in foreclosing a mortgage on the road, to pay such debts out of the proceeds of the sale of the property. See also Union Trust Co. v. Souther, 107 U. S. 591 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 488].

The general principles hereinbefore stated on which the receiver's certificates referred to are allowed, are those sanctioned in Meyer v. Johnston, 53 Ala. 237, and Hoover v. Montclair etc. R. Co. 29 N. J. Eq. 4.

The strenuous contention on the part of the Paris and Decatur bondholders is that a court of chancery had no power, by a receiver and without their consent, to create, on the corpus of the property, any lien taking priority over the mortgage lien. But these bondholders were represented by their trustee, the Union Trust Company. It filed a bill in the federal court as early as December, 1876, to foreclose the Paris and Decatur mortgage; and it was made a party, on its own petition, to the suit in the state court, in September, 1877. The Paris and Decatur mortgage provided that in case of default for six months in paying interest on the bonds (and such default occurred at latest on January 1, 1876, and the six months expired July 1, 1876, more than three months before any order was made on which any of the certificates were issued), all the bonds should become due and the lien might be enforced, and the trustee might enter on the property and operate it till sold, and make all needful repairs and replacements, and such useful alterations, additions and improvements to the road as might be necessary for its proper working, and pay for them out of the income; and also that in case of a default so continuing, the trustee might foreclose the mortgage by legal proceedings or sell the property by public auction; and should, in case of such sale, deduct from the proceeds all expenses incurred in operating, managing or maintaining the road or in managing its business, and thereafter apply the proceeds to pay the bonds. In the face of these provisions of the mortgage under which the bonds are held, and of the facts before recited as to the negligence of the trustee all the while the property was in the hands of the court, it does not at all comport with the principles of equity for the bondholders now to insist that the want of affirmative consent by them [464] or their trustee could paralyze the arm of the court in the discharge of its duty. The want of that aid which it was the duty of the trustee and the bondholders to give to the court in discharging its responsible functions, with the road openly in charge of the receiver and being run by him, and his acts plain to view, and the interest on the bonds in arrear, cannot be urged to a court of equity as a ground for denying its power to do what was thought by it best for the interests of all concerned, including even those who thus willfully stood aloof.

The appellants Borg and others also complain of provisions in the final decree, giving priority over the Paris and Decatur bonds to just and equitable proportions of the following items: 1, amount of wages due employés of receivers Dole, Rees and Genis, as shown by schedules J and K of the report of the commissioner, the total amount being $76,820.90; 2, the indebtedness due from the receivership to railroad companies, as shown by schedule L of the report, amounting to $84,615.21; 3, the general indebtedness of the receivership, as shown by schedule M of the report, under the head of supplies, amounting to $67,787.76, and under the head of "damages" amounting to $5,871.04, and forty-four items under the head of "miscellaneous," amounting to $32,937.49; 4, seven claims theretofore allowed and ordered to be paid by the court, amounting to $1,498.18; 5, four claims on intervening petitions, allowed at $11,642.29; 6, amount of wages due employés of the Illinois Midland Company within six months immediately preceding the appointment of the first receiver, as shown by schedule H of the report; such equitable proportions of the receivers' indebtedness and of the six months' labor claims to be ascertained in the manner provided by the decree.

As to items 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5; while it is admitted that these debts were incurred for the ordinary expenses of the receivers in operating the road, it is contended that they are entitled to priority only out of the income of the road, and not out of the proceeds of the property itself. Of course, such items are payable out of income, if any, before the corpus is resorted to, but that may be resorted to when the items are proper ones to be allowed for operating expenses, after scrutiny and opportunity for those [465] opposing to be heard. This view is in accordance with the principles above laid down and the authorities above cited.

It is contended, however, that, in the order of September 11, 1875, appointing Dole receiver, while authority was given to him to carry on the business of the road and to make repairs and additions essential to its interests and safety, it was provided that, out of the moneys he should receive from its operations, he should pay for the expenses of operation; that he was not authorized by that order to contract any debt which the receipts of the road would not pay; that the terms of the order were such as to exclude the payment of any of the expenses embraced in the six items above named out of any fund other than the receipts from the operation of the road; and that the orders appointing Rees and Genis were equally limited. But we think this view is not correct. The terms of these orders do not impair or exclude the ample authority which the court would otherwise have, and otherwise has, to order the claims in question to be paid out of the property itself, with priority.

The claims embraced in the six items have been carefully scrutinized and reported on favorably by the commissioner, and allowed by the circuit court, within and in accordance with the principles above laid down, and we think that all of them, including the "six months' labor claims," were properly allowed.

The appellants Borg and others also complain that the final decree declares that the just and equitable proportion of the floating indebtedness of the receivership, and of the six months' labor claims, so made liens prior to the bonds, shall be borne by and imposed upon the three several railroad properties, on the basis of the relative lengths of the roads, being for the Paris and Decatur sixty-seven miles, the Peoria, Atlanta and Decatur 60¼, and the Paris and Terre Haute 13¾. It is urged that in the total amount of debt to be thus apportioned among the several roads there are included debts which, as against the Paris and Decatur bondholders, belong distinctively to the other two roads, and should be charged exclusively on them. This view is based on these allegations: that the Peoria, Atlanta and Decatur road was never finished at either end, and always paid rent for access to Peoria at one end and to Decatur at the other; that the Paris and Terre Haute road uses the track of another road to reach Terre Haute, and its terminal facilities there, and does not own one half in value of the track between Paris and Terre Haute; and that the Paris and Decatur road uses only two miles of another road at Decatur, and has good eastern connections at Paris. In this view it is insisted that each road should pay its own terminal charges, and the cost of reaching its own charter points. The terminal expenses and track rentals of the two roads, other than the Paris and Decatur, were always charged by the receivers against the combined Illinois Midland road. The view taken by the commissioner and the circuit court was that the receiver took the roads as he found them; each incomplete and no one reaching any important point, and was obliged to continue the leasing arrangements of the Illinois Midland Company, so as to have a continuous line from Peoria to Terre Haute, which he operated as an entirety. The commissioner stated his conclusions thus: "In the operation of the road, no separate accounts of receipts or disbursements for each section, nor of the amount of business contributed by each section, nor of the extent of the use of each road, in the transaction of the various items of business taken at the several stations, were kept; nor indeed has it been possible to keep such accounts. The Paris and Decatur road received its share of the benefits accruing from the use of the leased lines; the exact relative proportion of benefits to each sectional road it is impossible to ascertain. The operating expenses have been incurred in the management of a single undertaking for the common benefit of all parties in interest. The use of the several leased tracks was necessary for that common undertaking. Without the use of the leased tracks the road could not have entered either of its terminal points nor the City of Decatur, which was equally essential. Neither of the sectional roads enters any one of the three main points on the line. Indeed, without the leased lines the operation of the road or either of the sections would have been impracticable. And it seems to me that the rentals for the use of the leased lines were incurred as much for the common benefit as were the expenses for employés and supplies along the line. If the management of the road had been so profitable as to have left a net income to apply on the mortgage debt, the Paris and Decatur bondholders would have been entitled to their proportionate share of the income derived from the use of the leased lines; they could scarcely have expected that without contributing to the payment for the use of those lines." These views apply equally to the terminal facilities furnished by the leasing roads.

[466]

In opposition to these considerations it is urged that while they may properly apply among the companies which were parties to the sales and purchases, they do not apply to the holders of unsurrendered and unexchanged Paris and Decatur bonds, on the ground that they had nothing to do with the conduct of a joint enterprise, and could derive no benefit therefrom; and that they denied, in the pleadings of their trustee, and now deny, the validity of the sales, and did not acquiesce in any act of union of the roads.

An argument is made that there was no affirmative legislative authority for the purchase and sale of the Paris and Decatur road. This question was considered by the circuit court in its opinion, and it said that while the question was by no means free from difficulty, it was inclined to think that the warrant for the purchase was found in the charter of the purchasing company; and that, as the effect of the arrangement was to establish a continuous line from Peoria, via Decatur, to Terre Haute, to be operated under a common management, and as there was nothing in the charters of the selling companies expressly forbidding the arrangements they made with the purchasing company, and as what was done was fully executed, and its validity had never been questioned in a direct proceeding by the State or by those interested in the selling companies, it was not disposed to make the rights of the parties in this litigation depend upon the inquiry whether the contracts were technically valid or not. Its conclusion was stated thus: "In Thomas v. Railroad Co. 101 U. S. 71 [Bk. 25, L. ed. 950], the court said that 'there can be no question that, in many instances, where an invalid contract, which the party to it might have avoided or refused to perform, has been fully performed on both sides, whereby money has been paid or property changed hands, the courts have refused to sustain an action for the recovery of the property or the money so transferred;' further, 'that the executed dealings of corporations must be allowed to stand for and against both parties when the plainest rules of good faith require it;' still further, 'that contracts which, though invalid for want of corporate power, have been fully executed, shall remain as the foundation of rights acquired by the transaction.' I am the more readily inclined to act upon the view indicated, because, as said by Judge Drummond, in Dimpfel v. Ohio, etc. R. Co. 9 Biss. 129, 'both by the legislation of the State and by the construction of the same by its highest court, great encouragement has been given to the union of lines of railroad for the purpose of having them operated under some general management; the result of which has been the consolidation of many lines of road which were originally separate and distinct, but which are now operated under a uniform system.' Those who were parties to the arrangement in question, those who acquiesced in it, and those who failed in due time, by some proper proceeding, to question its validity, should be held to be estopped to raise any such question in these causes. The litigation must, therefore, be conducted to a conclusion upon the basis that the sale and transfer by the Paris and Decatur Railroad Company and the Paris and Terre Haute Railroad Company to the Peoria, Atlanta and Decatur Railroad Company is not to be here questioned." Independently of this, it is entirely sufficient to rest our conclusion on the principle, that nonaction on the part of the Paris and Decatur bondholders and their trustee, which allowed the court and the receivers to go on during the entire litigation, contracting debts in respect to the whole line operated as a unit, and administering the property as one, under circumstances where, as shown, it was and is impossible to separate the interests as to expenditures and benefits, in respect to the matters now questioned, and where important rights have accrued on the faith of the unity of the interests, amounts to such acquiescence as should operate as an estoppel. The interlocutory decree contains a clause in accordance with the foregoing conclusion, and for the reasons above stated we think it is right.

It is further contended, on behalf of Borg and others, that all of the receiver's debt should be borne primarily by the Peoria, Atlanta and Decatur Company, in exoneration of the Paris and Decatur mortgage, on the ground that, by the terms of the conveyance from the Paris and Decatur Company to the purchasing company, the latter assumed "all the bonded and floating indebtedness" of the selling company. It is contended that, both from the contract and by general principles, the purchasing company is bound to bear alone all expenses that will impair the security of the Paris and Decatur mortgage, and especially the expenses of running the road as a public servitude; and that the court and the receivers are bound by the same limitation. The idea underlying this view is, that the receiver appointed by the court is merely the agent of the purchasing company, and his management of the purchased road is merely a continuation of the management of the purchasing company. The view taken by the commissioner and confirmed by the circuit court was, that the receiver, as an executive officer of the court, was entrusted with all the properties committed to his charge, to use and preserve them, under the direction of the court, for the benefit of all parties in interest; that the receiver sustained the same relation to the bondholders of each of the constituent companies; that, as the property of each of them has been used and preserved for the benefit of its bondholders, it is equitable that each property should contribute its just proportion towards defraying the necessary expenses; that as the Peoria, Atlanta and Decatur mortgage was executed more than two years before the purchase of the Paris and Decatur road, and as the obligation of operating the latter road, assumed by the purchasing company, was an ordinary liability and an unsecured obligation, the equities of the Peoria, Atlanta and Decatur bondholders require that the expenses of operating the purchased road, whether [470] before or after the appointment of a receiver, should not take precedence, out of the corpus of the property of the purchasing company, over its bonds, issued and negotiated before the transfer, to the exoneration of the bonds of the purchased road; and that it is more equitable that the expenses of the receivership, incurred under the direction of the court for the benefit of one road as well as the other, should be borne by each proportionally. We think these views are correct, and that it is right to measure the proportions according to the lengths of the roads.

Borg and others complain of the following part of the final decree: "That Waring Brothers hold nine hundred and ninety-four (994) bonds of the Paris and Decatur Railroad Company, from which the first five coupons have been detached, the numbers of which bonds are given in 'Schedule F—Exchanged Paris and Decatur bonds,' attached to said special commissioner's last mentioned report" (filed January 15, 1885); "that there is now due on said 994 bonds the principal sum of $497,000, with interest thereon as provided in said bonds and the coupons thereto attached, the principal and interest to this date amounting to the sum of $859,589.13; and that said Waring Brothers are entitled to the full benefit and advantage of said 994 bonds, the same as if said bonds had not been exchanged for those of the Illinois Midland Railway Company, and as if there had been no cancellation or attempted cancellation of the same; and it is ordered by the court, that, upon the surrender into court, for cancellation, by said Waring Brothers, of bonds of the Illinois Midland Company to an amount equal to the said 994 bonds of the Paris and Decatur Railroad Company, then the said 994 bonds of the Paris and Decatur Railroad Company shall be held, and are hereby declared to be, in full force and unsatisfied, in the hands of said Waring Brothers, the same and with like effect as the other said valid outstanding bonds of the said Paris and Decatur Railroad Company, any exchange or cancellation thereof to the contrary notwithstanding; and the special commissioner hereinafter appointed is directed to hold for cancellation such Illinois Midland Railway [471] bonds, when so surrendered, and to report the fact of such surrender and holding for cancellation, to the court." The report of the commissioner shows that each of the 994 bonds has the word "canceled" stamped thereon, and each has a hole punched through the signature of the president of the company.

The argument on the part of Waring Brothers, to sustain the above provisions of the decree in regard to the 994 bonds, is that the Illinois Midland bonds, amounting to $4,175,000, were intended to be largely used in retiring, by exchange, the bonds of the the three sectional roads, amounting to $2,780,000; that, in the agreements made between Hervey and Grant Brothers & Co., and between Hervey and Waring Brothers, and between Waring Brothers and Grant Brothers & Co., in regard to the issuing of Illinois Midland bonds, and the exchange of the bonds of the sectional roads for them, the underlying contract was that the three sectional companies should be legally consolidated, so as to make the new Illinois Midland mortgage to be issued a first lien on the entire property; that the three parties above named owned, among them, all but a few of the Peoria, Atlanta and Decatur bonds, and all of the Paris and Terre Haute bonds, and a large portion of the Paris and Decatur bonds; that the agreement was, as understood by all parties, that the sectional bonds should be exchanged for the new Illinois Midland bonds, dollar for dollar, and that, as to such of the Paris and Decatur bonds as should not be retired by exchange, an equal amount of the new Illinois Midland bonds should be destroyed; that, under this arrangement, Grant Brothers & Co., and Waring Brothers, would surrender their sectional bonds, secured by sectional first mortgages, and accept in lieu thereof Illinois Midland bonds, secured by what would be a first mortgage on the three roads, subject to the unexchanged Paris and Decatur bonds; that the written contracts on the subject stipulated that the three railroads should be "consolidated into one company under the name of the Illinois Midland Railroad Company;" that the purchases and fusion which took place were not a consolidation, within the meaning of the contracts; and that what was contracted for was to be not merely [472] a consolidation of the properties of the three companies, so that all those properties should pass to the ownership of one of the companies, but a consolidation of the companies themselves, they to be so united as to become one company and one artificial body.

We are unable to concur in this view, and are of opinion that what was done was a substantial compliance with the contracts. What Hervey did in procuring the sales of the roads, and the change of the name of the purchasing company, and in making the new mortgage and bonds, was done with the concurrence of Grant Brothers & Co., and Waring Brothers. The exchanges made of the Paris and Decatur bonds for the Midland bonds were not isolated transactions, but followed as parts of one transaction, by which the roads were united and the new bonds created and exchanged. The transaction contemplated by the contracts was fully performed, and the Paris and Decatur bonds which Waring Brothers surrendered were exchanged and surrendered specifically for cancellation. In the contract of July 4, 1874, between Waring Brothers and Grant Brothers & Co., it was provided that 907 Paris and Decatur bonds held by Waring Brothers should be exchanged for 907 of the new bonds of the Illinois Midland Company, and canceled. The evidence and the written contracts show that it was contemplated by the parties, including Waring Brothers, that such of the Paris and Decatur bonds as should not be surrendered and exchanged should retain their precedence over the Illinois Midland bonds, and their priority of lien on the Paris and Decatur property. In the contract between Hervey and Grant Brothers & Co., July 4, 1874, it was agreed that the latter should retain in their hands Illinois Midland bonds equal in amount to any Paris and Decatur bonds which should be outstanding, and should cancel and return to Hervey all Paris and Decatur bonds which should be exchanged by their holders for Illinois Midland bonds; and that if, after July 1, 1876, there should be any outstanding unexchanged Paris and Decatur bonds, Grant Brothers & Co. should cancel and return to Hervey an amount of Illinois Midland bonds equal to the amount of the then outstanding unexchanged Paris and Decatur bonds. In the schedule to the agreement of July 4, 1874, between Grant Brothers & Co. and Waring Brothers, it was stated that the Illinois Midland bonds were to be issued "subject and in subordination only to such bonds already issued by the Paris and Decatur Railroad Company as for the time being shall be existing and be preferentially charged on the portion of the undertaking which shall have been constituted with or represent the undertaking of the said last mentioned railway company." The president of the Union Trust Company was advised of these agreements, in December, 1874. Waring Brothers surrendered to Grant Brothers & Co. 887 Paris and Decatur bonds and took from them this receipt:

"London, February 17, 1875.

"Received from Messrs. Waring Brothers, 885 bonds of Paris and Decatur Railroad Co., as per attached list, in exchange for a like number of Illinois Midland bonds, in fulfilment of first clause of our agreement of July 4, 1874, the difference between 885 bonds and 907 bonds mentioned in agreement having been drawn and canceled between date of agreement and the present time, which 885 bonds of Paris and Decatur Railroad Co. are to be canceled forthwith, in accordance with said agreement.

Grant Brothers & Co."

In the agreement made as late as May 4, 1877, between Grant Brothers & Co. and Waring Brothers, it was agreed that the former should use their best exertions "to obtain the exchange of the outstanding Paris and Decatur bonds which have not yet been exchanged for Illinois Midland bonds, so as to complete the amalgamation."

The exchange and surrender of the 885 bonds was a completed transaction. No surrender of any of the Paris and Decatur bonds by anyone was made dependent on the surrender of any others of them or of the whole. Each person who surrendered gave up his lien under the Paris and Decatur mortgage, and took one under the Illinois and Midland mortgage, as it was, and took the risk of its value. He left those who did not surrender to hold under the 4] Paris and Decatur mortgage. There was no contingency and no reservation on the part of those surrendering. The surrender was for cancellation and was cancellation. The Illinois Midland mortgage and bonds were and are valid. All parties got what they contracted for.

In regard to the other 109 Paris and Decatur bonds (to make up the 994 exchanged bonds now presented by Waring Brothers, as holders), each of them is stamped with the word "canceled," and each has a hole punched through the signature of the president of the company. In 1872, Waring Brothers purchased from Grant Brothers & Co. 928 Paris and Decatur bonds. July 4, 1874, they still held 907 of them. February 17, 1875, they had only 885. Afterwards Genis, acting for them and for Grant Brothers & Co., brought with him from London to the United States all the Paris and Decatur bonds which had been surrendered by any one and canceled, receiving them from the custody of Grant Brothers & Co. These bonds included not only the 885, but undoubtedly the 22 others mentioned in the receipt, and 87 more, necessary to make up the 994. All of the 109 bonds being marked canceled, and the evidence as to the entire 994 being what it is, it must be held that the 109, as well as the 885, were exchanged, surrendered and canceled, and that the decree is erroneous and must be reversed in regard to all of the 994.

The decree provides that the special commissioner, charged with its execution as to a sale, shall first offer the three railroad properties for sale each separately, and four locomotive engines (on which there is a specific lien) separately, and all other property acquired by the receivers otherwise than from said railroad companies separately, and, after having so offered said properties, shall then offer the whole of them for sale en masse; and, if the highest bid received by him for the entire properties shall exceed the aggregate amount of the several highest bids for them when offered separately, then the whole shall be struck off and sold as an entirety to the person making the bid, and the proceeds be divided into five parts, in proportion to the amounts bid separately on the five constituent parts, and distributed to the lienholders and bondholders in the same
5] manner as if the five constituent parts had been sold separately

Borg and others object to that provision, and claim that the holders of the unexchanged Paris and Decatur bonds are entitled to have a separate sale of the property covered by the Paris and Decatur mortgage. We have considered the views urged in opposition to the above clause, but are of opinion that under it, taken in connection with all the other provisions of the decree, the rights of the Paris and Decatur bondholders are sufficiently secured, and that they have substantially the benefit of a separate sale. No one of all parties can get less by the sale in gross.

The appeal of the Union Trust Company does not cover anything not embraced in the appeal of Borg and others.

The appeal of Waring Brothers is next to be considered. They object that certain claims of theirs under the head of "Miscellaneous" in schedule M to the commissioner's report, part of the receiver's indebtedness, are by the decree declared to be subordinate to the mortgages and bonds of the three sectional roads, namely:

"$30,322.09. Claim assigned by Terre Haute and Indianapolis Railroad Company.

$14,140.67. Terminal facilities at west end; assigned by Toledo, Peoria and Warsaw Railroad Company.

$54,900. Loan account; allowed by order of court, June 11, 1884.

$32,000. Loan account; allowed by order of court, June 11, 1884.

$29,064.84. Recs' notes; allowed by order of court, June 11, 1884."

As to the $30,322.09, Waring Brothers bought the claim in August, 1877, from the Terre Haute and Indianapolis Company. The receivership owed that amount to that company for rent of track, materials supplied and traffic balances. The $14,140.67 was a claim bought by Waring Brothers, in September, 1877, from the receiver of the Toledo, Peoria and Warsaw Company. [476]
It was for rent of track, stores supplied and labor performed. As to both of these items, the debts were contracted by the receiver, and fall within the principle under which claims of like character are allowed priority.

As to the items of $54,900 and $32,000, "Loan Account," the commissioner, in his first report, made this statement: "The Loan Account. Receiver Genis borrowed of the First National Bank of Terre Haute the sum of $57,400 for the current expenses of the road, upon which he paid $2,500, leaving a balance due the bank of $54,900. He had also a running loan account with McKeen & Co., another banking house in Terre Haute, for moneys borrowed for the use of the road, upon which there is a balance due the bank of $32,000. These moneys were borrowed by the receiver as such, but the greater part thereof was further secured by the personal obligations of Mr. Genis or Waring Brothers. The transactions are, therefore, characterized by Mr. Freidenberg's counsel, as the personal accounts of those parties, and not the accounts of the receiver as such. But, even if it were true that these moneys were those of Mr. Genis individually, yet, if it were further true that Mr. Genis was authorized to make the expenditures for the protection, reparation or safety of the trust estate, and if he advanced his own moneys for that purpose, he could, I think, on principle, have a lien on the trust estate for moneys so advanced. New v. Nicoll, 73 N. Y. 131. But there appears to have been no express authority from the court to borrow these moneys. While a receiver entrusted with the operation of a railroad must necessarily be allowed a certain discretion as to outlays of money made in good faith in the ordinary course of business, and to a certain extent the details of the business must be left to his discretion, yet transactions of such magnitude as the loans in question are, I think, unwarrantable without the previous authority of the court; and the conduct of the receiver in this respect ought not to be sanctioned, and certainly cannot be permitted to become a precedent. At the same time, the evidence appears to show that the sums so borrowed were [477] applied directly to pay the expenses of the receivership, repairs, supplies, pay rolls, or to replace moneys which had been so applied. Mr. Genis' testimony is very specific on these points. He says that after applying the income of the road towards expenses (repairs, supplies, pay rolls) and, when he could not longer postpone payment of balance, he had to borrow. While reprehending this unauthorized action, yet as the money was applied for repairs on the property and expenses of adminstering the trust, and as the transaction was thus beneficial to the parties in interest, and as no bad faith appears to be imputed to the lenders, it seems to me that the rejection of these claims, as against the lenders, would be harsh and inequitable. And as Waring Brothers, upon whose credit, in part at least, these sums were advanced, have since paid the same to the original lenders, and taken an assignment of the claims, I see no reason why they are not likewise entitled to payment." In the opinion on this report the circuit court said that it approved the conclusions of the commissioner as to "Loan Account." In the interlocutory decree of June 11, 1884, is this clause: "And the court approves the findings and conclusions of the said special commissioner under the head of 'The Loan Account,' in said report, and finds that the receiver borrowed of the First National Bank of Terre Haute, Ind., and of McKeen & Co., bankers, certain sums of money, which he applied directly to pay the necessary expenses of the execution of his trust herein, and that there are balances of $54,900 and $32,000, respectively, due on account of such loans; and the court orders, adjudges and decrees that the holders of said claims are entitled to priority of payment out of the trust estate, before payment of bonds." But by the final decree, the items of $54,900 and $32,000 are declared to be subordinate to the mortgage bonds, while allowed as indebtedness contracted by the receivers. We are of opinion that these two claims ought not to be allowed priority. The debts were contracted without the previous authority of the court. The amounts were large; and we cannot sanction the action of the receiver in borrowing sums of money so large in amount, without the previous authority of the court, even though the purposes to which the moneys were applied were such as is shown.

As to the item of $29,064.84, it consists of [478] eight notes given by receiver Rees, in May and December, 1878, as shown by exhibit X to the first report of the commissioner, in regard to which the commissioner said, in that report, under the head of "Accounts of Waring Brothers:" "The acceptances or notes of Dole and Rees, exhibit X, aggregating $29,064.84, are contested upon the ground that those receivers had no power to contract the debts. Mr. Genis' explanation of the item appears on page 140 of the abstract. Seven of the eight notes appear to have been given for legitimate and necessary purposes, such as rent of railroad track, repairing of engine, purchase of stationary engine, money advanced for general expenses, etc., etc. The several amounts were small and, I think, within the discretion of the receiver to contract. It would be very trying on the court as well as receiver, if the latter, in operating a railroad, were compelled to obtain the sanction of the court for all sums as small as these. The last item, of $7,000, is more vigorously contested. An account of the transaction is given by Mr. Genis (abstract, 192). Waring Brothers were desirous that Rees should resign; and Genis, on their behalf, acceded to his demand for the payment of a forfeiture provided in Rees' private contract of employment with Waring Brothers, as a condition precedent to his resignation; and thus he ended his agency and his receivership at the same time. The payment of the forfeiture was made out of Waring Brothers' own funds, and there is no claim that it is a charge against the trust fund. On the day Rees resigned, he further insisted that Waring Brothers should advance moneys with which to pay a certain claim before he resigned. This was a debt of $7,000 to a bank. It was a debt of the receivership, upon which he was also personally liable. On page 141, abstract, speaking of this item, Mr. Genis says: 'The last item, $7,000, is cash given Mr. Rees, as receiver, and passed into the general funds, as the books will show.' It is broadly charged that this transaction was bribery, and that the bribe is now asked to be repaid out of the trust funds. Undoubtedly the debt paid was a debt of the receivership, the trust fund got the benefit of the payment, and the only benefit Rees received was his release as surety upon a debt of the receivership. Waring Brothers' money was loaned to the receiver, and was used by him to pay a debt for which the receivership was primarily liable; and the fact that such payment was demanded by the retiring receiver, does not make it any the less a present debt against the receivership." In its opinion on that report the circuit court said that it approved the commissioner's conclusions as to "Accounts of Waring Brothers;" and, in the decree of June 11, 1884, it stated that "the court approves the findings and conclusions of said special commissioner under the head of 'Accounts of Waring Brothers,'" but the question of the priority of the item of $29,064.84 over the bonds appears to have been reserved by that decree. In the final report of the commissioner, under the head of "Relative equities of receiver's floating indebtedness and the mortgage bonds," after discussing the subject at length, he said: "I am, therefore, of opinion that all just indebtedness contracted by the receivers in the execution of their trust and in the operation of the road, including claims for labor and supplies, liabilities incurred in sustaining necessary business relations with other railroad companies, liabilities as a common carrier, damages to persons and property in operating the roads, obligations to shippers properly incurred in due course of business, and other claims, if any, of like character and coming within the same principle, are entitled to priority in payment over bonds." But in the final decree, the item of $29,064.84 is not given such priority. We are of opinion that this item cannot be allowed priority, for the reason that the borrowing of the money for which the notes were given was not sanctioned in advance by the court. Though made up of amounts not, perhaps large in themselves, the aggregate cannot be called small; and there never could be any difficulty in obtaining an order of the court, if one were proper, to borrow money to a specified total amount, for specific purposes. In any event, the item of $7,000 could not be allowed priority, as the purposes for which that sum was used were not sufficiently shown.

Waring Brothers also object because the final decree orders that the "rents due Waring Brothers, for use of rolling stock, as shown by schedules U and W of" the final "report of the special commissioner," and "the sum of $21,099.43 due Waring Brothers for extraordinary depreciation of rolling stock," be subordinated to the mortgage bonds of the three sectional roads, respectively. The net amount due for the above rents, as stated in those schedules, with interest to January 15, 1885, is $325,354.35, and that amount is allowed as a debt by the commissioner. The court did not allow it priority, and we see no sufficient ground for reversing the decision. The same conclusion is reached as to the item for $21,099.43.

Waring Brothers also object because the court did not, in the final decree, specifically allow ten claims of theirs, amounting to $67,488.81, set forth under the head of "Right of way claims and outstanding titles," in schedule I to the second report of the commissioner, and give them priority to the mortgage bonds, and because that decree remitted the holders of those claims to such suits as they might "properly bring in any court of competent jurisdiction against the company alleged to be liable thereon, or against the purchaser or purchasers" at the sale to be made under the decree. We see no error in the decree in this respect; nor in its failure to allow interest on the items of $4,500, $9,100, and $17,001.47; nor in its failure to allow more to Waring Brothers for right of way, land, buildings and mechanics' liens, or to make any different provision from that made in regard to the use of any claims by them in payment of the railroad property, if they should purchase it; nor in its failure to give precedence over the mortgage bonds to the claims of Waring Brothers, called "six months' supply claims."

We come now to the appeal of S. A. Fletcher & Co. They are the holders of the three certificates of the seventeenth series, and the four certificates of the eighteenth series, before mentioned, and allowed with priority, and of seven other receiver's certificates named in schedule N to the commissioner's second report, and allowed with priority; seven of the entire fourteen having been issued under one of the two orders before mentioned, each dated June 29, 1881, and the other seven under the other of those two orders. The circuit court, in its final decree, reserved for future determination all questions of the relative priorities and equities among those who were given liens prior to the mortgage bonds, in case the respective properties should not sell for amounts in excess respectively of the liens to which precedence was given over the mortgage debts. S. A. Fletcher & Co. appeal from that part of the decree, and insist that the decree ought to have found that the receiver's certificates held by them were liens of the force, character and effect, and to the extent, provided by the two orders of June 29, 1881, according to the purport of the certificates, and entitled to priority of payment over all bonds and debts, and all receiver's debts and certificates, except the receiver's certificates specially excepted in those orders. By each of the orders of June 29, 1881, each certificate to be issued under it was declared to be a special charge and lien on the line and property in respect of which it should be issued, superior in lien to all mortgage bonds, and debts of the company, and receiver's debts, except such receiver's debts as had theretofore been declared by order of court to be special charges and liens on such line and property. We are of opinion that (with the exception of debts for taxes, and receiver's certificates issued to borrow money to pay taxes, or to discharge tax liens), there should be no priority or preference among the debts and claims, whether receiver's certificates or other debts, which are allowed precedence over the mortgage bonds of any road; but that all should stand alike, notwithstanding any orders heretofore made, and that the decree should so provide.

It results that the decrees are reversed so far as they allow to Waring Brothers the benefit of the 994 Paris and Decatur bonds as unexchanged and uncanceled bonds, and so far as they deny priority over the Paris and Decatur bonds to the items of $30,822.09 and $14,140.67, and so far as they fail to provide that there shall be no priority or preference, with the exception above stated, among the debts and claims, whether receiver's certificates or other debts, which are allowed precedence over the mortgage bonds of any road; and the causes are remanded to the circuit court, with a direction to make those modifications in the decrees; and in all other respects the decrees are affirmed. No costs are allowed in this court for or against any party, and the expense of printing the record is to be borne equally by Borg and others and Waring Brothers.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

WALTON FERGUSON, Plf. in Err., [482]
v.
CHESTER A. ARTHUR, Late Collector of the PORT OF NEW YORK.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 482-490.)

Import duty on proprietary medicines.

Henry's calcined magnesia being a medicinal preparation, imported in bottles and recommended to the public as a proprietary medicine, is subject to a duty of 50 per cent ad valorem, under section 2504 R. S. schedule M, and not twelve cents per pound under the same section and schedule.

[No. 190.]

Argued Mar 24, 1886. Decided Apr. 5, 1886.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York.

The case is stated by the court.

Mr Edwin B. Smith, for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Wm. A. Maury, Asst. Atty-Gen., for defendant in error.

[482] Mr. Justice Blatchford delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action brought by Walton Ferguson, in the Supreme Court of the State of New York, and removed into the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York, against the Collector of the Port of New York, to recover moneys paid under pro-[483] test, in January, 1876, as duties on an importation of Henry's calcined magnesia, made by said Ferguson, doing business as J. & S. Ferguson. The Collector exacted on the merchandise a duty of 50 per cent ad valorem, under the following provision of the Revised Statutes, (sec. 2504, schedule M, p. 480, 2d ed.):

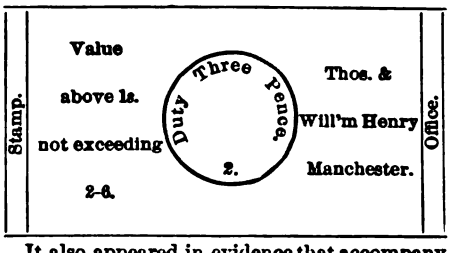
"Proprietary medicines: pills, powders, tinctures, troches or lozenges, sirups, cordials, bitters, anodynes, tonics, plasters, liniments, salves, ointments, pastes, drops, waters, essences, spirits, oils, or other medicinal preparations or compositions, recommended to the public as proprietary medicines, or prepared according to some private formula or secret art as remedies or specifics for any disease or diseases or affections whatever affecting the human or animal body; 50 per centum ad valorem."

The plaintiff contended that the article was dutiable at twelve cents per pound, under this provision of the same section and schedule (p. 477): "Magnesia: carbonate, six cents per pound; calcined, twelve cents per pound."

At the trial there was a verdict for the defendant, and he had judgment, and the plaintiff has brought a writ of error.

The bill of exceptions contains the following statements:

"The merchandise in question was Henry's calcined magnesia, prepared by Thomas and William Henry, manufacturing chemists, of Manchester, England, and put up in ounce bottles; in the glass of each bottle was blown the words 'Henry's calcined magnesia, Manchester,' and over one end of each bottle was pasted a stamp, of which the following is a copy:



It also appeared in evidence that accompanying each bottle thereof was a wrapper; that upon said wrapper was a circular; that of the said labels the following are copies:

'Henry's calcined magnesia.
[484] 'Price 2s 9d. Stamp included.
'Caution.

'The purchasers of this article are requested to observe that the words Thos. and William Henry, Manchester, are engraved on the government stamp pasted over the cork of each bottle. This is the only effectual security against the counterfeited imitations which are sold in bottles similarly moulded, under their names. Trade-mark, 'Henry's Calcined Magnesia.'

'Caution.

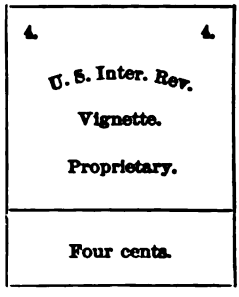
'Messrs. Thos. & Wm. Henry, of Manchester, have received frequent complaints that their calcined magnesia is counterfeited in the United States, and, having been furnished with specimens of spurious and very inferior imitations there vended, in bottles similarly moulded, and with forged stamps and bills of direction, beg leave to caution the consumers of their magnesia in America to purchase it only of persons whose character is such as to preclude their selling a spurious article knowing it to be such.

'Druggists and storekeepers are informed that Messrs. J. & S. Ferguson, late Ogden, Ferguson & Co., merchants, of New York, are the sole wholesale agents authorized by Messrs. Henry in the United States, and that the article may be constantly had of them genuine and on the best terms. Trade-mark, Henry's Calcined Magnesia.'

That upon the first of the aforesaid labels was pasted a stamp; that the following is a copy thereof:



That the following is a copy of the aforesaid circular:

'Trade Mark:
'Henry's Calcined Magnesia.
'Genuine Calcined Magnesia.
'Prepared by
'Thomas and William Henry,
'Manufacturing
'Chemists,
'East St. and St. Peters, Manchester.

'And sold wholesale by them, and in London by Bayley & Company, Cockspur St.; Barclay & Sons, Farmington St.; Butler & Crispe, 4 Cheapside; Edwards, 157 Queen Victoria Street; F. Newberry & Sons, 37 Newgate Street; J Sanger & Sons, 150 & 252 Oxford Street; Sutton (late Diccy & Co.), 10 Bow Church Yard, and Savory & Moore, 143 New Bond Street, in bottles at 2s. 9d., or with ground stoppers at 4s. 6d., stamps included (the names of the preparers being engraved upon each government stamp, pasted over the cork or stopper of each bottle, which in British dominions, where the forgery of the stamp is highly penal, is the best security against counterfeits), and retail by at least one agent in every country town.'"

The circular went on to set forth the beneficial use of calcined magnesia in certain specified diseases, and in complaints of children; and the dose required for children and for adults; and wherein calcined magnesia is superior to common or uncalcined magnesia alba, and then proceeded: "In consequence of improvements which they have made in the manufacture of calcined magnesia, Messrs. Henry are enabled to offer to the public their preparation of this medicine, which has already been honored with the approbation of some of the first chemists and physicians of the age, with increased confidence in its superior quality. The calcined magnesia prepared by them will be found to be perfectly deprived of carbonic acid, free from taste, smell or other disagreeable property, and without roughness or grittiness to the touch or the palate."

The bill of exceptions further says: "Plaintiff's testimony proved that all calcined magnesia is a well known medicinal preparation of magnesia, made from sulphate of magnesia, bicarbonate of soda, and calcined by heat. A formula for the preparation is contained in the dispensatories, and first class chemists frequently prepare the article for their own use. The article comes in bulk and is sold at $2.50 per pound. Henry's calcined magnesia is universally known by that name and has a character of its own, distinct from ordinary calcined magnesia, although it is used for the same purposes. It has been prepared by the same family, a firm of manufacturing chemists in Manchester, England, for the last one hundred years, and has a peculiar value in the market. It sells in this country, at wholesale, by the dozen, ounce bottles, for $8.50, and for twenty-seven shillings in England; whereas, Husband's preparation, the American preparation of the highest repute, sells at $3.00 or $3.50 per dozen. Henry's preparation has a peculiar reputation on account of the nicety with which it is prepared. Whether it is prepared according to the formula given in the dispensatory no witness knew. There was no dispute, upon the above facts, in regard to the history of Henry's magnesia and its peculiar value and reputation, and the form and style and representations under which it has been and is presented to the public."

At the close of the evidence on both sides, the defendant moved the court to direct a verdict for him, upon the ground that the plaintiff had failed to show that his merchandise was not "a proprietary medicine or medicinal preparation," within the meaning of the above provision under which the duty was exacted. Before a ruling was made on that motion, the plaintiff requested the court to submit the question of fact to the jury, on the ground that there was a substantial question of fact which was in dispute. The court denied the plaintiff's request, and he excepted. The court then directed the jury to find a verdict for the defendant, on the ground that there was no material question of fact in dispute, and to such ruling the plaintiff excepted. The jury thereupon rendered a verdict for the defendant.

That the article in question is a medicinal preparation there can be no doubt. The circular sets forth its virtues as a remedy in disease, and calls it a "medicine."

Is it recommended to the public as a proprietary medicine? "Proprietary" is defined thus —in The Imperial Dictionary: "belonging to ownership; as, proprietary rights"—in Webster: "belonging, or pertaining, to a proprietor;" "proprietor" being defined, "one who has the legal right or exclusive title to anything, whether in possession or not; an owner —in Worcester: "relating to a certain owner or proprietor."

It is quite plain, we think, that Thomas and William Henry recommended their calcined magnesia to the public as a medicine in which they had a proprietary right, as owning all that there was of good will and business reputation appurtenant to the article, resulting from its name and from what they stated about its manufacture. They prepared it and put it up in glass bottles, in each of which was blown the words "Henry's Calcined Magnesia, Manchester." Over one end of each bottle was pasted an English revenue stamp, with their name on it. They announced a property in the trade-mark, "Henry's Calcined Magnesia." They called it "their calcined magnesia." They announced J. & S. Ferguson as their sole wholesale agents in the United States. They recommended the article as of superior quality, because of improvements which they had made in its manufacture, and stated, as a result of those improvements, that the article had no carbonic acid, no taste, smell or other disagreeable property, and no roughness or grittiness to the touch or palate. To complete this proprietary character, they put on each bottle a four cent United States internal revenue proprietary stamp. Although it appeared at the trial that all calcined magnesia "is a well known medicinal preparation of magnesia, made from sulphate of magnesia, bicarbonate of soda, and calcined by heat," and that a formula for the preparation was contained in the dispensatories, it did not appear that Henry's preparation was made according to that formula; while it did appear that it was universally known by the name of "Henry's Calcined Magnesia," and had a character of its own, distinct from ordinary calcined magnesia, although used for the same purposes, and that it had been prepared by the same family at Manchester for 100 years, and had a peculiar reputation on account of the nicety with which it was prepared, and a peculiar value in the market, shown by the price it commanded. [488]

We cannot doubt that this was an article recommended to the public as a proprietary medicine, within the statute. It may fall within that clause, without being prepared according to some private formula or secret art, as a remedy for disease. The statute is in the alternative.

A reference to the internal revenue law (Schedule A to sec. 3419, R. S. p. 678, 2d ed.) shows the sense in which Congress used the word "proprietary." It imposed internal revenue taxes on medicinal preparations, where the person making or preparing them, 1, had or claimed a private formula or secret or art; 2, had or claimed an exclusive right or title to the making or preparing them; 3, made or sold them under a patent; 4, recommended them to the public as proprietary medicines, or as remedies for disease. Thus, a medicinal preparation might be proprietary, without being made by a private formula, or under an exclusive right claimed to the making or preparing it, or under a patent. These internal revenue provisions had their inception in the Act of July 1, 1862, chap. 119 (12 Stat. at L. 484), while both of the customs provisions above cited are first found in the Act of July 14, 1862, chap. 163 (12 Stat. at L. 548, 549). The word "proprietary," as applied to a medicinal preparation, in the revenue laws, had its origin then.

The plaintiff contends that because a duty of so much a pound is laid on calcined magnesia by that specific name, this Henry's calcined magnesia, imported in bottles and sold by the bottle, by that name, cannot be dutiable under the general designation of a proprietary medicine. But this article is not and does not purport to be the calcined magnesia dutiable at twelve cents a pound. By the mode of manufacture used, the carbonic acid is eliminated, the taste and smell are destroyed, other disagreeable qualities are removed, and all grittiness is got rid of. It "has a character of its own, distinct from ordinary calcined magnesia," as the bill of exceptions states, which must arise from the special mode of manufacture. The "ordinary calcined magnesia" is that sold in bulk and by the pound, and dutiable at twelve cents a pound. It was undoubtedly to reach just such medicinal preparations [489] as this—the monopoly of a particular person, commanding a price due to a special mode of manufacture, sold in bottles, having a name attached identifying the manufacturer as the proprietor of all that imparted the special merit and produced the special price—that the special revenue tax was laid.

The duty by the pound on calcined magnesia, and the ad valorem duty on proprietary medicines, starting together, as they did, in the Act of July 14, 1862, and continued in the same language in the Revised Statutes, and reproduced in the Act of March 3, 1883, chap. 121 (22 Stat. at L. 493, 494), with the duty on calcined magnesia put at ten cents per pound, and the word "proprietary" extended to all proprietary articles, and not confined to proprietary medicines, the principle of the cases cited for the plaintiff does not apply.

In Homer v. Collector, 1 Wall. 486 [68 U. S. bk. 17, L. ed. 688], "almonds" had been dutiable eo nomine almost immemorially, and an ad valorem duty was imposed on them, as "almonds," in the Act of 1846; and it was held that, under the Act of 1857, they were not subject to a less duty, as "fruits, green, ripe and dried."

In Movius v. Arthur, 95 U. S. 144 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 420], "patent leather" was dutiable by that name, in the Acts of 1861 and 1862. The Act of 1872 imposed a less duty on "skins dressed and finished, of all kinds." It was held that the old duty on patent leather continued, because, though it was a finished skin, something was done to it after it could be called a finished skin, to make patent leather of it. In the case at bar, Henry's article is not the ordinary calcined magnesia, dutiable by the pound, but something is done to that ordinary calcined magnesia by the Henrys, which, in connection with the manner in which it is put up and sent forth, makes it a proprietary medicine, although the base of it is magnesia, calcined.

In Arthur v. Stephani, 96 U. S. 125 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 771], "confectionery" was, by the Act of 1864, dutiable at fifty cents a pound, and by the Act of 1872 a duty of five cents a pound was laid on chocolate. It was held that an article which was simply chocolate was dutiable as chocolate and not as confectionery.

A like case is that of Arthur v. Rheims, 96 U. S. 143 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 813], where "artificial flowers," an article made of cotton, being dutiable by that name in the Act of 1864, it was held that they were not dutiable at a less rate, by the imposition of a less duty on manufactures of cotton, in the Act of 1872.

There was no question of fact for the jury, and it was proper for the court to direct a verdict for the defendant. Improvement Co. v. Munson, 14 Wall. 442 [81 U. S. bk. 20, L. ed. 867]; Pleasants v. Fant, 22 Wall. 116; [89 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 780]; Herbert v. Butler, 97 U. S. 319 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 958]; Bowditch v. Boston, 101 U. S. 16 [Bk. 25, L. ed. 980]; Griggs v. Houston, 104 U. S. 553 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 840]; Randall v. Baltimore & Ohio R. R. Co. 109 U. S. 478 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 1003]; Anderson Co. Comrs. v. Beal, and Baylis v. Travellers' Ins. Co. 113 U. S. 227, 316 [Bk. 28, L.ed. 966, 989]; Schofield v. Chicago, etc. R. Co. [ante, 224].

Judgment affirmed.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

TOWN OF MAHOMET, Plf. in Err.,
v.
JOHN M. QUACKENBUSH.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 508-514.)

Municipal bonds.

Article 3, section 23 of the Illinois Constitution of 1848, providing that no private local law shall embrace more than one subject and that it shall be expressed in the title, is satisfied if the law has but one general object, which is clearly expressed in the title, and the body of the Act is germane to the title.

Anderson v. Santa Anna, ante, affirmed.

[No. 145.]

Submitted Mar. 8, 1886. Decided April 5, 1886.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of Illinois.

The case is stated in the opinion of the court and in the case therein referred to.

Messrs. John McNulta, R. A. Lemon and John J. Weed, for plaintiff in error.

Mr. T. C. Mather, for defendant in error.

Mr. Chief Justice Waite delivered the opinion of the court:

The facts of this case are identical with those of Anderson v. Santa Anna, [ante 633], except that here the bonds were issued by one township on the line of the Danville, Urbana, Bloomington and Pekin Railroad, and there by another. The bonds in the two cases are the same in form and the statutory authority for their issue the same. All questions actually decided in the other case are concluded in this, but one point is made now that was not presented then, and it arises on these facts:

Article 3, section 23 of the Illinois Constitution of 1848, which was in force when the statutes on which the case depends were passed, contained this provision:

"And no private or local law which may be passed by the General Assembly shall embrace more than one subject, and that shall be expressed in the title."

The Act of 1867, under which the bonds were issued, was a private or local law with the following title:

"An Act to Amend the Articles of Association of the Danville, Urbana, Bloomington and Pekin Railroad Company, and to Extend the Powers of and Confer a Charter upon the Same."

The parts of the Act pertinent to the present inquiry are sections 1, 12 and 13. These are as follows:

"Section 1. Be it enacted by the people of the State of Illinois represented in the General Assembly, That the said corporation is hereby created a body politic and corporate under the name and style of 'The Danville, Urbana, Bloomington and Pekin Railroad Company,' etc. And the said company is authorized and empowered to locate, construct and complete a railroad, extending from the City of Pekin, in Tazewell County, Illinois, through or as near as practicable to the Towns of Tremont, Mackinatown, Concord, Bloomington, Leroy, Mount Pleasant, Mahomet, Champaign City, Urbana and St. Joseph to the east boundary of the State of Illinois," etc.

"Section 12. To further aid in the construction of said road by said company, any incorporated town or township in counties acting under the township organization law, along the route of said road, may subscribe to the capital stock of said company in any sum not exceeding $250,000.

"Section 13. No such subscription shall be made until the question has been submitted to the legal voters of such incorporation, town or township in which the subscription is proposed to be made; and the clerk of each of said towns or townships is hereby required, upon the presentation of a petition signed by at least ten citizens, who are legal voters and taxpayers of such town or township for which he is clerk, and in which petition the amount proposed to be subscribed shall be stated, to post up notices in at least three public places in each town or township, which notice shall be posted not less than thirty days before the day of holding such election, notifying the legal voters of such town or township to meet at the usual place of holding elections in such town or township, or some other convenient place named in such notice, for the purpose of voting for or against such subscription; Provided, That where elections may have already been held, and a majority of the legal voters of any township or incorporated town were in favor of a subscription to said railroad, then, and in that case, no other election need be had, and the amount so voted for shall be subscribed as in this Act provided. And such elections are hereby declared to be legal and valid, as though this Act had been in force at the time thereof, and all the provisions hereof had been complied with."

The point now made is that the statute, so far as it undertakes to authorize municipalities to subscribe to the capital stock of the corporation, is unconstitutional because it embraces two distinct subjects, one the incorporation of the railroad company, and the other an enlargement of the corporate powers of municipal corporations, the first of which alone is expressed in the title. This objection, it seems to us, is fully disposed of by the case of Supervisors of Schuyler Co. v. Rock Island, etc. R. R. Co. 25 Ill. 182, decided by the Supreme Court of Illinois in 1860. There the title was "An Act to Incorporate the Rock Island & Alton Railroad Company," and the Act, besides incorporating the company, authorized counties to subscribe to the stock. As to this the court said, speaking through Chief Justice Caton: "We think the title of this Act sufficient to embrace the whole of the law, and that it is in compliance with the constitutional requirement All the provisions of the Act are appropriately designed to carry out the object of the corporation. If it was proper to authorize subscriptions to the stock, it was certainly proper to enable individuals or counties to subscribe and specify the terms and conditions on which they might subscribe, and the mode of making the subscription."

In States where constitutional provisions like that now under consideration have been decided to be mandatory, and not directory only, it has generally been held that the requirement is satisfied if the law has but one general object, and that is clearly expressed in the title. It is enough if the body of the Act is germane to the title. This is certainly the well established rule in Illinois, where, as was said by Mr. Justice Breese, dissenting in O'Leary v. County of Cook, 28 Ill. 543, decided in 1862, the "court has leaned rather in favor of the validity of private acts, when the subjects of the acts are multifarious." In that case a provision in a law entitled "An Act to Amend an Act Entitled 'An Act to Incorporate the North Western University,'" which prohibited "the sale of spirituous liquors within four miles of the university, under a special penalty to be recovered by the County of Cook," was held by a majority of the court not to be repugnant to this provision of the Constitution, and it was said, p. 538: "The object of the charter was to create an institution for the education of young men; and it was competent for the Legislature to embrace [512] within it everything which was designed to facilitate that object. Every provision which was intended to promote the well being of the institution, or its students, was within the proper subject matter of the law." As early as 1858 it was decided in Belleville, etc. R. R. Co. v. Gregory, 15 Ill. 29, that in an Act to incorporate the Belleville and Illinoistown Railroad Company, authority could be given the company "to extend and unite with any other railroad in this State." So, too, in Firemen's Benevolent Asso. v. Lounsbury, 21 Ill. 511, it was held, in 1859, that, in a law entitled "An Act to Incorporate the Firemen's Benevolent Association and for Other Purposes," it was competent to provide that the agents of all foreign insurance companies doing business in Chicago should pay the association $2 on every $100 of premiums received by them during a year, the court simply remarking on this branch of the case, p. 575: "We think the sixth section germane to the objects of the bill and embraced properly in the same subject, the whole of which is sufficiently expressed in the title." The same general principle has been fully recognized and enforced in Neifing v. Pontiac, 56 Ill. 172; People v. Wright, 70 Ill. 396; People v. Brislin, 80 Ill. 423, where it was said, p. 433: "This court has gone very far to uphold statutes supposed to be within the objection;" "the body of the Act in question is germane to the title of the bill;" Guild v. Chicago, 82 Ill. 475; and Fuller v. People, 92 Ill. 185. This court also decided to the same effect in Jonesboro City v. Cairo & St. Louis R. R. Co. 110 U. S. 199 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 118], as to a similar provision in the Illinois Constitution of 1870.

It is further insisted, however, that if this law is good, so far as the general authority to subscribe is concerned, it is bad to the extent that it seeks to give effect to elections which were unauthorized at the time they were held, and we are referred to the cases of Lockport v. Gaylord, 61 Ill. 276, and Middleport v. Ætna Life Ins. Co. 82 Ill. 562, in support of this position. In Lockport v. Gaylord, it was decided that a provision legalizing certain appropria-
[513] tions theretofore made by the president and trustees of the village and certain orders drawn by the clerk was not germane to the title of "An Act to Amend the Charter of the Village of Lockport," passed February 12, 1853, and in Middleport v. Ins. Co. that authority to issue bonds in liquidation of appropriations voted under a prior Act was not germane to the title of "An Act to Legalize Certain Aids Heretofore Voted and Granted to Aid in the Construction" of a proposed railroad. The first of these cases was decided in 1871, and the last in 1876. In the present case, however, the provision relates only to the terms and conditions on which subscription to the stock of the railroad company might be made, which it was said in Supervisors of Schuyler Co. v. Rock Island, etc. R. R. Co. was germane to the general subject of a bill to incorporate a railroad company. It is nothing more nor less than a requirement of a vote of the people as authority for the subscription, with a proviso that if the vote had already been taken it need not be taken over again. This, as it seems to us, comes within both the letter and spirit of the earlier adjudications, and that these have not been overthrown by the later cases. We are aware that in Welch v Post, 99 Ill. 474, decided in 1881, the court said that "on the authority of Middleport v. Ætna Ins. Co" it was "inclined to hold" that power could not be given to municipal corporations to subscribe to the stock of a railroad company in an Act entitled substantially like that now under consideration, but as neither in this case, nor in that of Middleport v. Ins. Co., nor in that of Lockport v. Gaylord, was any reference whatever made to the earlier decisions, which seem to be so decidedly the other way, we do not feel ourselves called upon to depart from the long settled practice in the State by what has yet been done towards making a change. In fact, in Fuller v. People, before cited, which was decided eight years after the Lockport Case, and three years after that of Middleport, the following quotation is made with approval from Cooley on Const. Lim. 1st ed. 144, § 2: "The general purpose of these provisions is accomplished when a law has but one general object, which is fairly indicated by its title. To require every end and means necessary or convenient for the accomplishment of [514] this general object to be provided for by a separate Act relating to that alone would not only be unreasonable, but would actually render legislation impossible." And again, from Sun M. Ins. Co. v. Mayor, 8 N. Y. 253: "There must be but one subject, but the mode in which the subject is treated, or the reasons which influenced the legislation, could not and need not be stated in the title, according to the letter and spirit of the Constitution."

In Montclair v. Ramsdell, 107 U. S. 147 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 431]; Otoe County v. Baldwin, 111 U. S. 16, and Ackley School District v. Hall, 113 U. S. 135 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 836, 954], we had occasion to consider the same general question, with the same result, in connection with similar provisions in the Constitutions of New Jersey, Nebraska and Iowa respectively.

Finding nothing in this case to distinguish it from Anderson v. Santa Anna, the judgment is affirmed on that authority.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

JAMES B. DINGLEY ET AL., Copartners, as DINGLEY BROTHERS, Plffs. in Err.,

v.

WESLEY M. OLER ET AL., Copartners, as W. M. OLER & Co.

WESLEY M. OLER ET AL., Copartners, as W. M. OLER & Co., Plffs. in Err.,

v.

JAMES B. DINGLEY ET AL., Copartners, as DINGLEY BROTHERS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 490–504.)

Executory contract—time for performance—refusal to perform—when right of action accrues.

1. Where a contract is made between two firms, dealers in ice, through an offer by one firm to take from the other a cargo of ice, and "return the same to you next year from our houses" which offer was accepted and acted upon, it can be executed by the first firm by a delivery of the ice called for by the contract at any time during the shipping season of the next year. The first firm is not bound to deliver at any time on demand of the second firm.

2. The refusal of a party to perform an executory contract, in order to authorize the other party to commence suit for nonfulfilment, must be distinct, absolute and unequivocal. Where one party has the right at any time during a certain season to deliver goods under contract, a refusal to comply with a particular demand for an immediate delivery does not authorize the party making the demand to commence suit.

3. The refusal of one party to deliver goods under a contract, if not treated as final by the party making the demand, cannot afterwards be treated as a refusal authorizing the commencement of suit.

[Nos. 149, 150.]

Argued March 8, 9, 1886. Decided April 5, 1886.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Maine.

The case is stated by the court.

Messrs. Orville D. Baker and Leslie C. Cornish, for Dingley brothers:

The court below has found that during the delivery time the plaintiffs demanded and the defendants unqualifiedly refused to deliver any ice during the season.

Even where the demand is before the contract time for performance has begun, a distinct and unequivocal refusal to perform at all may be treated as a breach and action may be brought at once.

It has been frequently held in the case of an executory contract that if the promisor has by any positive act rendered himself unable to perform his part, it not only serves to dispense with the performance of any conditions precedent on the part of the promisee before bringing his action, but also is itself a breach of the contract.

Short v. Stone, 8 Ad. & Ell. N. S. 358; Lovelock v. Franklyn, 8 Ad. & Ell. N. S. 371; Ford v. Tiley, 6 Barn. & C. 327; Heard v. Bowers, 23 Pick. 455; Kenerson v. Henry, 101 Mass. 152; Leake, Contracts, p. 460; 2 Chitty, Contracts, p. 1067; 2 Parsons, Contracts, p. 667; Benj. Sales, § 567.

We also maintain that when one party to an executory contract absolutely refuses to perform his contract and, before the time arrives for performance, distinctly and unqualifiedly communicates that refusal to the other party, that other party can if he choose treat that refusal as a breach and commence action at once therefor.

Cort v. Ambergate R. Co. 17 Ad. & Ell. N. S. 127; Hochster v. De La Tour, 2 Ell. & Bl. 678; Danube & B. S. R. Co. v. Xenos, 11 C. B. N. S. 152; Frost v. Knight, L. R. 5 Exch. 322; L. R. 7 Exch. 111; Crabtree v. Messersmith, 19 Iowa. 179; Holloway v. Griffith, 32 Iowa, 409; Fox v. Kitton, 19 Ill. 519; Chamber of Commerce v. Sollitt, 43 Ill. 519; Dugan v. Anderson, 36 Md. 567; Burtis v. Thompson, 42 N. Y. 246; Howard v. Daly, 61 N. Y. 362; Hancock v. N. Y. Life Ins. Co. 13 Am. L. Reg. 108; Ex parte Pollard, 2 Lowell, 411; Smoot's Case, 15 Wall. 36; Leake, Contracts, p. 462; Benj. Sales, § 518; 2 Chitty, Contracts, 11th ed. p. 1067; 2 Parsons, Contracts, p. 666; Sedgwick, Damages, p. 419, note.

Such then we find to be the law in the case of a bilateral contract; that is, a contract where both parties are bound and where the consideration of each promise is the promise of the other party.

But the principle applies with much more reason in the case of a unilateral contract, as is the one at bar; one party having already performed the consideration and the other being alone bound.

See Masterton v. Mayor, 7 Hill, 61; Dugan v. Anderson, 36 Md. 567.

Mr. Bernard Carter, for Oler & Company:

By the true construction of the contract Oler & Co. were only bound to return the ice, provided they could do so without loss to them; and therefore they had a right to refuse to do more than pay the price the ice was worth in 1879, when they took it as an accommodation, if the Dingleys were not willing to wait for the delivery until it fell to such price.

Oler & Co. had all of the season of 1880 to deliver the ice, and could not be required to deliver it or any part of it in July, 1880.

We understand it to be settled law that where there is an undertaking to do a thing in a certain year or month or any other determinate time, the party so undertaking has the whole year, month, etc., to perform his undertaking, and is in no default until the expiration of the period.

2 Wharton, Cont. 884; Benj. Sales, 684.

Having all the season of 1880 to deliver the ice, this action was prematurely brought in July, 1880, which was long prior to the close of the season, even though the court should find that the defendants, by their letters of July 7 and 15, 1880, declared that they would not deliver the ice during the season.

2 Parsons, Cont. foot 809.

The principle here stated was, until quite recently, the recognized law in England.

Phillpotts v. Evans, Mees. & W. 475; Ripley v. McLure, 8 Add. & Ell. N. S. 378; Frost v. Knight, Law Rep. 5 Exch. 326.

It is not denied that the English courts have more recently departed from this doctrine

Nor must we omit to say that this court, in Smoot's Case, 15 Wall. 48 (82 U. S bk. 21, L. ed. 107), in mentioning the case of Hochster v. De La Tour incidentally, does not signify any disapproval of it.

But the doctrine of the older English cases is maintained by the Supreme Court of Massachusetts, in a very ably reasoned opinion in which all the cases are reviewed; and it is respectfully submitted that the doctrine there maintained is the correct one.

Daniels v. Newton, 114 Mass. 539. See also Day v. Ins. Co. 45 Conn. 496. See 61 N. Y. 496.

There was no such absolute and unequivocal refusal of Oler & Co. to deliver the ice during the season of 1880 as authorized the plaintiffs to bring this action before the end of the season; the defendant having, as we here assume, until the end of the season to make the delivery.

Hochster v. De La Tour, 2 Ell. & Bl. 679; Frost v. Knight, L. R. 7 Exch. 118; Smoot's Case, supra; Avery v. Bowden, 5 Ell. & Bl. 714; Freeth v. Burr, L. R. 9 C. P. 214.

Mr. Justice Matthews delivered the opinion of the court:

This was an action of assumpsit brought by Dingley Brothers in the Superior Court of the County of Kennebec, in Maine, against W. M. Oler & Co., of Baltimore, to recover damages for the alleged breach of an agreement whereby, it was averred, the defendants undertook and promised, in consideration of $3,245\frac{25}{100}$ tons of ice delivered to them by the plaintiffs in 1879, to return and deliver to the plaintiffs the same quantity of ice from the defendants' ice houses in the year 1880. [491]

The case was removed by the defendants into the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Maine, when the cause was put at issue by a plea of non assumpsit, and was submitted to the court by the parties, the intervention of a jury having been duly waived.

The court made a special finding of the facts, and, in pursuance of the conclusions of law based thereon, rendered judgment in favor of the plaintiffs for the sum of $7,335.85.

Exceptions were taken by each party to rulings of the court, on which errors are assigned, the cause being brought here for review on writs of error sued out by the respective parties.

The court found, as matter of fact, that late in the season of 1879, the plaintiffs, finding themselves in possession of a large quantity of ice undisposed of, and which threatened to be a total loss, pressed the defendants to buy some [492] or all of it. Both parties were dealers in ice, cutting it upon the Kennebec River and shipping it thence during the season; that is, while the river is open.

The offers of the plaintiffs were rejected, but the defendants, by their letter of 6th September, 1879, made a counter offer to take a cargo and "return the same to you next year from our houses." The plaintiffs by their letter of September, 1879, accepted this offer and several cargoes were delivered upon the same terms; the total delivery was 3,245.25 tons.

In July, 1880, one of the plaintiffs spoke to one of the defendants about delivering the ice; and he replied that he did not know about that, delivering ice when it was worth $5 a ton, which they had taken when it was worth fifty cents a ton, but he promised to write an answer. July 7, 1880, the defendants wrote, repeating their objections and saying, among other things: "We must, therefore, decline to ship the ice for you this season, and claim as our right to pay you for the ice in cash at the price you offered other parties here (that is, fifty cents), or give you ice when the market reaches that point."

The plaintiffs, 10th July, 1880, wrote that they had a right to the ice, and had sold it in expectation of its delivery, to which the defendants answered 15th July, 1880, reciting the circumstances of the case and the hardship of such a demand, and again denying the obligation. The letter contains this sentence: "We cannot, therefore, comply with your request to deliver you the ice claimed, and respectfully submit that you ought not to ask this of us," etc., asking for a reply or a personal interview. Neither appears to have been given, and this action was commenced July 21, 1880. The court further found that ice was worth $5 a ton in July, 1880, and fell later in the season to $2 a ton.

Thereupon the court held, as matter of law, that there was a contract executed by the plaintiffs, and to be executed by the defendants, who were bound to deliver $3,245\frac{25}{100}$ tons of ice from their houses on the Kennebec River during [493] the year of 1880; that the year means the shipping season; and that the defendants had the whole season, if they chose to demand it, in which to make delivery, and that the letters of July 7 and 15, from the defendants to the plaintiffs, contained an unequivocal refusal to deliver any ice during the season; that the defendants having unqualifiedly refused to ship the ice, this action can be maintained though brought before the close of the season, but that the damages are not to be reckoned by the price of ice in July; that what the plaintiffs lost was $3,245\frac{25}{100}$ tons of ice some time during the season; that the price of ice went down after July to $2 a ton, and the measure of damages must be reckoned at this rate, with interest from the date of the writ.

To these conclusions of law the plaintiffs below excepted, contending that the right to fix the time for delivery under the contract had vested in them, that it was properly exercised by their demand in July, 1880, that the refusal to deliver at that time constituted the breach of the contract by the defendants, and fixed the damages at $5 per ton, the market value of the ice on that day.

The defendants below excepted, contending on their part that the letters of July 7 and 15 did not constitute an unequivocal refusal to deliver any ice during the season, amounting to a renunciation, and, in that sense, a breach of the contract; and that the action was prematurely brought, the right of action, if any, not accruing until after the expiration of the period within which, by the terms of the contract, they had the option to deliver.

The letter of July 7, 1880, from the defendants to the plaintiffs is as follows:

"Baltimore, Md., 7th July, 1880.

Messrs. Dingley Bros., Gardiner, Me.

Dear Sirs: As per promise of our W. M. O. we write you concerning the ice we got from you last fall. We have before us the whole of the correspondence on that head, and note throughout the same that you promise to stand between us and any loss. We quote from yours of September 9, 1879, on this head, as follows:

'In fact, we do not propose for you to become losers on account of extending us this accommodation.'

Our W. H. O. does not remember your having spoken to him while at Gardiner about your intention of selling the ice, and was very much surprised when informed that you had done so.

We are very sorry indeed that this question should have arisen between us, who have been on such friendly terms hitherto, but we feel that it is not just or equitable for you (in consideration of the ice being used by us only upon your earnest solicitation, and upon your representation that you would lose the whole unless we assisted you by taking some) to expect us to give you ice now worth $5 per ton, when we have letters of yours offering the ice that we got at 50 cents per ton. We must, therefore, decline to ship the ice for you this season, and claim as our right to pay you for the ice, in cash, at the price you offered it to other parties here, or give you ice when the market reaches that point. Again expressing our sincere regret that any complication should arise between us, and assuring you of our innocence in the matter, we are,

Yours Truly, W. M. Oler & Co."

The letter was answered by Dingley Bros. on July 10, as follows:

"Gardiner, July 10, 1880.

Messrs. W. M. Oler & Co., Baltimore.

Dear Sirs: Yours of 7th is in hand, and we must say the conclusion you have come to greatly astonishes us.

Our sole object in making this exchange, no one knows better than yourselves, was to tide us over to such a time during this season as the ice could be marketed at some reasonable figure, and in confirmation of this we refer you to your proposition, made under date of September 6, viz:

'It would, of course, be more convenient for us to ship this cargo from our own houses; but remembering past favors, we feel inclined to assist you in your present difficulty, and will load this cargo from your house, should our terms be agreeable to you.

'We, of course, do not entertain the idea of buying, having a superabundance on hand, but will take this cargo and return same to you next year from our houses.'

Upon this we have acted, and in the utmost good faith made sale of the ice; and now, after all of this, and having refused to buy it yourselves, for you to ask a postponement in the delivery, seems to us hardly right.

Now, whatever the final settlement of this matter is to be, we want you to fill our order; otherwise, we cannot tell what the result might be.

It is not in our minds to do otherwise than right with anyone, and certainly with yourselves; and it is our great desire not to get complicated with the third party in that matter, and assure you that your regrets cannot exceed ours that there should have arisen any difference of opinion concerning this affair, and certain it is that neither of us can afford to do wrong by the other in it; and hoping you will take a more favorable view upon further reflection, we remain,

Truly Yours, Dingley Bros."

The defendants' letter of July 15 was in reply to this, and is as follows:

"Baltimore, Md., 15th July, 1880.

Messrs. Dingley Bros., Gardiner, Me.

Gentlemen: Yours of 10th July received, and in reply would state that our desire to do right is quite as sincere and earnest as your own, and that we regret our inability to see the matter referred to in the same form in which you state it. The case, briefly stated, appears to us thus, as we think the correspondence of last year will show: being very much troubled with the quantity of ice left on your hands by an unfortunate contract with the Messrs. Barker, you repeatedly urged and importuned us to help you out, and promised us if we would do so that no loss should result to us from the transaction. Under these assurances we at length agreed, purely for your accommodation and relief, to take one cargo, and later, under the same influences took more. Now you ask us, at a time when we are pressed by our sales and by short supply threatening us and others, to deliver to you the equivalent in tons of the ice taken from you under the circumstances stated. This does not seem to us to be fair, and certainly does not comport or agree in any way with your agreement to protect us from loss by means of the favor we were intending to do you. We are reluctant to have a disagreement or difference of opinion with old friends, but regard it our duty to protect our own interests, always, however, with a proper regard to the dictates of right. We cannot, therefore, comply with your request to deliver to you the ice claimed, and respectfully submit that you ought not to ask this of us in view of the fact stated herein and in ours of the 7th.

You do not reply to our arguments, but simply ask us to surrender our well formed opinion.

Can you reasonably ask us to do this?

Is not your usually clear and equitable judgment clouded by the manifest considerations of self interest pressing upon you?

We beg you to consider anew all the circumstances of the transaction and your assurances to us as inducements to make it with you, and cannot doubt that you will be led thereby to admit that your request is not reasonable. We will be glad to hear from you in reply, but would be more pleased to have a personal interview, and venture to suggest that you come here for the purpose. Our business is now more active and confining than ever before. We are deprived of the services of W. Geo., and therefore cannot come to see you.

With regards, we are,

Yours Truly, W. M. Oler & Co."

To this letter no answer was returned and the present suit was brought six days after its date.

We agree in opinion with the circuit court [500] that, according to the terms of the contract, the defendants had the option of delivering the ice contracted for at any time during the whole shipping season of 1880, giving to the plaintiffs reasonable notice of the time when fixed and an opportunity to prepare for receiving and taking it away from the defendants' houses. The language of the contract was that the defendants were to "return the same (the ice) to you next year from our houses." [501] Next year, it is not denied, means the shipping season of 1880, during which navigation was open, and in time for the plaintiffs, on notice, to obtain vessels, send them to the ice houses for loading, and get out of the river before it was closed to navigation. The defendants were to deliver, and although that, under the circumstances, required nothing on their part but to be ready for the plaintiffs to receive and load on their vessels, that state of readiness might depend upon other engagements of the defendants in respect to ice in the same houses, so that they had the right under the terms of the contract to consult their convenience as to the particular day when they would furnish to the plaintiffs the ice for shipment. The first and principal act to be done under the contract was to be done by the defendants, that is, the delivery, and the words of the agreement are fully satisfied when that is done at any reasonable time within the season of 1880. And this confers upon the defendants, bound to make the delivery, the choice of the time within the period permitted by the contract. Wheeler v. New Brunswick, etc. R. R. Co. [ante 341.]

We differ, however, from the opinion of the circuit court, that the defendants are to be considered, from the language of their letters above set out, as having renounced the contract by a refusal to perform, within the meaning of the rule which, it is assumed, in such a case, confers upon the plaintiffs a right of action before the expiration of the contract period for performance. We do not so construe the correspondence between the parties. In the letter of July 7, the defendants say: "We must, therefore, decline to ship the ice for you this season, and claim, as our right, to pay you for the ice, in cash, at the price you offered it to other parties here, or give you ice when the market reaches that point." Although in this extract they decline to ship the ice that season, it is accompanied with the expression of an alternative intention, and that is, to ship it, as must be understood, during that season, if and when the market price should reach the point which, in their opinion, the plaintiffs ought to be willing to accept as its fair price between them. It was not intended, we think, as a final and absolute declaration that the con- [502] tract must be regarded as altogether off, so far as their performance was concerned, and it was not so treated by the plaintiffs. For, in their answer of July 10, they repeat their demand for delivery immediately, speak of the letter of the 7th instant as asking "for a postponement of the delivery," urge them "to fill our order," and close with "hoping you (the defendants) will take a more favorable view upon further reflection, etc." Here, certainly, was a locus pœnitentiæ conceded to the defendants by the plaintiffs themseles, and a request for further consideration, based upon a renewed demand, instead of abiding by and standing upon the previous one.

Accordingly, on July 15, the defendants replied to the demand for an immediate delivery to meet the exigency of the plaintiffs' sale of the same ice to others, and the letter is evidently and expressly confined to an answer to the particular demand for a delivery at that time. They accordingly say: "Now you ask us at a time when we are pressed by our sales and by short supply threatening us and others, to deliver to you the equivalent in tons of the ice taken from you under the circumstances stated. This does not seem to us to be fair," etc., * * * "We cannot, therefore, comply with your request to deliver to you the ice claimed, and respectfully submit that you ought not to ask this of us in view of the fact stated herein and in ours of the 7th." This, we think, is very far from being a positive, unconditional and unequivocal declaration of fixed purpose not to perform the contract in any event or at any time. In view of the consequences sought to be deduced and claimed as a matter of law to follow, the defendants have a right to claim that their expressions, sought to be converted into a renunciation of the contract, shall not be enlarged by construction beyond their strict meaning.

The view taken by the circuit court of the correspondence and conduct of the parties, and which we hold to be erroneous, brought the case within the rule laid down by the English courts in Hochster v. De La Tour, 2 Ell. & Bl. 678; Frost v. Knight, L. R. 7 Ex. 111; Danube, etc. R. Co. v. Xenos, 11 C. B. N. S. 152, and which, in Roper v. Johnson, L. R. 8 C. P. 167, 178, [503] was called a novel doctrine, followed by the courts of several of the States, Crabtree v. Messersmith, 19 Iowa, 179; Holloway v. Griffith, 32 Iowa, 409; Fox v. Kittin, 19 Ill. 519; Chamber of Commerce v. Sollitt, 48 Ill. 519; Dugan v. Anderson, 36 Md. 567; Burtis v. Thompson, 42 N. Y. 246, but disputed and denied by the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts in Daniels v. Newton, 114 Mass. 530, and never applied in this court. Accordingly, the right to maintain the present action was justified upon the principle supposed to be established by those cases.

The construction we place upon what passed between the parties renders it unnecessary for us to discuss or decide whether the doctrine of these authorities can be maintained as applicable to the class of cases to which the present belongs; for, upon that construction, this case does not come within the operation of the rule invoked.

In Smoot's Case, 15 Wall. 36 [82 U. S. bk 21, L. ed. 107], this court quoted with approval the qualifications stated by Benjamin on Sales, 424, that "A mere assertion that the party will be unable or will refuse to perform his contract is not sufficient; it must be a distinct and unequivocal absolute refusal to perform the promise, and must be treated and acted upon as such by the party to whom the promise was made; for, if he afterwards continue to urge or demand a compliance with the contract, it is plain that he does not understand it to be at an end."

We do not find any such refusal to have been given or acted upon in the present case, and the facts are not stronger than those in Avery v. Bowden, 5 Ell & Bl. 714; S. C. 6 Id. 953; which were held not to constitute a breach or renunciation of the contract. The most recent English case on the subject is that of Johnstone v. Milling, in the court of appeal, 16 Q. B. D. 460, decided in January of the present year, which holds that the words or conduct relied on as a breach of the contract by anticipation must amount to a total refusal to perform it, and that that does not by itself amount to a breach of the contract unless so acted upon and adopted by the other party.

The present action was prematurely brought before there had been a breach of the contract, even in this sense, by the defendants, for what they said on July 15 amounted merely to a refusal to comply with the particular demand then made for an immediate delivery.

The judgment is accordingly reversed upon the writ of error sued out by the defendants below, and the cause remanded, with instructions to take further proceedings therein according to law; and upon the writ of error of plaintiffs below judgment will be given that they take nothing by their writ of error.

True copy. Test:
James F. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

TURPIN AND BROTHER, Plfs. in Err.,
v.
RUSH BURGESS, Collector of Internal Revenue for the THIRD DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 504-508.)

Constitutional law—exportation stamp—excise tax on tobacco.

*1. The exportation stamp required to be affixed to every package of tobacco intended for exportation, before its removal from the factory, again declared constitutional, and the decision in Pace v. Burgess, Bk. 23, reaffirmed.

2. An excise laid on tobacco, before its removal from the factory, is not a duty on "exports," or "on articles exported," within the prohibition of the Constitution, even though the tobacco be intended for exportation. The case of Cox v. Errol, ante, cited and applied.

[No. 180.]

Argued March 18, 1886. Decided April 5, 1886.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Virginia.

The case is stated by the court.

Mr. Charles S. Stringfellow, for plaintiff in error.

Mr. John Goode, Solicitor-Gen., for defendant in error.

---

* Head notes by Mr. Justice BRADLEY.

[506] Mr. Justice Bradley delivered the opinion of the court:

This suit was brought to recover from the Internal Revenue Collector of the Third District of Virginia the amount paid by the plaintiffs from 1869 to 1872, inclusive, for stamps affixed to certain cases of tobacco manufactured by them and intended for exportation. The sum paid for the stamps was twenty-five cents each. The ground of action relied on by the plaintiffs is, that the tax was unconstitutional, being, as contended, repugnant to that clause of the Constitution which declares that "No tax or duty shall be laid on articles exported from any State." The stamps were required to be affixed by the Act of July 20, 1868 (15 Stat. at L. 157). By this Act an excise tax of thirty-two cents per pound was imposed on all manufactured tobacco, except smoking tobacco, on which the tax was sixteen cents per pound. This tax was required to be paid by purchasing stamps to be affixed to the packages before the tobacco was allowed to be removed from the manufactory; but tobacco intended for exportation was relieved from the payment of this tax by affixing to each package or box, of whatever size, before removal from the factory, a twenty-five cent stamp, engraved to indicate the intent to export the same. After being thus stamped, and giving bond according to the regulations of the Treasury Department, such tobacco might be removed to any export bonded warehouse at some port of entry, and there kept in bond until actually exported. In 1872 the price of the stamp was reduced to ten cents; and the Act was incorporated in this form in section 3385 of the Revised Statutes.

We had occasion to examine the very question raised in this case in Pace v. Burgess, reported in 92 U. S. 372 [Bk. 23, L. ed. 657], and were unanimously of opinion that the Act requiring the exportation stamp complained of was a valid and constitutional Act. The reasons for that decision were given at length in the report of that case, and we see no occasion to modify the views then expressed. The finding of facts, so-called, made by the court in the present case by consent of the parties, who waived a jury, does not change the character of the question. Every fact now found was assumed, or virtually involved, in the former case. But since that decision Congress has abolished all charge for the exportation stamp, by an Act passed August 8, 1882, entitled "An Act to Repeal so Much of Section 3385 of the Revised Statutes as Imposes an Export Tax on Tobacco." It is argued that the language of this title is a concession by Congress that the charge for the stamp was an export tax. This argument admits of several answers. The Act was obtained in the interest of the tobacco manufacturers, and was probably proposed by them, or by their counsel, and the expression referred to may have escaped the attention of the members. But if it was intentionally used, it would only be the opinion of one Congress opposed to that of another; for, of course, it cannot be supposed that the Congress which passed the law regarded it as imposing a tax on exports. Besides, an expression of opinion on the part of Congress, however much to be respected, is not binding on us. The counsel for the plaintiff in this case asks us to declare the law unconstitutional, and thereby to declare that the Congress which passed it was mistaken in its opinion.

With the action of Congress in abolishing the charge for the stamp we have nothing to do. That is a matter of pure legislative discretion, and has no bearing on the question.

We are referred to certain expressions in the opinion of the Court of Appeals of Virginia in the case of Burwell v. Burgess, 32 Gratt. 472, indicating that if it were an original question that court would find it difficult to hold that the money paid for the stamps was not a tax. While entertaining a high respect for the opinions of that eminent court, we cannot surrender our own views on a question which it is our peculiar duty to decide.

There is another view of this subject, however, independent of the considerations which governed our former decision, which is equally decisive of this case. We have lately decided in Coe v. Errol [ante, 715], that goods intended for exportation to another State are liable to taxation as part of the general mass of property of the State of their origin until actually started in course of transportation to the State of their destination, or delivered to a common carrier for that purpose, provided they are taxed in the usual way in which such property is taxed, and not taxed by reason or because of such exportation, or intended exportation, and that the carrying of them to and depositing them at a depot for the purpose of transportation is no part of that transportation. Now the constitutional prohibition against taxing exports is substantially the same when directed to the United States as when directed to a State. In the one case the words are, "No tax or duty shall be laid on articles exported from any [507] State." Art. I, § 9, par. 5. In the other they are: "No State shall, without the consent of Congress, lay any imposts or duties on imports or exports." Art. I, § 10, par. 2. The prohibition in both cases has reference to the imposition of duties on goods by reason or because of their exportation, or intended exportation, or while they are being exported. That would be laying a tax or duty on exports, or on articles exported, within the meaning of the Constitution. But a general tax, laid on all property alike, and not levied on goods in course of exportation, nor because of their intended exportation, is not within the constitutional prohibition. How can the officers of the United States, or of the State, know that goods apparently part of the general mass, and not in course of exportation, will ever be exported? Will the mere word of the owner that they are intended for exportation make them exports? This cannot for a moment be contended. It would not be true, and would lead to the greatest frauds.

It is true, as was conceded in Coe v. Errol, that the prohibition to the States against laying duties on imports or exports related to imports from and exports to foreign countries; yet the decision in that case was based on the postulate that when such imposts or duties are laid on imports or exports from one State to another it amounts to a regulation of commerce among the States, and, therefore, is an invasion of the exclusive power of Congress; so that the analogy between the two cases holds good, and what would be constitutional or unconstitutional in the one case would be constitutional or unconstitutional in the other.

In the present case, the tax (if it was a tax) was laid upon the goods before they had left the factory. They were not in course of exportation; they might never be exported; whether they would be or not would depend altogether on the will of the manufacturer. Had the same excise which was laid upon all other tobacco manufactured by the plaintiffs been laid on the tobacco in question, they could not have complained. But it was not. A special indulgence was granted to them, in [508] common with others, in reference to the particular tobacco which they declared it to be their intention to export. With regard to that, in order to identify it, and to protect the government from fraudulent practices, all that was required of the plaintiffs, was to affix a twenty-five cent stamp of a peculiar design to each package, no matter how much it might contain, and enter into bond either to export it according to the declared intention, or to pay the regular tax, if it should not be exported. In this view of the case, the plaintiffs not only had no ground of complaint, but they were really the objects of favorable treatment on the part of the government, which, on the slight and easy conditions referred to, accepted their declared intention to export the tobacco in question, before it was commenced to be exported, or put in the way of exportation.

On both grounds we are satisfied that the plaintiffs are without any cause of action, and the judgment of the Circuit Court is affirmed.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court. U. S.

---

[514] ALEXANDER BRUCE AND WILLIAM SHEPARD, Appts.,

v.

MANCHESTER AND KEENE RAILROAD.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 514-516.)

Jurisdiction—matter in dispute—value, how determined.

1. The matter in dispute on which the jurisdiction of this court depends is the matter directly in dispute in the particular cause in which the judgment or decree sought to be reviewed was rendered, not including its collateral effect in a subsequent suit between the same or other parties.

2. Where a suit is brought to recover the interest on bonds only, the amount of interest determines the jurisdiction, irrespective of the value of the principal of the bonds.

3. This principle holds true in case of a bill in equity to collect interest on certain bonds by a foreclosure of a mortgage, notwithstanding that a collateral effect of the action might be the sale of the mortgaged premises and the summoning of other bondholders before the master for the purpose of determining their interest in the proceeds.

[No. 759.]

Submitted Mar. 22, 1886. Decided April 5, 1886.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of New Hampshire.

The history and facts of the case sufficiently appear in the opinion of the court.

Messrs. J. W. Fellows and Frank W. Hackett, for appellee, in support of the motion to dismiss.

Mr. F. A. Brooks, for appellants, contra.

Mr. Chief Justice Waite delivered the opinion of the court:

This suit, at the time of the decree appealed from, was by Alexander Bruce, a citizen of Illinois, and William Shepard, a citizen of Massachusetts, against the Manchester and Keene Railroad, a New Hampshire corporation, to collect interest due on certain bonds of the railroad by the foreclosure of a mortgage made to trustees to secure a series of bonds, amounting in the aggregate to $500,000. There were other parties, both plaintiff and defendant, when the suit was begun, but a discontinuance was entered before the decree as to all but these. The bill was filed in behalf of the complainants and all other like creditors, not citizens of New Hampshire, who might come in and contribute to the expenses, but no such creditors had come in or connected themselves with the suit in any way at the time of the decree. The Railroad filed an answer, and upon final hearing the bill was dismissed. The record shows that the complainant Bruce owned bonds for $7,500, on which interest was past due and unpaid to the amount of not more than $3,000, and Shepard $1,000 of bonds, on which not more than $400 of interest was due. After the bill was dismissed the complainants, Bruce and Shepard, took a joint appeal, which the Railroad now moves to dismiss because the value of the matter in dispute does not exceed $5,000.

This motion must be granted. The case comes clearly within the rule established in Elgin v. Marshall, 106 U. S. 578 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 249], in which it was decided that the matter in dispute, on which our jurisdiction depends, is "the matter which is directly in dispute in the particular cause in which the judgment or decree sought to be reviewed has been rendered" and that we are not permitted, "for the purpose of determining its sum or value, to estimate its collateral effect in a subsequent suit between the same or other parties." Although the principal of the bonds owned by one of the complainants exceeds $5,000, the suit is brought to recover only the interest, which is less. These complainants are in no way authorized to represent the other bondholders. They sued for themselves and all others in like situation who might join with them, but no one saw fit to join. They were allowed to proceed alone, and the payment to them of their interest would have been a bar to the further prosecution of the suit. So, if a decree had been rendered in their favor without others joining in the suit, either by petition or by proof before a master or otherwise, it would have been satisfied by the payment of the amount found due to them, and no further proceedings could thereafter be had. It is true, if such a payment should not be made, and a resort to a sale of the mortgaged property should be necessary to collect what was due to them, the other bondholders would have an interest in the proceeds and could be called in before a master for that purpose, but that would be only one of the collateral or indirect effects of the decree not to be considered in determining our jurisdiction. On the case as it stood when the bill was dismissed, the only matter directly involved was the right of Bruce and Shepard to have the mortgaged property sold to pay the several amounts due them respectively for interest on their bonds. This is all that has been denied. It follows that the matter in dispute here is less than our jurisdictional limit.

NOTE.—Jurisdiction of Supreme Court; dependent on value of matter in controversy. See Gordon v. Ogden, 28 U. S., bk. 7, 592, note.

Dismissed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

JAMES N. BURNES, Plff. in Err.,

v.

WILLIAM L. SCOTT ET AL., EXRS. OF MILTON COURTRIGHT, Deceased.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 582-591.)

Promissory note—parol evidence—champertous contract.

1. Evidence tending to show that a promissory note was not intended by the parties to be such is inadmissible in an action at law brought by the holder on such note.
2. Such evidence is inadmissible in an action at law to show want of consideration where the question of the alleged want of consideration involves the settlement of a partnership and the matter amounts to an equitable defense.
3. A champertous contract cannot be set up in bar of a recovery on the cause of action to which it relates.

[No. 187.]

Argued March 23, 1886. Decided April 5, 1886.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Western District of Missouri.

Statement by Mr. Justice Woods:

This was an action at law brought by Milton Courtright against James N. Burnes, the plaintiff in error, upon the note of the latter made at Chicago, and dated October 10, 1872, whereby he promised to pay, thirty days after date, to the order of F. H. Winston, $7,333, at the Cook County National Bank, in Chicago. Courtright, by indorsement and transfer, became the owner and holder of the note.

The defendant pleaded four pleas. The first of these was a general denial of the averments of the petition.

The second plea was in substance as follows: that when the note was made, the plaintiff Courtright, the defendant Burnes, the said Winston, and one Campbell had been, and were, partners in a contract for building a certain railroad therein named; that prior to the date of the note Winston had received and was in possession, as part of the assets of the partnership, of forty bonds for $1,000 each, of the City of Atchison, subject to the payment of the partnership debts and, after such payment, for distribution among the partners; that a short time before the date of the note, the partners had appointed the defendant a trustee to settle the partnership affairs; that when the note was given the partnership affairs had not been settled and were not settled at the time of filing the plea; that at the time of the making of the note, Winston turned over to defendant the bonds above mentioned, and estimated that there would be due him, as a partner in the firm, from its assets, the sum mentioned in said note; and thereupon requested the defendant, as trustee of the partners, to make the note "with the understanding that the same was not to be sued on, but was to be deemed a mere memorandum of the amount that should be estimated as the share of said Winston, on account of said bonds, in a settlement among said partners;" that the defendant executed the note accordingly, as trustee of the partnership and not as his individual note, and the plaintiff acquired title to the note with knowledge of these facts. [584]

By the third plea it was averred as follows: that the note sued on "was and is wholly without consideration, and is null and void; and that said note is based upon and grew out of transactions relating to the business of said partners; that said partners are interested in the same and are necessary parties to a suit relating to said note; and the amount due in said note, if any, cannot be ascertained until a final settlement of said partnership can be had."

The last plea was that the suit was prosecuted under an agreement between the plaintiff and George W. DeCamp his attorney, whereby the latter undertook to prosecute the suit and to pay all the expenses incident to its prosecution, in consideration that he should receive four tenths of the amount recovered.

The parties waived a trial by jury and submitted the issues of fact as well as of law to the court, which made a general finding for the plaintiff and entered judgment thereon in his favor against the defendant Burnes, for $11,401.60, who thereupon sued out this writ of error. After the record was filed in this court Courtright died, and the executors of his last will were made defendants in error in his stead.

Mr. B. F. Stringfellow, for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. S. M. Brainard and G. W. De Camp, for defendants in error.

Mr. Justice Woods delivered the opinion of the court:

The bill of exceptions shows that upon the trial of the case the defendant, to sustain the issue on his part, offered evidence tending to show that "Winston, the payee and assignor of the note sued on." Courtright, "the plaintiff," Burnes, "the defendant, and one Campbell, were the contractors for the construction of the Chicago and Southwestern Railroad, as partners, and that Winston was entitled to an interest of two fifteenths in such contract; that

---

NOTE.—Notes and bills; parol evidence as to. See Bank of U. S. v. Dunn, 31 U. S. bk. 8, 316, note.

Evidence as to consideration; defenses. See McDonald v. Magruder, 28 U. S. bk. 7, 744, note.

Parol evidence; applicability to written contracts generally. See Bradley v. Washington, A. & G. Packet Co., 36 U. S. bk. 10, 72, note.

Champerty and maintenance. See Lewis v. Bell, 58 U. S., bk. 15, 208, note; McMicken v. Perrin, 58 U. S., bk. 15, 504, note.

[585] Winston had charge of the execution of the contract and possession and control of the assets arising from the contract; that after the completion of the road, in October, 1872, Winston delivered to defendant forty bonds of the City of Atchison for $1,000 each, which had been received and were then held by him as part of the assets under such contract; that the bonds were delivered by Winston to and received by defendant as the trustee for the parties in interest in the contract, and that at the time the bonds were so delivered defendant gave to Winston the note sued on."

The defendant also offered evidence to show "that the note sued on when given was not intended by him the maker, nor by Winston the payee, as a promissory note; but was only intended and so given by him and received by Winston as a memorandum of the then estimate of the value of the estimated interest of Winston in the Atchison bonds then delivered as part of the profits of the aforesaid contract for the construction of the Atchison Branch to be accounted for on a settlement between the partners to such contract; * * * that the only consideration of the note sued on was the transfer by Winston to defendant of the interest of Winston in the Atchison bonds, as part of the profits of the contract for the construction of the Atchison branch;" and "that upon a settlement of the partnership accounts, between said Winston and his partners in the contract for the construction of said Atchison branch, the said Winston would have had no interest in the profits of said contract, having received more than his share thereof prior to the giving of said note."

To all of which evidence so offered plaintiff objected as incompetent and irrelevant; and the objections were sustained by the court, and the evidence excluded. The exclusion of the testimony so offered is now assigned for error by the defendant.

So far as the evidence excluded was offered in support of the second plea, it is plain that it was inadmissible. Its purpose was to vary and contradict by an alleged contemporaneous verbal agreement the contract which the parties had reduced to writing. It was offered to show that a promissory note in the usual form was not intended by the parties to be a promissory [586] note, but was a mere memorandum, by which the maker promised nothing, which gave no rights to the payee, and was to all intents and purposes vain, futile and of no force or effect whatever. It is not necessary to cite authority to show that the evidence was inadmissible for such a purpose.

The counsel for defendant, not strenuously insisting that the evidence was admissible to support the second plea, insist that it was competent to prove the third. They argue that as want of consideration may be shown in defense of an action on a promissory note, the evidence should have been received.

As a general rule want of consideration is a defense to a promissory note, but it is not always a defense which can be made at law. It frequently requires the aid of a court of equity to give it effect. The plea, to support which the defendant contends the evidence of want of consideration was admissible, clearly sets up an equitable defense. It alleges that the note sued on is based on the "transactions relating to the business of said partners." Referring, therefore, to the preceding plea, which states the business of the partners, as we are authorized to do, we learn that the partnership business had not at the time of filing the pleas been settled or the interest of Winston therein or in the bonds been ascertained. The plea under consideration further avers that the members of the partnership were interested in the said business and were necessary parties to a suit relating to the note; and that the amount due thereon, if anything, could not be ascertained until the final settlement of the partnership. It is plain, therefore, that the defense set up by the plea is not the legal defense of want of consideration; for the plea admits by implication that there may be something due on the note, but the equitable defense that the amount due on the note, if anything, is dependent on the amount coming to Winston from the assets of the partnership, which cannot be ascertained without a settlement of the partnership affairs in a suit to which all the partners are necessary parties. And yet having so pleaded, the defendant insists in argument that in a trial upon the promissory note in a court of law, and without the presence of two of the four partners, evidence is admissible to settle the partnership, and to prove, without making Winston a party to the suit, that there is nothing due him out of the partnership assets. The pleading and the contention of the defendant appear, therefore, to be contradictory and inconsistent.

Plainly the relief, if any, to which the facts set up in this plea entitles the defendant is an injunction to stay the suit at law upon the note until a settlement of the partnership and an ascertainment of the amount, if anything, coming to Winston out of the assets of the partnership. This is a remedy which a court of equity only can grant. But the defendant insists on a verdict and judgment in his favor, without settlement of the partnership on which, as he asserts, the validity of the note depends.

Under the jurisprudence of the courts of the United States a court of law can no more take cognizance of an equitable defense than a court of equity can entertain a suit upon a purely legal title. "The Constitution of the United States," says Mr. Chief Justice Taney, in delivering judgment in the case of Bennett v. Butterworth, 11 How. 669 [52 U. S. bk. 13, L. ed. 859], "in creating and defining the judicial power of the general government establishes this distinction between law and equity, and a party who claims a legal title must proceed at law. * * * But if the claim is an equitable one, he must proceed according to the rules which this court has prescribed regulating proceedings in equity in the courts of the United States."

So in Thompson v. R. R. Co. 6 Wall. 134 [73 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 765], the court referred to Bennett v. Butterworth, and cited with approval and adopted the following extract from the opinion in that case: "Although the forms of proceedings and practice in the state courts shall have been adopted in the circuit courts, yet the adoption of the state practice must not be understood as confounding the principles of law and equity, nor as authorizing legal and equitable claims to be blended in one suit."

So in the case of Jones v. McMasters, 20 How.

8 [61 U. S. bk. 15, L. ed. 805], which was an action at law for the recovery of the possession of land, it was held that when the grant from the government on which the plaintiffs relied was regular in form, it was not proper by way of defense, to go behind the survey and location; that, if they were voidable for irregularity or other cause, the question was not one for a court of law in an action to recover possession, but for a court of equity to reform any error or mistake.

So in Foster v. Mora, 98 U. S. 425 [Bk. 25, L. ed. 191], it was said that "In actions of ejectment in the United States Courts, the strict legal title prevails; if there are equities which would show the right to be in another, these can only be considered on the equity side of the federal courts." To the same effect see Greer v. Mezes, 24 How. 268 [65 U. S. bk. 16, L. ed. 661]; Watkins v. Holman, 16 Pet. 25, and Bagnell v. Broderick, 13 Pet. 436 [41 and 38 U. S. bk. 10, L. ed. 874, 235]; Bank of Hamilton v. Dudley, 2 Pet. 492 [27 U.S. bk. 7, L. ed. 496]. See also Peeler's Law & Equity in U. S. Courts, chap. 1, and note 26, pp. 28, 29.

If the defense set up in the plea under consideration could be made effectual in an action at law, it would render obsolete in the equity courts of the United States that great head of equity jurisdiction under which injunctions are granted to stay proceedings at law. "The occasions," says Mr. Justice Story, "on which an injunction may be used to stay proceedings at law are almost infinite in their nature and circumstances. * * * Thus, an injunction is sometimes granted to stay trial; sometimes after verdict to stay judgment, sometimes after judgment to stay execution, and sometimes after execution to stay the money in the hands of the sheriff," etc. Story, Eq. Jur. §§ 885, 886, and see §§ 881, 882; Eden, Injunctions, chap. 2, p. 3; Waterlow v. Bacon, L. R. 2 Eq. 514; Hibbard v. Eastman, 47 N. H. 507; Hopkins v. Fechter, 47 Miss. 331; Tommey v. Ellis, 41 Ga. 260.

It is clear, therefore, that the matters set up in the third plea were proper for the consideration of a court of equity, and that they could not be set up as a defense in a court of law. All the evidence offered to prove them was, therefore, properly excluded.

It further appears from the bill of exceptions that in support of the plea that the plaintiff had made a champertous agreement with his counsel for the prosecution of this suit, the defendant offered evidence which tended to prove a contract made by the plaintiff with his counsel, George W. De Camp, by which the latter agreed to prosecute the suit and defray all the expenses thereof, in consideration of which he was to receive a certain proportion of the sum recovered. The court, however, did not give effect to this plea and overruled a motion made by the defendant to dismiss the action on the ground that the plaintiff had made such champertous contract. This action of the court the defendant assigns for error.

At common law and by statute both in England and in many of the United States, champerty was a criminal offense. But at the present time, in most of the States, to aid the the lawful suit of another with money or ser-s, in consideration of a share in the recovery, is not considered or punished as a crime. But in many of the States champertous contracts are considered void. This is the case in Missouri where the present case was tried, the supreme court so holding, on the ground that the common law had been adopted by statute in that State. See Duke v. Harper, 66 Mo. 51. The defendant now asks us to go a long step beyond this ruling.

The question raised by the present assignment of error is not whether a champertous contract between counsel and client is void, but whether the making of such a contract can be set up in bar of a recovery on the cause of action to which the champertous contract relates.

We must answer this question in the negative. It was wisely said by the Supreme Court of New York, in the case of Thalhimer v. Brinkerhoff, 8 Cow. 623, that "The right of litigation may be abused, and proper remedies for groundless and vexatious litigation must exist; but the remedies for the abuse of this right should be such as not to impair the free use of the right itself. As the justice or injustice of the claim cannot be known before the termination of the cause, the checks upon unjust litigation must in general consist, not in excluding the suit or the suitor from the courts, but in redress following the decision of justice upon the merits of the case."

This is in accord with the views of this court. The precise question under consideration was decided in the case of Boone v. Chiles, 10 Pet. 177 [35 U. S. bk. 9, L. ed. 388]. That was a bill in equity to establish the title to a tract of 700 acres of land in Bourbon County, in the State of Kentucky. Among other defenses it was alleged that an agreement in writing had been made between Boone, the plaintiff, and one Engles, by which Engles undertook at his own expense to prosecute a suit for the 700 acres in dispute; and as a consideration for his trouble was to have one half of the land, and that the suit was prosecuted under that agreement; that it was, therefore, a case of champerty and maintenance forbidden by law, in which the court could give no relief. But the court held that, although the English Statutes which had been adopted in Kentucky punished the offense and declared the contract for maintenance void between the parties, the right of the plaintiff was not forfeited by such an agreement, and it might be asserted against the defendants whether the contract with Engles was valid or void. The same rule has been declared in other American cases. Whitney v. Kirtland, 27 N. J. Eq. 333; Robison v. Beall, 26 Ga. 17; Allison v. C. & N. W. Railroad Co. 42 Iowa, 274.

[590]

So in Hilton v. Woods, L. R. 4 Eq. 432, it was strenuously urged that the bargain between the plaintiff and Mr. Wright, under which the suit was instituted, amounted to champerty and maintenance, and consequently disqualified the plaintiff to sue, and that the court was bound to dismiss the bill. But the Vice Chancellor said: "I have carefully examined all the authorities which were referred to in support of this argument, and they clearly establish that whenever the right of the plaintiff in respect of which he sues is derived under a title founded on champerty or maintenance, his suit will on that account necessarily fail. But no authority was cited nor have I met any, which goes the length of deciding that when a plaintiff has an original good title to property he becomes disqualified to sue for it by having ventured into an improper bargain with his solicitor as to the mode of remunerating him for his professional services in the suit or otherwise." There was, therefore, a decree for the plaintiff, though without costs.

In Elborough v. Ayres, L. R. 10 Eq. 367, it was conceded that the fact that the plaintiff, in an action for malicious prosecution, had been maintained, would be no bar to the action, and the Vice Chancellor held that such maintenance would be no ground for the interference of a [591] court of equity to prevent the action from going on, citing Vice Chancellor Wigram in Evans v. Prothero [1 De G. M. & G. 572].

The only cases to which we have been referred in which the rule insisted on by the defendant has been maintained were two cases decided in the Supreme Court of Wisconsin. Barker v. Barker, 14 Wis. 131, and Allard v. Lamirande, 29 Wis. 502.

We think, therefore, that, both upon reason and weight of authority, the court did not err in refusing to give effect to the fourth plea of the defendant, or in refusing to dismiss the suit because it was prosecuted under a champertous agreement between the plaintiff and his counsel.

Judgment affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

Ex Parte:
[516] In the Matter of CHARLES W. FONDA, Petitioner.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 516-518.)

Habeas corpus—jurisdiction—practice.

Although this court may have legal power on habeas corpus to discharge the petitioner, who has been convicted of embezzlement in a state court of the funds of a national bank, where no reason appears why the supreme court of the State may not review the judgment, it will not act in advance of the orderly course of proceeding for a review of the judgment by writ of error.

Submitted March 22, 1886. Decided April 5, 1886.

ON MOTION for leave to file petition for a writ of habeas corpus.

The petition in this case set out that the petitioner had been sentenced, by a state court of Michigan, for a term in the penitentiary of that State, and that he was now illegally confined in such penitentiary; that this imprisonment was illegal in this:

1. Because the petitioner was convicted, sentenced and imprisoned contrary to the Constitution of the United States and the laws of Congress.

2. Because the acts described and charged in the counts under which he was convicted (being embezzlement of the funds and property of a national bank by a clerk therein) are cognizable by the federal courts; and the jurisdiction to try the petitioner and to punish such crime is vested exclusively in said courts, the action of the state court being in violation of article 1, § 8, pars. 5, 17, U. S. Const. and of section 711, R. S. par. 1, and section 5209, R. S.

3. Because he was held to answer for and was convicted of an infamous crime as charged in the information, without presentment or indictment by a grand jury.

Mr. Edwin F. Conely, William E. Earle and Frank P. Guise, in favor of petitioner.

Mr. Chief Justice Waite delivered the opinion of the court:

This motion is denied on the authority of Ex parte Royall [ante, 868]. No reason is suggested why the Supreme Court of the State may not review the judgment of the circuit court of the county, upon the question which is raised as to the application of the statute, under which the conviction has been had, to embezzlements by the servants and clerks of national banks; nor why it should not be permitted to do so without interference by the courts of the United States. The question appears to be one which, if properly presented by the record, may be reviewed in this court after a decision by the supreme court adverse to the petitioner. The case as made by the motion papers is not one which, under the principles settled in Royall's Case, requires this court to act in advance of the orderly course of proceeding for a review of the judgment by writ of error.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk Sup. Court, U. S.

ANTHONY W. DIMOCK, Plff. in Err.,
v.
REVERE COPPER COMPANY OF BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 559-566.)

Jurisdiction—discharge in bankruptcy pending suit—judgment thereafter—discharge no defense to action on such judgment.

1. This court has jurisdiction to review a decision of a state court to the effect that a discharge in bankruptcy of the defendant was not a bar to the action.

2. Where a defendant had a good defense, at the time judgment was rendered against him, as a discharge in bankruptcy, and failed to present it to a court which had jurisdiction of his case and of all the defenses which he might have made, the judgment is valid; and such defense cannot afterwards be set up in an action on the judgment.

[No. 185.]

Argued Mar. 22, 1886. Decided Apr. 5, 1886.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of New York.

The case is stated by the court.

Mr. George Putnam Smith, for plaintiff in error:

It is immaterial that the form of the debt was changed after the institution of the bankruptcy proceedings, so that instead of a simple contract debt it became a judgment.

Betts v. Bagley, 12 Pick, 571; Clark v. Rowling, 8 N. Y. 216; Wyman v. Mitchell, 1 Cow. 316.

If, during the pendency of bankruptcy proceedings, a provable claim against the bank-rupt's estate becomes transformed into a judgment, it will nevertheless be extinguished by a subsequent discharge in bankruptcy.

Monroe v. Upton, 50 N. Y. 593; Ocean Bank v. Olcott, 46 N. Y. 22; Arnold v. Oliver, 2 N. Y. Civ. Pro. Rep. 457: Dewey v. Moyer, 72 N. Y. 75.

The fact that the present claim was transformed into a judgment after the discharge was granted does not take it out of the operation of this rule, it being the settled law in New York that a judgment is not a new debt but only a new form of an old debt. Any other rule would narrow section 5119 of the Bankruptcy Act.

The adjudication of the facts in Mr. Dimock's case took place January 25, 1875, when his default was taken.

Huntress v. Effingham, 17 N. H. 584; Bates v. Loomis, 5 Wend. 134.

Among these facts was not involved the question of a discharge in bankruptcy; it did not then exist.

Jarvis v. Blanchard, 6 Mass. 4. Huntress v. Effingham, 17 N. H. 584.

The decisions holding that a discharge in bankruptcy to be effectual must be pleaded in the suit pending on the original claim are either: 1. rendered in States where the law is that a judgment is a new debt and not merely a new form of an old debt; or, 2, rendered in suits which arose under the Acts of 1811 or 1841. There is a vital distinction between these Acts and the Act of 1867. Under the former Acts the discharge could be impeached in state courts.

Alcott v. Avery, 1 Barb. Ch. 347; Cable v. Cooper, 15 Johns. 152.

Otherwise under the later Act.

Ocean Bank v. Olcott, 46 N. Y. 12.

The discharge was a complete bar to the action on the judgment.

Anderson v. Anderson, 65 Ga. 518; Braman v. Snider, 21 Fed. Rep. 871; Clark v. Rowling, 8 N. Y. 222.

Mr. David Wilcox, for defendant in error:

The fact that during the pendency of the suit the defendant was adjudicated a bankrupt in no respect impairs the validity or force of the judgment.

Eyster v. Gaff, 91 U. S. 521 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 403); Claflin v. Houseman, 93 U. S. 130 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 833), McHenry v. La Société, etc. 95 U. S. 60 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 370); Davis v. Friedlander, 104 U. S. 570 and Thatcher v. Rockwell, 105 U. S. 467 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 818, 949).

The date as of which the judgment speaks is not that of any interlocutory step in the action, but the date of the recovery of the judgment itself.

McFarland v. Irwin, 8 Johns. 77; Sternbergh v. Schoolcraft, 2 Barb. 153; Smith v. Nelson, 52 N. Y. 286; Rees v. Butler, 18 Mo. 174; Bird v. Smith, 34 Me. 63; Freeman, Judgments, § 435.

Then and not until then are the rights of the parties conclusively adjudicated.

Smith v. McCool, 16 Wall. 560 (Bk. 21, L. ed. 324); Webb v. Buckelew, 82 N. Y. 555.

Even when a defendant is discharged during the pendency of an action and before judgment, he has no absolute right to set up the discharge. It is discretionary with the court; and in cases of laches leave may be refused, or for other sufficient cause.

Medbury v. Swan, 46 N. Y. 200; Holyoke v. Adams, 59 N. Y. 233; McDonald v. Whitney, 12 Hun, 95.

Mr. Justice Miller delivered the opinion of the court:

This case comes here by a writ of error to the Supreme Court of New York, having been decided in the Court of Appeals, and the record remitted to the supreme court that judgment might be finally entered there. [559]

The action was brought in that court on a judgment in favor of the Revere Copper Company, plaintiff, against Anthony W. Dimock, rendered in the Superior Court of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, for the County of Suffolk, on the first day of April, 1875. [560]

The defendant, Dimock, pleaded, in bar of this action, a discharge in bankruptcy, by the District Court of the United States, for the District of Massachusetts, rendered on the 26th day of March, 1875, five days before judgment in the state court.

The case being submitted to the New York Supreme Court in special term, without a jury, that court found the following facts and conclusions of law thereon:

"As Findings of Fact.

"First. That the plaintiff is, and at the times hereinafter mentioned was, a corporation, duly organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

"Second. That on or about the 18th day of January, 1874, the Revere Copper Company of Boston, Massachusetts, the plaintiff herein, commenced an action in the Superior Court of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, within and for the County of Suffolk, a court of general jurisdiction, against Anthony W. Dimock, the defendant herein, by the issue of a writ of attachment against the goods, estate and body of the said defendant, and which said writ was duly served on said defendant, and the summons to appear in said action was duly served upon him personally, and that the said defendant thereafter duly appeared in said action by attorney; that the cause of action was an indorsement of said Dimock of two promissory notes made in the City of New York to the order of plaintiff by the Atlantic Mail Steamship Company, and dated December 19, 1872.

"Third. That on or about June 23, 1874, the said defendant, Anthony W. Dimock, filed a petition in bankruptcy, and was duly adjudicated a bankrupt, in the District Court of the United States for the District of Massachusetts; and that such proceedings were thereafter had that, on or about March 26, 1875, the said Dimock was discharged from all debts and claims provable against his estate, and which existed on the 23d day of June, 1874. [561]

"Fourth. That such proceedings were had in the aforesaid action in the Superior Court of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts that on or about April 1, 1875, the plaintiff duly recovered judgment in said action against the defendant for the sum of three thousand five hundred and ninety-five $\frac{14}{100}$ dollars ($3,595.15), and that said judgment was upon that day duly entered.

"Fifth. That no part of said judgment has been paid, and the whole thereof is now due and payable to the plaintiff.

"As Conclusions of Law:

"I. That the said proceedings in bankruptcy are no bar to the present action, and constitute no defense herein.

"II. That the plaintiff should have judgment against the defendant for the sum of three thousand five hundred and ninety-five $\frac{15}{100}$ dollars ($3,595.15), with interest from April 1, 1875, amounting to one thousand one hundred and forty-two $\frac{96}{100}$ dollars ($1,142.96), making in all four thousand seven hundred and thirty-eight $\frac{11}{100}$ dollars ($4,738.11), together with the costs of this action, to be taxed; and an allowance, in addition to costs, amounting to the sum of seventy-five dollars."

The judgment rendered on these findings was reversed by the supreme court in general term, and that judgment was in turn reversed by the court of appeals, which restored the judgment of the special term. 90 N. Y. 33.

[564] The only question considered at all these trials was whether the discharge of the defendant in the bankruptcy proceeding is under the facts found by the court a bar to the present action; and as the decision by the New York Court against the plaintiff in error, as to the effect of that order of discharge, is to refuse to him a right claimed under the laws of the United States, this court has jurisdiction to review the decision.

The Superior Court of Massachusetts had jurisdiction of the suit of the Copper Company against Dimock, both as regards the subject matter and the parties. This jurisdiction was rendered complete by service of process and by the appearance of the defendant. All this was before the beginning of the bankruptcy proceeding. Nothing was done to oust this jurisdiction, and the case accordingly proceeded in due order to the rendition of the judgment which is the foundation of this action. It is not argued that this judgment was void, or that the court was ousted of its jurisdiction by anything done in the bankruptcy court. No such argument could be sustained if it were made. In the case of Eyster v. Gaff, 91 U. S. 521 [Bk. 23, L. ed. 403], which was very similar to this on the point now before the court, it was said: "The court in that case had acquired jurisdiction of the parties and of the subject matter of the suit. It was competent to administer full justice, and was proceeding according to the law which governed such a suit to do so. It could not take judicial notice of the proceedings in bankruptcy in another court, however seriously they might affect the rights of parties to the suit already pending. It was the duty of that court to proceed to a decree between the parties before it, until by some proper pleadings in the case it was informed of the changed relations of any of the parties to the subject matter of the suit. Having such jurisdiction, and performing its duty as the case stood in that court, we are at a loss to see how its decree can be treated as void." The court then goes on to show that if the assignee had brought his right, acquired pendente lite, to the notice of the court, it would have been protected. Hill v. Harding, 107 U. S. 631 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 493].

[565] So here, if Dimock had brought his discharge to the attention of the superior court at any time before judgment, it would have been received as a bar to the action; and under proper circumstances, even after judgment, it might be made the foundation for setting it aside and admitting the defense. Ray v. Wight, 119 Mass. 426; Page v. Cole, 123 Mass. 93; Golden v. Blaskopf, 126 Mass. 523. Nothing of the kind was attempted. The question before the Massachusetts court for decision, at the moment it rendered its judgment was whether Dimock was then indebted to the Copper Company. Of Dimock and of this question it had complete jurisdiction, and it was bound to decide it on the evidence before it. Its decision was therefore conclusive, as much so as any judgment where the jurisdiction is complete. It concluded Mr. Dimock from ever denying that he was so indebted on that day, wherever that judgment was produced as evidence of the debt. If he had the means at that time to prove that the debt had been paid, released or otherwise satisfied, and did not show it to the court, he cannot be permitted to do it in this suit; and the fact that the evidence that he did not then owe the debt was the discharge in bankruptcy, made five days before, does not differ from a payment and receipt in full or a release for a valuable consideration. Cromwell v. Sac County, 94 U. S. 357 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 200]. Also, Claflin v. Houseman, 93 U. S. 134 [Bk. 23, L. ed. 838]. A still stronger case of the validity of judgments of a state court, in their relation to bankruptcy proceedings had pendente lite, is that of Davis v. Friedlander, 104 U. S. 570 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 818].

In the case of Thatcher v. Rockwell, 105 U. S. 467 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 949], the Chief Justice, after alluding to these and other cases, says: "They establish the doctrine that, under the late bankrupt law, the validity of a pending suit or of the judgment or decree thereon was not affected by the intervening bankruptcy of one of the parties; that the assignee might or might not be made a party; and whether he was or not he was equally bound with any other party acquiring an interest pendente lite."

It is said, however, that though the defendant had his discharge before the judgment in the state court was rendered and might have successfully pleaded it in bar of that action and did not do so, the judgment now sued on is the same debt and was one of the debts from which, by the terms of the bankrupt law, he was discharged under the order of the bankruptcy court, and to any attempt to enforce that judgment the discharge may still be shown as a valid defense. That is to say, that the failure of the defendant to plead it when it was properly pleadable, when, if he ever intended to rely on it as a defense, he was bound to set it up, works him no prejudice, because, though he has a dozen judgments rendered against him for this debt after he has received his discharge, he may at any time set it up as a defense when these judgments are sought to be enforced. Upon the same principle, if he had appeared in the state court and pleaded his discharge in bar, and it had been overruled as a sufficient bar, he could, nevertheless, in this action on that judgment, renew the defense.

But in such case his remedy would not lie in renewing the struggle in a new suit on such judgment, but in bringing the first judgment for review before this court where his right under the discharge would have been enforced then, as he seeks to do it now, after submitting to that judgment without resistance and without complaint.

We are of opinion that, having in his hands a good defense at the time judgment was rendered against him, namely: the order of discharge, and having failed to present it to a court which had jurisdiction of his case, and of all the defenses which he might have made, including this, the judgment is a valid judgment, and that the defense cannot be set up here in an action on that judgment. The case of Steward v. Green, 11 Paige, 585, seems directly in point. So also are Hollister v. Abbott, 31 N. H. 442 and Bradford v. Rice, 102 Mass. 472.

It is clear that until the judgment of the Massachusetts court is set aside or annulled by some direct proceeding in that court, its effect cannot be defeated as a cause of action, when sued in another State, by pleading the discharge as a bar which might have been pleaded in the original action.

The judgment of the New York Court is affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY OF NEW YORK, Plff. in Err.,

v.

JULIA ARMSTRONG, Admrx. of JOHN M. ARMSTRONG, Deceased.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 591-600.)

Life insurance—assignability of endowment policy—evidence—fraud.

1. An endowment policy of insurance payable to the assured or his assigns at a certain date, or to his legal representatives if he should die before that time, is assignable by the assured, where the assignment is not made to cover a mere speculative risk; and the insurance passes to the assignee although the assured dies within the endowment period.
2. Evidence tending to prove that the assignee of such a policy caused the death of the assured, by felonious means, is admissible in an action by him against the company to recover on the policy.
3. Evidence tending to show that the assignee effected insurances upon the life of the assured in other companies, at about the same time, is admissible in support of the theory of the defense, that, in obtaining the insurance in question, it was the object of the assignee to cheat and defraud the defendant company.

[No. 173.]

Argued Mar. 16, 17, 1886. Decided Apr. 5, 1886.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of New York.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Messrs. Joseph H. Choate, Evarts and Southmayd, for plaintiff in error:

The application for the policy by Armstrong was at the instance and procurement of Hunter; its delivery was made by the Company directly to Hunter, for his own benefit, with the assent of Armstrong, as expressed by the assignment executed by Armstrong simultaneously with the making of the application.

These acts constituted a contract between Hunter and the Company, wherein Hunter, and not Armstrong was the principal; and if such contract was induced or effected by Hunter's fraud, such fraud vitiated the contract.

Shilling v. Accidental Death Ins. Co. 2 Hurl. & N. 42; Rawls v. Am. Mutual Life Ins. Co. 27 N.Y. 287; Prince of Wales Assurance Co. v. Palmer, 25 Beav. 605; Ford v. Belmont, 7 Robt. 97. See also Hills v. Miller, 3 Paige, 254; Parks v. Comstock, 59 Barb. 16.

The whole policy and every right and interest under it were assignable.

St. John v. Am. Mutual Life Ins. Co. 18 N. Y. 31; 24 Am. Law Reg. 753, where the cases are digested.

The learned court below held that the making of the policy payable to the legal representatives in the event of Armstrong's death was the designation of a class which took from Armstrong the power to divert the fund from that particular class; in other words, that the contract was with Armstrong's administratrix as a person distinct from Armstrong, which, of course, is a legal impossibility.

Wason v. Colburn, 99 Mass. 342; N. Y. Life Ins. Co. v. Flack, 3 Md. 341; 1 Bigelow, Ins. Rep. 146.

If a policy of life insurance once has a valid inception it may be assigned to any one, whether such assignee has an insurable interest in the life insured or not.

St. John v. Am. Mut. Life Ins. Co. 2 Duer, 419; S. C. 13 N. Y. 31; Valton v. Nat. Fund Life Ins. Co. 20 N. Y. 32; Olmsted v. Keyes, 85 N. Y. 593; Bond v. Bunting, 78 Pa. St. 210; Cunningham v. Smith, 70 Pa. St. 450.

The court erred in rejecting evidence of contemporaneous acts of fraud on the part of Hunter, showing or tending to show the formation by him of a wicked and dishonest scheme, of which this swindling of the plaintiff in error was only a part.

Cary v. Hotailing, 1 Hill, 311; Bottomley v. U. S. 1 Story, 135; Castle v. Bullard, 23 How. 172 (Bk. 16, L. ed. 424); Butler v. Watkins, 13 Wall. 456 (Bk. 20, L. ed. 629).

Messrs. Herbert T. Ketcham, and George M. Mackellar, for defendant in error:

Neither the assignment nor its duplicate was the act of Armstrong. Proof, sufficient to sustain a finding, was submitted to the jury that he never executed either paper; never authorized their execution and never made or sanctioned any delivery of either paper; that whether he gave any authority for the delivery or not, no delivery was made; and that any delivery, if made, was void for fraud.

The proposition that the policy in suit was a contract between Hunter and the Company, and as such was void for Hunter's fraud, will not be entertained by this court, since the verdict of the jury must be assumed to embrace a finding that Hunter never took any relation whatever to the contract of insurance.

The contract was in writing and extrinsic evidence cannot be allowed to vary its clear and well defined stipulations.

Rawls v. Am. Mut. Life Ins. Co. 27 N.Y. 287, will be found not to have changed the fundamental canon forbidding the variation of express written instruments.

See also Lawrence v. Fox, 20 N. Y. 268.

Plaintiff in error seeks to avoid the policy by imputing Hunter's fraud to Armstrong, upon the theory that Hunter was Armstrong's agent.

This attempt to exalt the victim of a murder to the position of constructively plotting his own death is neither justified by any principle of law, nor the pleadings or the evidence in this case.

No one but he who owns a right of action can assign it.

We respectfully submit as the result of the authorities that the policy in question, so far as it contained assurance in the event of death, was an irrevocable settlement. The insurance when proposed was subject to Armstrong's complete right of disposition, and he could have preserved the right of assignment. But when he directed its payment to his legal representatives, he exhausted this right and parted with that which until then had been in his control.

It is legally possible for a representative to be vested with rights which were not a part of his intestate's estate.

See Worley v. N. W. Masonic Asso. 13 Rep. 233; Kelly v. Mann, 13 Rep. 12; Greeno v. Greeno, 23 Hun, 478.

The defense that Armstrong misstated his relations to other companies was an affirmative defense and should have been pleaded.

Piedmont v. Ins. Co. 92 U. S. 377 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 610); Code Civ. Proc. § 500; Murray v. N. Y. Life Ins. Co. 85 N. Y. 236.

Where the statements are not vouched for, as absolutely and subjectively true, they affect the validity of the insurance only to the extent to which they in fact induce the contract; for the applicant is bound not by an express engagement but by the general law of morals which governs every transaction, and his policy is not to be avoided save for statements, which are made with the knowledge of their untruth and the intent to deceive.

In one instance, deviation from existing fact is a breach of contract. In the other it is nothing unless fraudulent.

Moulor v. Am. L. Ins. Co. 111 U. S. 335 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 447) and cases cited.

Mr. Justice Field delivered the opinion of the court:

[592] On the 8th of December, 1877, the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York issued a policy of insurance on the life of John M. Armstrong, of Philadelphia, for $10,000. It was what is known as an endowment policy; that is, a policy payable to the assured if he live a designated time, but to some other person named if he die before the expiration of that time. It was payable, subject to certain conditions, to the assured or his assigns on the 8th of December, 1897, at the office of the Company in New York; or, if he should die before that time, to his legal representatives, within sixty days after notice and proof of his death. It recited that it was issued in consideration of his application, and of the statements contained therein, which, whether written by his own hand or not, every person accepting or acquiring any interest in the contract adopted and warranted to be true, and the only statements upon which the contract was made; and in further consideration of the payment of $138.60 quarterly each year during the continuance of the policy.

On the 25th of January, 1878, Armstrong died, and his widow was appointed administratrix of his estate. The required notice and proof of his death were furnished, and the insurance money not being paid, she brought this action for its recovery in a court of the State of New York; and on motion of the Company it was removed to the Circuit Court of the United States.

The Company set up several special defenses to the action. One of them was, that the policy was obtained by one Benjamin Hunter, with the intent to cheat and defraud the Company by compassing the death of the assured by felonious means and collecting the amount of the insurance, and which he attempted to carry out by causing his death; another was that the statements made in the application of the assured as to previous insurances upon his life were false, the amounts being much larger than those stated.

On the trial it appeared in evidence that on the 3d or 4th of December, 1877, Hunter made some inquiries at the office of the Company in Philadelphia as to the rates of insurance on the life of a person aged forty or forty-one years upon an endowment policy of twenty years; stating that he thought of insuring for his own benefit the life of a person in the sum of $10,000. After some conversation on the subject of insurance generally, he left, stating that the person to be insured would probably call in a day or two. On the 5th of the month Armstrong called, and informed the agent that he came at the request of Hunter to make application for a life insurance. He was thereupon examined, and after answering the questions usually propounded to applicants, and among others those in relation to existing insurances on his life, he signed a formal application, leaving, however, blank the place for the amount of the insurance which he desired, and for the answer to the question touching the payments of the premium. He also executed an assignment of the policy, leaving blanks for its date and for that of the policy, and for the name and residence of the assignee. This was his entire connection with the transaction. In the afternoon of the same day, or on the following morning, Hunter informed the office that the amount of the insurance desired was $10,000, and that it would be more convenient for him to pay the premiums quarterly. The term "quarterly" and the sum "$10,000" were, therefore, upon his instructions, inserted in the application which was then sent to New York, and the policy was there executed by the Company. Before the receipt of the policy in Philadelphia he visited the office, and stated that as he intended to leave the city and be absent for some time, he would pay the premium, and that his lawyer would call for the policy. He accordingly paid the stipulated premium, and the fee for the policy. Some days afterwards his lawyer received the policy and also the assignment, which was attached, the blanks having been filled. They were subsequently delivered to Hunter, and were found in his possession at his death.

Within six weeks after the policy was issued, Armstrong was attacked at night in a street in Camden, New Jersey, and received blows on his head which fractured his skull, from the effects of which he died two days afterwards. Suspicion fell upon Hunter as the perpetrator or instigator of the attack. He was accordingly arrested, and was indicted and tried for the murder of Armstrong in one of the courts of that State, and was convicted. He was sentenced to death, and was hanged. By stipulation the testimony of any living witness might be read from the record of his testimony in that case, with like effect as if he were present and testified in this action, subject to all legal objections to its relevancy, competency and materiality. As the first step in proof of the defense that the policy was obtained to cheat and defraud the Company, the defendant offered to read from that record the testimony of a witness to show that Hunter, being at the time the sole owner of the policy, intentionally caused the death of Armstrong; but the court, upon objection of the plaintiff, excluded the testimony and an exception was taken. The defendant offered in different forms to make this proof; but the court refused to receive it, accompanying its ruling in one instance with this statement to counsel: "I will take your offer as broad as you choose to make it; that you offer the testimony to prove that Hunter procured the application for the policy on Armstrong to be made, and that he did so for the purpose of having the insurance effected, and then disposing of Armstrong, and then getting the money; make it as broad as that, and I will exclude it."

The defendant also offered to prove that about the time the policy in suit was issued, Hunter, with like fraudulent intent, obtained policies of insurance in two other companies upon the life of Armstrong, one made directly to himself and the other to Armstrong, with an assignment executed simultaneously to himself, and that he paid the premiums thereon; one of the policies being for $10,000 and the other for $6,000; but upon the objection of the plaintiff the testimony was excluded, and an exception taken.

The court, among other things, instructed the jury, in substance, that the contract of insurance was divisible; that the last part, providing for the payment of the insurance money to the legal representatives of Armstrong in case he should die before the expiration of the policy, was not assignable; that his assignment only transferred the interest, payable at the expiration of the policy; and that the plaintiff was his legal representative, entitled to the policy and to whatever was due upon it. The defendant excepted. A verdict for the full amount of the policy, with interest, was rendered, and judgment entered thereon.

From the charge of the court, and its opinion on the motion for a new trial (20 Blatchf. 493), it appears that the refusal to admit testimony of Hunter's fraudulent purpose in procuring the policy, and his feloniously causing, while the sole owner of it, the death of the assured, was founded upon the assumption that the insurance money, payable in case the death occurred before the expiration of the policy went to the legal representatives of the assured, and was not assignable, and that the assignment not taking effect Hunter had no interest in the policy, and therefore, if he did feloniously cause the death, the fact could have had no effect in controlling the payment.

Assuming this to be the reason for excluding the evidence offered, the ruling cannot be upheld. The position that the assignment did not take effect because the assured died before the expiration of the policy is untenable. The provision for payment in such case to his legal representatives was intended to meet the contingency of his dying without having disposed of his interest, and not to limit his power over the contract during his life, and pass the insurance to those who should represent him after his death. The term "legal representatives" is not necessarily restricted to the personal representatives of one deceased, but is sufficiently broad to cover all persons who, with respect to his property, stand in his place and represent his interests, whether transferred to them by his act or by operation of law. It may, in this case, include assigns as well as executors and administrators. New York L. Ins. Co. v. Flack, 8 Md. 341.

A policy of life insurance, without restrictive words, is assignable by the assured for a valuable consideration equally with any other chose in action, where the assignment is not made to cover a mere speculative risk, and thus evade the law against wager policies; and payment thereof may be enforced for the benefit of the assignee, and under the system of procedure in many States, in his name. Warnock v. Davis, 104 U.S. 775, 780 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 924, 927]; Archibald v. Mut. Ins. Co. of Chicago, 38 Wis. 542, 545; DeRonge v. Elliott, 7 N. J. Eq. 487, 495. The assignee here, Hunter, represented that he was the special partner of Armstrong, and had placed $5,000 in the partnership, and was apprehensive that he might be charged as a general partner. If he was a special partner the contract was not a wager policy. And as it was not a contract for the benefit of the wife of the assured, it does not fall within those cases where, for the protection of the beneficiary the power of the assured to divert the course of payment is restricted.

The assignment conveying to Hunter the whole interest of the assured, his representatives alone would have a valid claim under it, if the policy were not void in its inception. Proof, therefore, that he caused the death of the assured by felonious means must necessarily have defeated a recovery; and the court erred in refusing to admit testimony tending to prove that such was the fact.

The theory of the defense is, that the purpose of Hunter in obtaining the insurance was to cheat and defraud the Company. In support of that position evidence that he effected insurances upon the life of Armstrong in other companies at or about the same time, for a like fraudulent purpose, was admissible. A repetition of acts of the same character naturally indicates the same purpose in all of them; and if when considered together they cannot be reasonably explained without ascribing a particular motive to the perpetrator, such motive will be considered as prompting each act. A creditor has an insurable interest in the life of his debtor, and may very properly procure an insurance upon it for an amount sufficient to secure his debt; but if he takes out policies in different companies at or nearly the same time, and thus increases the insurance far beyond any reasonable security for the debt, an inquiry at once arises as to his motive, and it may be considered as governing him in each insurance. In Castle

[599] v. Bullard, 23 How. 173 [64 U. S. bk. 16, L. ed. 424], where the defendants were charged with having fraudulently sold the goods of the plaintiff, evidence that they had committed similar fraudulent acts at or about the same time was allowed, with a view to establish their alleged intent with respect to the matters in issue. The court said: "Similar fraudulent acts are admissible in cases of this description if committed at or about the same time, and when the same motive may reasonably be supposed to exist, with a view to establish the intent of the defendant in respect to the matters charged against him in the declaration." In Lincoln v. Claflin, 7 Wall. 132 [74 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 106], an action was brought for fraudulently obtaining property, and evidence of other frauds of a like character, committed by the defendants at or near the same time, was held to be admissible. "Its admissibility," said the court, "is placed on the ground that where transactions of a similar character executed by the same parties are closely connected in time, the inference is reasonable that they proceed from the same motive. The principle is asserted in Cary v. Hotailing, 1 Hill, 311, and is sustained by numerous authorities. The case of fraud, as there stated, is among the few exceptions to the general rule that other offenses of the accused are not relevant to establish the main charge." In Butler v. Watkins, 13 Wall. 456, 464 [80 U. S. bk. 20, L. ed. 629, 630], speaking on the same subject, this court said: "In actions for fraud large latitude is always given to the admission of evidence. If a motive exist prompting to a particular line of conduct, and it be shown that in pursuing that line a defendant has deceived and defrauded one person, it may justly be inferred that similar conduct towards another, at or about the same time and in relation to a like subject, was actuated by the same spirit." In Bottomley v. U. S., 1 Story, 135, Mr. Justice Story held the same doctrine and cited several instances of its application. Thus, in the case of a prosecution for uttering counterfeit money, the fact that the prisoner has in his possession, or has uttered, other counterfeit money is held to be proper evidence to show his guilty knowledge; and upon an indictment for receiving stolen goods, evidence that the prisoner had received at various other times different parcels of goods which had been stolen from the same persons is held admissible in proof of his guilty knowledge. So in an indictment for a conspiracy to raise sedition, discontent and disaffection, [illegible] is admissible against the prisoner that at another meeting held for an object professedly [illegible] at which the prisoner was chairman, resolutions were passed of a character to create sedition and disaffection. "In short," [illegible] "wherever the intent or guilty knowledge of a party is a material [illegible] in the issue of a cause, these collateral facts tending to establish such intent or [illegible] are proper evidence. In many [illegible] it would be otherwise impossible [illegible] the true nature and [illegible] Many other authorities [illegible] the same purport.

[illegible] Hunter obtained [illegible] in other companies on the life of [illegible] at nearly the same time, was, under these authorities, clearly admissible. It tended to establish the theory of the defendant that the insurance in this case was obtained by Hunter upon the premeditated purpose to cheat and defraud the company. Especially would it have had that effect if followed by proof of the manner of the death of Armstrong.

But independently of any proof of the motives of Hunter in obtaining the policy, and even assuming that they were just and proper, he forfeited all rights under it when, to secure its immediate payment, he murdered the assured. It would be a reproach to the jurisprudence of the country, if one could recover insurance money payable on the death of a party whose life he had feloniously taken. As well might he recover insurance money upon a building that he had willfully fired

This view renders it unnecessary to consider the effect upon the policy, of the statements made in the application of the assured as to the amount of other insurances on his life.

Judgment reversed, and cause remanded for a new trial.

Mr. Justice Matthews did not sit in this case nor take part in its decision.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

STATE OF ALABAMA, JOHN SWANN AND JOHN A. BILLUPS, Trustees and Assignees, Appts.

v.

THEODORE G. MONTAGUE ET AL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 602-611.)

Railroad mortgage—"all other property" construed.

The words "all other property" in the mortgage executed March 2, 1870, by the Alabama and Chattanooga Railroad Company, in favor of the State of Alabama, to secure it for a loan of its credit, to said company, do not operate to include within the mortgage all the lands belonging to the company not specifically described.

[No. 984.]

Submitted Mar. 31, 1886. Decided Apr. 12, 1886.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Tennessee.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Mr. Samuel F. Rice, for appellants:

The statutory provisions of Tennessee, the lex rei sitæ, in relation to conveyances of every kind, were intended "to reduce the forms of conveyance to their simplest elements, and to give the largest meaning to granting words, unless limited by the instrument itself."

Daley v. Willis, 5 Lea, 104. See also Pennock v. Coe, 23 How. 117 (64 U. S. Bk. 16, L. ed. 436); Irvine v. Irvine, 9 Wall. 625 (76 U. S. Bk. 19, L. ed. 800); Stott v. Rutherford, 92 U. S. 107 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 486); Bank of Greensboro v. Clapp, 76 N. C. 482.

The conveyance of McMillan to the company, as against the defendants, who acquired or derived their only claim to the lands from or under the mortgagor, by transactions entirely subsequent to the registration of the mortgage, converted the equitable title of the company into a legal title which at once, by operation of law, inured to the benefit of the mortgagee.

Skidmore v. Pitts. Cin. & St. L. R. R. Co. 112 U. S. 83 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 626); Bush v. Marshall, 6 How. 284 (47 U. S. bk. 12, L. ed. 440); Threadgill v. Pintard, 12 How. 24 (53 U. S. bk. 13, L. ed. 877); Henshaw v. Wells, 9 Humph. 568; Crook v. Luneford, 2 Lea, 287; Bank of Greensboro v. Clapp, 76 N. C. 482; Crane v. Turner, 7 Hun, 357; Van Rensselaer v. Kearney, 11 How. 323 (52 U. S. bk. 13, L. ed. 714); Doe v. Larmore, ante, 598.

The parting with or loan of money or its equivalent, upon the faith of the mortgage, is pro tanto a sale and gives such a mortgagee, to the extent of the loan, all the rights of a bona fide purchaser for value without notice.

Chadwell v. Wheless, 6 Lea, 322; Carpenter v. Longan, 16 Wall. 271 (83 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 313).

The objection that the mortgage does not convey the lands here in controversy, by specific designation and description, is clearly insufficient, both upon reason and authority.

McGavock v. Deery, 1 Cold. 265; Seifreid v. Peoples Bank, 2 Tenn. Ch. 17; Sheets v. Selden, 2 Wall. 177 (67 U. S. bk. 17, L. ed. 822); Wilson v. Boyce, 92 U. S. 320 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 608); Spindle v. Shreve, 111 U. S. 542 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 512); Frey v. Clifford, 44 Cal. 343; Barton v. Morris, 15 Ohio, 408; Hoxie v. Lawrence, 117 Mass. 111; St. Louis, etc. R. Co. v. McGee, ante, 446, citing approvingly, Wilson v. Boyce, 92 U. S. 320 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 608).

The exception made in the mortgage is conclusive that the mortgagor intended to convey and did convey all its property, save only "such and so much of the same," as it had not theretofore conveyed by its two mortgages of 1868.

Gardner v. Morrison, 12 Ala. 547; Pierce v. Milwaukee & St. P. R. R. Co. 24 Wis. 551; S. C. 1 Am. Rep. 203.

Mr. Xenophon Wheeler, for appellee:

An after acquired title does not pass to the vendee or mortgagee, unless there is a covenant of warranty in the deed or mortgage.

Jackson v. Wright, 14 Johns. 193; Dosewell v Buchanan, 3 Leigh, 365; Comstock v. Smith, 13 Pick. 116; Doane v. Wilcutt, 5 Gray, 328; 3 Washb. Real Prop. 106; Jones, Mort. § 1483; Rawle, Cov. 390 and authorities cited.

As the mortgagor had nothing but the equitable estate in the land sued for, if it had that when it made the mortgage, and the mortgage contained no covenants for title, the subsequently acquired title through the deed of McMillan did not inure to the benefit of the mortgagee.

The land sued for is not embraced in the mortgage.

If the description in the mortgage, which is claimed to embrace the land in controversy, is examined, it will be seen not only that there is no specific description, but that there is nothing that will enable a subsequent purchaser to identify this land as forming any part of the property intended to be included in the mortgage.

The general words "all other property" are restricted by the words preceding them, and are descriptive of all other property of the nature of telegraph lines, telegraph offices and machine shops.

See Chidsey v. Canton, 17 Conn. 479; Harwood v. Lowell, 4 Cush. 313; People v. N. Y. & Manhattan Beach R. Co. 84 N. Y. 565; Matter of Hermance, 71 N. Y. 487; Corning v. McCullough, 1 N. Y. 69; Clark v. Gaskarth, 8 Taunt. 431; Bish. Wr. L. § 245.

[605] Mr. Justice Miller delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an appeal from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Tennessee. The suit was originally brought in the Chancery Court of Hamilton County, from which it was removed into the court first mentioned. It was a bill to foreclose a mortgage on twenty-two acres of land in that county, which is described with particularity by metes and bounds in the bill, and is there alleged to have been purchased of J. P. McMillin by the Alabama and Chattanooga Railroad Company, the mortgagor, on the 25th day of March, 1869 No such description of the land is found in the mortgage which is the foundation of this suit; [606] and if it is covered by that mortgage, it is by a phrase which, it must be supposed, was intended to cover it by a general reference to all other property of the mortgagor in the State of Tennessee, rather than by any specification of this property.

The defendants deny that by any fair or just construction of the mortgage, it can be held to include the twenty-two acres in question.

There are other grounds of defense set up, on one of which the decree against plaintiffs was rendered, namely: that the suit was barred by the Statute of Limitations. But if the defendants are right, in the assertion that the land was not conveyed by the mortgage deed, all other questions are immaterial.

It appears that the Legislature of the State of Alabama authorized the Governor of the State to issue to the Alabama and Chattanooga Railroad Company its bonds to the amount of $2,000,000. The statute, however, required the Governor, before he delivered these bonds, to demand of the company its own bonds of an equal amount secured by a mortgage on certain property mentioned in the statute. The mortgage was made and the bonds issued to the State in exchange for bonds of the State delivered to the company.

As the language descriptive of the property to be mortgaged, as found in the statute, is found identically in the reciting part of the mortgage and in its granting clause, and as this question is to be decided by a construction of that language, it will be given here verbatim from the mortgage deed:

"EXHIBIT 'C' to original bill.

"This instrument of mortgage, made this second day of March, in the year eighteen hundred and seventy, by and between the Alabama and Chattanooga Railroad Company, a corporation of the States of Alabama, Georgia, Mississippi and Tennessee, the party of the first part, and the State of Alabama, the party of the second part, witnesseth: That whereas, said State of Alabama, by an Act entitled 'An Act to Loan the Credit of the State of Alabama to the Alabama and Chattanooga Railroad Company, for the Purpose of Expediting the [607] Construction of the Railroad of said Company Within the State of Alabama,' and approved February 11, 1870, has granted certain aid to said corporation, and has in and by said Act required the governor of said State to issue bonds of said State to an amount not exceeding $2,000,000 in favor of said company, bearing interest at a rate not — 8 per cent per annum, which said interest shall be payable semi-annually in currency or coin, and the bonds shall be payable at the expiration of not less than fifteen nor more than thirty years upon the terms and conditions in said Act set forth; And whereas, Said Act further provides that the Governor of the State shall only issue said bonds upon receiving in exchange therefor an equal amount of first mortgage bonds of said railroad company, bearing the same rate of interest as the above mentioned state bonds, and secured by a first mortgage upon the lands granted by the United States to said railroad company and upon any interest which said company now has or may hereafter lawfully acquire in or to said lands, with this reservation; that the said Alabama and Chattanooga Railroad Company shall have the privilege and right of selling said lands, or any part thereof, in accordance with the Act of Congress granting the same; Provided, however, That the proceeds of said sale shall be appropriated to the payment of the aforesaid first mortgage bonds of the said railroad company issued to the State; Provided, further, That the Governor shall require said railroad company, before issuing to said company said bonds, to give the State of Alabama a first mortgage on the telegraph line and telegraph offices along the line of said road belonging to said company; also on the machine shops and other property in the State and in Georgia, Tennessee and Mississippi belonging to said company; also on all coal mines now open or hereafter to be opened and worked belonging to said company; also upon all iron or other mineral lands and all iron manufacturing establishments now in operation or hereafter to be constructed; And whereas, Said Alabama and Chattanooga Railroad Company, in order to obtain said State aid, proposes to issue to said State bonds of said corporation, secured as is by said Act required, and entitled first [608] mortgage land bonds of the Alabama and Chattanooga Railroad Company:

"Now, therefore, the said Alabama and Chattanooga Railroad Company, in compliance with the terms and conditions of said Act, and for the purpose of obtaining the aid thereby granted to this corporation, and in order to secure the punctual payment of all said first mortgage land bonds of this corporation, does hereby grant, bargain, sell, enfeoff, release, assign and convey unto the State of Alabama, and its successors and assigns, forever, all lands granted by the United States to and for the benefit of this company, and all the right, title, interest and estate which said company now has, or may hereafter lawfully acquire, in or to said lands, subject to this reservation to said company, as by said Act provided; that said company shall have the privilege and right of selling said lands, or any part thereof, in accordance with the Act of Congress granting the same, and entitled 'An Act to Renew Certain Grants of Land to the State of Alabama,' and approved April 10, 1869; Provided, however, That the proceeds of said sales shall be appropriated to the payment of the first mortgage land bonds of said company to be issued to the State of Alabama, as aforesaid; also the telegraph line and telegraph offices along the line of said road, and belonging to said company; also the machine shops and all other property in said States of Alabama, Georgia, Tennessee and Mississippi belonging to said company; also all coal mines now open or hereafter to be opened and worked belonging to said company, and all iron or other mineral lands, and all iron manufacturing establishments now in operation and hereafter to be constructed; saving and excepting only from said granted premises such and so much of the same as said company may have heretofore conveyed in mortgage in or by either or both of two indentures of mortgage, both made on December 19, 1868, and covering the railroad and certain other property of said company, for a more specific description whereof reference is hereby made to said two indentures, the same having been recorded in the counties where said road is located."

It is to be observed that the land sued for is nowhere spoken of in this record otherwise than as land, pure and simple, nor is there any claim that it was land granted by Congress.

Now, the mortgage deed describes ex industria the several species of lands which it conveys. The first of them, by far the most important, is "all lands granted by the United States to and for the benefit of this company, and all right, title, interest or estate which said company now has or may hereafter lawfully acquire in or to said lands." If the company had intended to grant all its lands within the States of Alabama, Georgia, Tennessee and Mississippi, and it must have had other lands in these States, why not have said so, instead of saying all the lands granted by the United States? It was, therefore, only this class of lands which was conveyed by this first clause of the deed. After some reservation of the right of the mortgaging company to sell these lands and appropriate the proceeds to payment of the bonds secured by the deed, the granting language proceeds: "Also the telegraph line and telegraph offices along the line of said road and belonging to said company; also the machine shops and all other property in said States of Alabama, Georgia, Tennessee and Mississippi belonging to said company; also all coal mines now open or hereafter to be opened and worked belonging to said company, and all iron or other mineral lands, and all iron manufacturing establishments now in operation and hereafter to be constructed."

While the company is thus specific in its description of the subjects of the mortgage, enumerating with great particularity its land grant from Congress, its telegraph lines and offices, its machine shops, and its coal mines, it is quite unreasonable to suppose that the company would have been thus needlessly minute in its description of the property conveyed, enumerating with great particularity the four or five classes of property, mostly real estate, which were intended to pass, if it had also intended that the three words, "All other property," should stand for everything in the four States which the company owned, and especially all its lands.

These words, which are found neither in the beginning of the granting clause as a general phrase to be afterwards emphasized by a more minute description, nor at the end, as a summary of what had preceded them, have their appropriate use in the precise place where they are found. We say they are there appropriate, because in conveying the telegraph offices, the machine shops, the coal mines, the iron mines and the manufacturing establishments, there might in them be found much property belonging to the company about which a doubt would arise whether it was a part of these offices, mines, machine shops and manufacturing establishments. All such doubt or ambiguity is removed by declaring that all the property of the grantors in these places, or used in any of these pursuits, is conveyed. For this purpose the phrase "all other property" is apt, and is used in the right place in a description designedly minute and elaborate. It is among its kind, ejusdem generis, and its purpose is answered when its use is limited to explain the other words in this immediate connection.

It is not to be denied that in a writing descriptive of property to be transferred or assigned, the more general words which include all that is intended to be conveyed are not to be frittered away by an attempt at a description of each particular thing fairly included in the more general language. But in such case it must be apparent that the intent was to include all that could be embraced within the more general terms. If, for instance, the description of the property mortgaged had commenced by saying "all the property of the grantor, real, personal and mixed, in the States of Alabama, Georgia, Mississippi and Tennessee," and had then attempted to enumerate this property, but had omitted some of it, this omitted part would have passed as in Spindle v. Shreve, 111 U. S. 544 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 512]. So where the instrument professes "to convey all my property," or "all my estate," or "all my lands wherever situated." In all these cases referred to in Wilson v. Boyce, 92 U. S. 325 [Bk. 23, L. ed. 610], there were no words to qualify the generality of this description.

In fact there were no other words of description, and their full effect must be given to them. This latter case is relied on by appellants' counsel as conclusive in the one now under consideration. In that case the bonds issued to certain railroad companies were declared to be a "first lien upon the road and property of the several companies so receiving them," and this was held to cover the lands owned by said companies. It is obvious here the two words "road and property" of those companies were used as representing all the property they owned. Nothing further in the way of description was needed or was desirable. But this form of words differs widely from the elaborate description of what is conveyed in the deed of the mortgaging company here, and the meaning also is as different. In the latter case the road, its bed, its rolling stock, and much other property probably was not conveyed, and no expression is found implying that all its lands were conveyed. And if we limit the words "all other property" to what we have supposed to be their meaning, there is nothing else to imply that the company intended to mortgage all its property, of every kind and description, whether real or personal.

We do not believe this was intended or can be fairly implied from the language used, the minute descriptive character of which is found three times in this contract, namely: in the statute authorizing the transaction, in the preliminary recital of the mortgage deed, and in its granting clause, all of which is useless if the phrase "all other property," as there used, was intended to include all lands and all interest in lands in the four States through which the road passed.

The decree of the Circuit Court is affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

STATE OF ALABAMA, JOHN SWANN AND JOHN A. BILLUPS, Trustees as well as Grantees, Plffs. in Err., [611]

v.

THEODORE G. MONTAGUE, In His Own Right and as Agent of XENOPHON WHEELER, GEORGE M. SHERWOOD, ISAAC H. TOWER ET AL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 611, 612.)

Railroad mortgage—construction of.

The judgment of the court below in this case is affirmed on the opinion in the preceding case, which involved the same question.

[No. 835.]

Submitted March 31, 1886. Decided April 12, 1886.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Tennessee.

Mr. Samuel F. Rice, for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. Xenophon Wheeler, for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Miller delivered the opinion of the court: [612]

This was an action of ejectment tried by a jury in the same court which decided the preceding case, in which the plaintiffs in error based their right to recover on the same mortgage which they sought to foreclose in that suit. The court instructed the jury against them on the ground that they had no legal title.

As the foregoing opinion decides that they had no title at all, legal or equitable, the judgment of the court below must be affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

617 FRANCIS M. LONG AND WIFE, Plfs. in Err.,

v.

DANIEL BULLARD

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 427-421.)

Bankruptcy—what debts not released by discharge.

1. By section 5119 of the Revised Statutes the discharge releases the bankrupt only from debts which were or might have been proved; and by section 5045 debts secured by mortgage or pledge can only be proved for the balance remaining due after deducting the value of the security, unless all claim upon the security is released. Where a creditor neither proved his debt in bankruptcy nor released his lien, his security was preserved notwithstanding the bankruptcy of his debtor.

2. Whether the lien was in existence at the time of the commencement of the proceedings in bankruptcy, depends entirely upon the state laws, as to which the judgment of the state court is final and not subject to review here.

3. The setting apart of the homestead to the bankrupt under section 5045 of the Revised Statutes, does not relieve the property from the operation of liens created by contract before the bankruptcy.

[No. 206.]

Argued April 1, 1886. Decided April 12, 1886.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Georgia.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Messrs. R. F. Lyon and Thomas B. Gresham, for plaintiffs in error:

This transaction, to secure this debt was made under section 1969 et seq. of the Code of Georgia; and according to that statute it amounts to an absolute conveyance, passing the title of the property to the creditor, and upon the further express permission that it shall not be a mortgage. The deed, being given to secure a usurious debt, was void as title.

Code, § 2057.

Being void, it left the transaction where it was before the deed was made: simply a debt of Long to Bullard, unless Bullard had an interest in the title, or the title itself, or such an equity as arises between vendor and vendee for unpaid purchase money, as in Lewis v. Hawkins, 23 Wall. 119 (90 U. S. bk. 23, L. ed. 113); or Bayley v. Greenleaf, 7 Wheat. 46 (20 U. S. bk. 5, L. ed. 393); Brown v. Gilman, 4 Wheat. 255 (17 U. S. bk. 4, L. ed. 564).

Here Bullard's debt was simply one of lending and borrowing; and by the Bankrupt Act (R. S. 5119) the bankrupt by his discharge was released from all debts, except debts created by fraud or embezzlement, or by his defalcation as a public officer, under neither of which heads does this debt come.

But concede that this is a mortgage, which it is not, or even an equitable mortgage; in Georgia, a mortgage is but a security for a debt—it does not give any interest in the title at all.

See Code 1954; 1 Ga. 177; 7 Ga. 183; 35 Ga. 344; 36 Ga. 138; 45 Ga. 628.

As a mortgage is only an incident to the debt, when the debt was extinguished by the discharge in bankruptcy the mortgage fell with it.

1 Hill. Mort. 213-447.

There being no debts, the mortgage had nothing to stand upon.

2 Hill. Mort. 457.

In the case of Broach v. Smith, not yet published, the court holds that a deed under section 1969 of the Georgia Code is void as title and cannot be enforced as an equitable mortgage, and that the debtor having been adjudged a bankrupt and received his discharge after having given a deed of this character, the debt itself was discharged.

The exemption in bankruptcy was valid as against this debt and against this decree and judgment, under the Act, section 5045, R. S.; and this decree was void, because it was in contravention of that section of the Bankrupt Act. The Bankrupt Act declares that liens shall not be affected by assignment in bankruptcy; but this does not mean that such a lien prevents exemption. It only means in the administration of the bankrupt's estate, that the liens of creditors shall retain their priority; as otherwise, a creditor, by taking a mortgage, would cut off the right of a bankrupt to exemption entirely and defeat the whole bankrupt scheme.

See Ex parte Christy, 3 How. 292 (44 U. S. bk. 11, L. ed. 603).

This exemption to the plaintiffs in error was granted by a court having full jurisdiction of this question in proceedings instituted by him to obtain the benefits of that law, of which this exemption was an important and material incident, in which all the creditors were directly interested and this creditor most especially so, that application being accompanied by a claim for exemption on this particular land. Now, inasmuch as this creditor had the notice of this proceeding required by law, and was thus directly interested in the subject matter, and the court had full jurisdiction, why is he not bound by the judgment rendered, as all other parties are, not only as to the final judgment, but as to all the proceedings had by that court under the law? If so, was he not bound to appear in that court? And if he did not so appear, is he not forever estopped by the judgments therein rendered?

Ex parte Christy, 3 How. 292-332 (44 U. S. bk. 11, L. ed. 603-622); Hogg v. Emerson, 6 How. 486 (47 U. S. bk. 12, L. ed. 505).

Mr. Clifford Anderson, for defendant in error:

No federal question is made in the case brought here for review. The judge of the superior court, in his charge to the jury, ruled on the efficacy of Long's exemption; but that ruling was not excepted to by the present plaintiffs in error and has never been passed upon by the State Supreme Court.

Singleton v. Southwestern R. R. Co. 70 Ga. 464.

In the case of Broach v. Smith, the Supreme Court of Georgia has recently held that the only question it decided in this case was that "The money loaned, which was not used in discharging liens on the homestead property, should constitute no part of the judgment of foreclosure."

Section 2921 of the Code of Georgia provides that "All writs of error must be sued out within thirty days from the adjournment of the court where the decision complained of was made; or, if made at chambers, from the time of the decisions."

See also Code, § 4252; 6 Ga. 578, where the court says: "The bill must now be certified and signed within thirty days from the adjournment of the term. A bill not signed within that time is not, by the law of the State, cognizable by this court; and the bill of the record, or both, must show that it is signed within that time."

The supreme court of the State cannot review its own judgment once made, in a case between the same parties. Such a judgment is irreversible.

69 Ga. 683; Gray v. Obear, 59 Ga. 675.

The failure to take a writ of error to the judgment of the superior court, subjecting the land to Bullard's lien, notwithstanding the exemption in bankruptcy, could not be cured by interposing the exemption as an objection to the modification of the decree in conformity with the decision of the supreme court. That question was res judicata.

59 Ga. 675.

If the court holds that the decision of the state superior court, relative to Long's exemption in bankruptcy, is properly here for review, then it is respectfully contended that Bullard's lien was unaffected by the bankruptcy of Long, or by any proceedings which took place in consequence thereof.

In Assignee of Wicks v. Perkins, 1 Wood, 383, it is ruled that "The lien of a mortgage creditor, on the real property of a bankrupt, is not lost by his failure to prove his debt, so that after the end of the proceedings in bankruptcy, he cannot enforce his lien."

See Id. 661; Eyster v. Gaff, 91 U. S. 521 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 403); McHenry v. La Société Francaise, 95 U. S. 58 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 370).

Under the State Constitution of 1868, which was adopted subsequent to April 14 of that year and which was of force in 1871, all homestead exemptions are subject to be sold to pay money borrowed to remove an incumbrance on the property embraced in the homestead.

See Code of 1873, § 5135; 48 Ga; 148; 59 Ga. 220.

When property is incumbered by a lien it is only the bankrupt's sub modo.

Bump, Bankruptcy, 8th ed. 152, 153; Re Dillard, 9 N. B. Reg. 8; Re Deckert, 10 N. B. Reg. 1.

Section 5045 Revised Statutes of the United States exempts only such property as was exempt from sale, etc., by state laws in 1871.

Mr. Chief Justice Waite delivered the opinion of the court:

The material facts appearing in this record are as follows:

In the month of December, 1869, parts of lots 5 and 6, in square 90 of the City of Macon, were set off under the laws of Georgia to Betsey A. Long, the wife of Francis M. Long, as a homestead. The property was at the time incumbered by a mortgage made by Francis M. Long to the Ocmulgee Building Association. Proceedings were afterwards had to foreclose this mortgage, and to save the property from sale Francis M. Long applied to Daniel Bullard for a loan of money. This loan was made at usurious interest, and Long and his wife executed to Bullard their joint note, dated November 18, 1872, for $1,220 payable twelve months after date, and conveyed to him the homestead property by a deed absolute on its face as security. On the 29th of May, 1873, Francis M. Long was adjudged a bankrupt, and on the 15th of April, 1874, he received his discharge. In his schedules the debt to Bullard, with its security on the homestead premises, was duly entered. On the 28th of June, 1873, the same premises were set apart to the bankrupt to be retained by him under the bankrupt law as being exempt under the state law from levy and sale upon execution. Bullard did not prove his debt in the bankrupt proceedings.

On the 9th of February, 1878, Bullard brought suit in the Superior Court of Bibb County, Georgia, to subject the property to the payment of his debt. In his bill he alleged that the money he loaned was used to pay off the prior incumbrance on the homestead, and he claimed a valid lien on that account. He also set forth the bankruptcy of Francis M. Long, and the assignment of the property to him under the bankrupt law as a homestead.

Long and his wife in their answer stated that the deed to Bullard was void for usury in the debt for which it was given as security; that only $727.94 of the amount actually lent by Bullard was used to pay off the prior incumbrance; that the money was lent to the husband and not to the wife; and that the husband had been discharged in bankruptcy. Upon these facts, it was insisted that the homestead rights of Mrs. Long and her children were superior to the claim of Bullard under his conveyance, and that the property could not be sold to pay him.

Upon the trial the court charged the jury, in substance, that there could be no personal recovery against the husband upon the note, but [619] that the property could be subjected to the payment of the amount due, as the discharge of Long in bankruptcy did not release the lien of the mortgage. This was excepted to by the Longs. A verdict was returned in favor of Bullard for the amount of money actually lent, excluding the usurious interest. Thereupon the Longs moved for a new trial, on the ground, among others, of error in the instructions to the jury as to the effect of the discharge in bankruptcy. This motion was granted, but only because the property was subjected to the payment of a larger sum than was used to pay off the prior incumbrance. From the order granting a new trial, Bullard took a writ of error to the supreme court, where it was adjudged April 19, 1882, that the judgment of the superior court granting the new trial be affirmed, "unless the plaintiff in error will write off from his verdict in the court below the sum of $300." The only questions decided on this writ of error, as shown by the opinion, were such as related to the right of Bullard to recover the full amount of his loan, instead of the amount used to pay off the incumbrance on the homestead.

When the case got back to the trial court the specified amount was "written off," and a decree entered accordingly for a sale of the property to pay what remained due according to the verdict as reduced. Francis M. Long thereupon excepted to the decree, among other things, because the property ordered to be sold "constitutes and is his homestead, exempted, set apart, and secured to him by the Bankrupt Court of the United States * * * in a bankruptcy proceeding in that court * * * as against of the proper court to that end. The taxpayer then files his petition, praying "that a jury be impaneled to try the question as to whether they are genuine legal coupons, which are legally receivable for taxes, debts and demands." This is the only issue that can be tried, and if finally decided in favor of the taxpayer, the coupons are to be received by the collector for such of the taxes, dues and demands for which they were tendered as can under the contract of the State be paid in that way. The court has no authority under the law to determine in that proceeding what taxes may be so paid. It thus appears that the issue to be tried cannot involve any question arising under the Constitution or laws of the United States.

[illegible] there [illegible] and [illegible] secured [illegible] by [illegible] 605 [illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

ROBERT G. CAMPBELL, Plff. in Err.,
v.
DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 615-617.)

District of Columbia—action against, for work and material.

The plaintiff in error having built a water main for the District of Columbia, under the authority of the contractors and with the permission of the chief engineer in charge, it is held that he was bound by the terms of the contract and of his acceptance of an allowance made by the engineer in full settlement of his claims for extra work.

[No. 207.]

Argued April 1, 2, 1886. Decided April 12, 1886.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

This was an action of assumpsit for work done and materials furnished for the District by the plaintiff in error, in the construction of a portion of a water main, authorized by an Act of Congress. The facts sufficiently appear in the opinion.

Mr. Enoch Totten, for plaintiff in error.
Mr. A. G. Riddle, for defendant in error.

Mr. Chief Justice Waite delivered the opinion of the court:

This judgment is affirmed. There was no evidence whatever in the case tending to prove that the work was done by Campbell otherwise than under the contract of O'Hare, Himber & Co. He took the place of that firm in the contract so far as the work he undertook to do was concerned. Davenport, one of its members, authorized him to do the work and receive the pay upon vouchers, which he, Davenport, agreed to sign. It was upon this authority that Campbell entered upon the work with the permission of the chief engineer in charge. In this way he became bound by the terms of the contract. Under these circumstances, his acceptance of the allowance made by the chief engineer for all his present claims for extra work, as "in full settlement of the above stated claim," operated as a complete discharge of the District from all further liability to him on that account. The provision in the Act of the Legislative Assembly of the District, "that this receipt shall not debar the above named persons from any right they may have in any court," clearly applies only to the claim of Robert Strong & Co. As to all others named in the Act, "the receipt was to be in full of all claims on account of the said work."

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

CONNECTICUT MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY, Appt., [634]
v.
JONATHAN YOUNG SCAMMON, MARIA S. SCAMMON ET AL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 634-648.)

Foreclosure of mortgage—proceeds of insurance policy—marshaling assets—adjustment of rights of parties in complicated case—costs on part of decree being reversed.

1. Scammon owned in fee an undivided one third of a certain lot, and a life estate in the other two thirds. His two daughters owned the remainder in the last two thirds. The three mortgaged the lot for $30,000. The daughters conveyed to the father's appointee the south two thirds in fee. The father conveyed to the daughters in common the life estate in the north two thirds. On payment of $10,000, the mortgagee released the south one third. A building was erected on the north two thirds and insured for $15,000, payable in case of loss to the mortgagee to be credited on the mortgage. The policy was in Scammon's name. The entire business was conducted by S. who collected the rents and applied them to his own use. The building was entirely destroyed by fire and the $15,000 was paid to the mortgagee. By contract between S. and the mortgagee, of which the daughters had no knowledge, it was provided that the $15,000 should be used in rebuilding, the funds to be deposited in a bank and paid out on the joint order of S. and the mortgagee or the agent of the mortgagee on certain conditions. The money was so deposited, but none of it was ever paid out on checks countersigned by the mortgagee or his agent, none of it was ever used in building, and no building was ever erected on the lot.

In an action to foreclose the mortgage, held:

(a). That the policy of insurance was a collateral security for the joint debt, and the mortgagee having received the proceeds thereof could not surrender it to Scammon or divert it from the purpose to which it had been devoted by the mortgagors without the consent of the daughters.

(b). If the money could be devoted to rebuilding, the mortgagee was bound to see that it was so applied and, as to the daughters, was responsible for its diversion.

(c). The whole indebtedness is a lien on Scammon's estate. The $15,000 is to be credited to the daughters. The excess of the debt is a lien on their estate. The proceeds of S's estate are to be first applied to the debt for which it is the sole security and none of them are to be applied to taxes or costs until the entire debt for which S's estate is the sole security has been extinguished.

2. The decree of the court below as to a strip of the lot covered by a party wall reversed, there being nothing in the pleadings or evidence to support it.

[No. 162.]

Submitted Mar. 12, 1886. Decided Apr. 12, 1886.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois.

The case is stated by the court.

Messrs. Edward S. Isham and Robert T. Lincoln for appellant:

The mere relation of mortgagor and mortgagee or of life tenant and reversioner does not give the mortgagor or reversioner any interest in insurance procured by the mortgagee or life tenant. Each of them has a separate insurable interest.

Rimmell v. Sedford, 12 How. 130 (52 U. S. bk. 13, L. ed. 987); Ely v. Ely, 80 Ill. 532; Hanover v. Lamar Ins. Co., 51 Ill. 400; White v. Brown, 2 Cush. 412; Franklin M. & F. Ins. Co. v. Drake, 2 B. Mon. 47; Louden v. Waddle, 98 Pa. 242.

In Redfield v. Holland Purchase Ins. Co. 56 N. Y. 354, the equitable owner of a life estate was held entitled to recover on a policy issued to him in the usual form, it not appearing that the injury to his life estate did not equal the sum for which the property was insured.

Without the mortgage the whole insurance finally collected under the policy issued to Scammon would have belonged to him absolutely, to use as he saw fit; how then has the existence of the mortgage given the reversioners an interest in the insurance money?

On the contrary, we claim that the money was his own, subject to his covenant that the mortgagee might apply it on the debt, at its election; and that it being his own money, if it had been applied on the debt, his co-obligors would, in the absence of some express agreement with him, limiting their liability as between themselves, have been liable to a claim for contribution, each to repay him one third of the amount.

1 Pars. Cont. 31; 1 Hill. Mort. 275, n. (a); Cumming v. Williamson, 1 Sandf. Ch. 18.

Upon the satisfaction of the mortgage he would have been entitled to be subrogated to the mortgagee to preserve the lien of his claim for any payment beyond his own pro rata share of the principal debt, against the separate estate of his co-obligors.

Shinn v. Shinn, 91 Ill. 477.

Messrs. W. L. Culver and Charles F. White, for appellees:

It is well settled that a creditor holds collateral securities as the agent or trustee of his debtor, and that whenever he undertakes to transfer them without the authority of the debtor the law will hold that he has elected to take them for what appears to be due on their face in satisfaction to that extent of the principal debt.

Hoade v. Hinchcliff, 17 Barb. 492; Sparhawk v. Drexel, 12 N. B. Reg. 450; Cocke v. Chaney, 14 Ala. 65; Chamberlain Ins. Co. v. Smith, 11 Pa. 130; King v. Hutchings, 38 N. H. 561.

But it is contended that this insurance was furnished by Scammon alone, one of the joint mortgagors, and therefore covered only his interest in the buildings, and that he alone was entitled to the benefits arising therefrom.

This position is not tenable.

1. Because the insurance was a part of the original security covenanted in the mortgage to be furnished for the joint benefit of and to secure the joint debt of all the mortgagors, and must in law be treated as furnished by all for the purposes specified in the mortgage.

In South Ins. Brewing Co. 3 Biss. 175; Thomas v. Vanhaff, 6 Gill & J. 372; Cromwell v. Brooklyn F. Ins. Co. 39 Barb. 228; Jones, Mort. § 400–404; Carter v. Rockett, 8 Paige, 437; Nichols v. Baxter, 5 R. I. 491.

In this case not only the covenant in the mortgage, but the provision in the policy, making the loss payable to the mortgagee, operated to assign the policy in its inception to the mortgagee.

Carpenter v. Providence Washington Ins. Co. 16 Pet. 495 (41 U. S. bk. 10, L. ed. 1044); Motley v. Mfrs. Ins. Co. 29 Me. 387; Franklin v. Nat. Ins. Co. 43 Mo. 491; Nat. Fire Ins. Co. v. Crane, 16 Md. 260.

Treated as a question of insurance law simply, Scammon had an undoubted right to effect insurance on the buildings in his own name, and such insurance, if so intended, would inure to the benefit of the appellees as well as himself.

Blanchard v. Waite, 28 Me. 59; Finney v. Fairhaven Ins. Co. 5 Met. 192; Wood, Insurance, 507 and cases cited; Hagedorn v. Oliverson, 2 Maule & Sel. 485; Miltenberger v. Becom, 9 Pa. 198; Murray v. Columbia Ins. Co. 11 Johns. 302; Graves v. Boston Mar. Ins. Co. 2 Cranch, 419 (6 U. S. bk. 2, L. ed. 324; Manhattan Ins. Co. v. Webster, 59 Pa. 227; Keith v. Globe Ins. Co. 52 Ill. 518.

The form of the policy is immaterial, provided the Insurance Company has not been deceived. The question as to who is entitled to the benefit of an insurance policy is one of fact, depending upon the purposes for which the insurance was effected.

Fleming v. Marine Ins. Co. 4 Whart. 59; 2 Am. L. Cas. 797; De Rolle v Penn Ins. Co. 4 Whart. 68; Augusta Ins. Co. v. Abbott, 12 Md. 348; Steele v. Ins. Co. 17 Pa. 290.

Mr. Justice Blatchford delivered the opinion of the court:

On the 10th of September, 1866, J. Young Scammon, of Chicago, Illinois, and Florence A. D. Scammon and Arianna E. Scammon, his daughters, were the owners of a lot of land in Chicago, No. 90 Michigan Avenue, known as "lot number five (5), in block number eleven (11), in Fort Dearborn Addition to Chicago;" the father being the owner in fee of an equal undivided one third part of the lot, and having a tenancy for life in the other equal undivided two third parts; and his two daughters being each the owner in fee of an equal undivided one third part, subject to such tenancy for life of the father. The lot had descended to the two daughters and a brother of theirs from their mother, subject to the tenancy for life of the father, and he had purchased from the son the fee of his equal undivided one third part.

On the day above named, Scammon and his daughters executed to the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Company, a corporation of Hartford, Connecticut, a mortgage covering the above lot by the above description, to secure the payment of $30,000, in five years, with semi-annual interest at 8 per cent per annum, according to the condition of a bond which they at the same time executed. The bond stated that it was given for an actual loan of money made by the obligee to the obligors on the day of its date.

The mortgage contained the following covenant on the part of the mortgagors: "And further, that they, their heirs, executors and administrators, shall and will, at all times hereafter, until said principal sum of money and all arrearages of interest thereon shall be fully paid, keep all the buildings (outhouses excepted) now situate, or that hereafter may be erected, upon said premises, fully insured against loss or damage by fire, in some good and responsible insurance company or companies (satisfactory to the said party of the second part, its successor or assigns, or its or their authorized agent), in the fair insurable value of such buildings, and will legally and properly assign and deliver to the said party of the second part, its successors or assigns, each, all and every, the policies of insurance therefor, as soon as and whenever such insurance shall be effected; and will also deliver to said party of the second part, its successors or assigns, or its or their authorized agent, all premium or renewal certificates received for the payment of the premium upon such policy or policies of insurance, as soon as and whenever such certificates shall be issued; and in default of so doing, the said party of the second part, its successors or assigns, at its own or their option, may effect such insurance in its or their name or names or otherwise, and the premium money paid therefor shall be a charge upon said premises, and shall be secured by this instrument in the same manner as the said principal sum of money above mentioned is secured, and such premium money shall be paid by said parties of the first part, their heirs and legal representatives, to said party of the second part, its successors or assigns, on demand, and may be collected at any and all times after the same shall have been paid, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per centum per annum from the time the same shall be advanced; and the said party of the second part, its successors or assigns, shall hold each and all such policies of insurance so received, by assignment or otherwise, as collateral and additional security for said principal sum of money and interest, and shall have the right to collect and receive any and all money and sums of money that may at any time become collectible or receivable upon each, all, and every of such policies of insurance, and apply the same, when received, in the same manner, as far as possible, as is hereinafter provided for in case of a sale of said above described premises under the power of sale hereinafter contained. But nothing herein contained shall be construed as requiring the said party of the second part, its successors or assigns, to incur any expense, or make any effort, to collect any money that may become due on any of such policies of insurance; but if it or they shall elect not to collect the same, they shall make such election within a reasonable time after such money shall become collectible, and on demand of said parties of the first part or their legal representatives shall thereupon forthwith, after making such election not to collect, reassign and deliver such policy or policies of insurance to said parties of the first part, their executors, administrators or assigns."

In the fall of 1867, by an arrangement between Scammon and his daughters, the south one third part of the lot was conveyed to his appointee by them, in fee, as representing his existing interest in fee in the lot, and the north two thirds part of the lot was conveyed by him to them as tenants in common, in fee, as representing their existing interest in fee in the lot, subject, as to such north two thirds part, to the life estate of the father therein. Thereupon, the father and daughters paid or caused to be paid to the mortgagee $10,000, as a reduction of the principal of the mortgage; and it released, by deed, from the lien of the mortgage, such south one third of the lot. [638]

With the money lent on the mortgage, Scammon erected a building on the north two thirds of the lot, and thereafter collected for his own use the rents from it, and paid the interest on the mortgage, and the taxes and the fire insurance premiums. Insurance against fire, covering the building, for $15,000, was effected by Scammon, by a policy issued by the Liverpool and London and Globe Insurance Company in his name, with a clause making the loss payable to the mortgagee. The building was destroyed by fire in October, 1871, and the loss being adjusted at a sum greater than $15,000, a draft for $15,000 was drawn at Chicago, by the agents of the fire insurance company there, on that company, at New York, payable to the order of the mortgagee. The draft was handed to Scammon and, at his request, the agent of the mortgagee at Chicago sent it to the mortgagee, at Hartford, with an application from Scammon to have the $15,000 paid to him, to enable him to rebuild the building. Thereupon the following instrument was executed in duplicate by the mortgagee and Scammon, a copy being retained by each:

"Memorandum of agreement made and entered into this 5th day of January, A. D. 1872, between the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Company, a corporation subsisting by the laws of the State of Connecticut, and located and doing business in the City of Hartford, in the State of Connecticut, of the one part, and J. Young Scammon, of the City of Chicago, in the County of Cook, and State of Illinois, of the other part, witnesseth: that whereas, the said party of the second part did, on the 10th day of September, A. D. 1866, make, execute and deliver to the said party of the first part a certain indenture of mortgage, bearing date on that day, on the following described premises, situate and being in the City of Chicago, aforesaid, to wit, lot number five (5), in block number eleven (11), in Fort Dearborn Addition to Chicago, for the purpose of securing the payment of the certain bond or obligation of the said party of the second part, bearing even date with said mortgage, in the penal sum of $60,000, conditioned for the payment to said party of the first part of the sum of $30,000 on the 10th day of September, A. D. 1871, with interest as therein stated, on which said mortgage has been paid $10,000 of principal; and whereas, the building on said premises, known as No. 90 Michigan Avenue, in said City of Chicago, was insured in the following company and in the following amount, to wit: the Liverpool and London and Globe, in the sum of $15,000; which said policy of insurance was held by said party of the first part as collateral security for the payment of said loan, any loss on said policy to be paid to said party of the first part; and whereas, said building has been destroyed by fire and the insurance moneys to be received on said policy or policies are subject to be paid to said party of the first part, in accordance with the conditions of said mortgage; and [639]

[illegible] said party of the second part desires [illegible] to permit and suffer [illegible] money to be used in and upon [illegible] in the reconstruction [illegible] or buildings thereon, and said [illegible] insurance money [illegible] conditions here[illegible] in the collection [illegible] party from [illegible] company or companies for [illegible] therefore, mutually [illegible] the parties hereto. [illegible] waives, except [illegible] its right to apply on the [illegible] that may be re[illegible] of insurance, [illegible] sum or sums of money [illegible] from said fire insur[illegible] by either of the [illegible] shall be deposited in [illegible] shall be selected by the [illegible] and assented to by the [illegible] at the risk of [illegible] to be used in the [illegible] building or buildings on said [illegible]

[illegible] shall be paid out and ex[illegible] of said building or build[illegible] the drafts or checks [illegible] part, countersigned [illegible] part, or its duly [illegible] until said insur[illegible] as herein pro[illegible] That said [illegible] countersigned upon [illegible] to said party of the [illegible] agent or attorney, [illegible] a competent and [illegible] the amount of said [illegible] with all previous [illegible] paid out on said ac[illegible] expended in and upon [illegible] in the permanent im[illegible] that the work and ma[illegible] so expended have [illegible] such sum.

[illegible] buildings are being con[illegible] supervision of an archi[illegible] party of the second [illegible] the option of said first [illegible] said architect's cer[illegible] understood and [illegible] building or build[illegible] to be insured said [illegible] part shall cause the same [illegible] good and responsible in[illegible] the fair insurable value [illegible] the same to said [illegible] part, and, as soon as said [illegible] insurable, all the pro[illegible] above described mort[illegible] insurance, and said con[illegible] a part of this agree[illegible]

[illegible] understood that any re[illegible] given by said party of [illegible] or jointly with others, [illegible] company or companies, [illegible] of facilitating the [illegible] party of any insurance [illegible] back on said mort[illegible] shall not be con[illegible] of said money by said first party under the conditions of said mortgage, wherein and whereby it is provided that said first party may collect and apply such insurance money upon the indebtedness secured to be paid thereby, but merely as enabling said second party to collect said insurance moneys. Said moneys are not to be so applied, and said mortgage shall remain a lien on said mortgaged premises for the full amount of the principal money mentioned in said bond, with the interest thereon, as if said moneys had never been collected.

It is also further expressly understood and agreed, that said insurance money shall be expended on said mortgaged premises as above provided, with all reasonable and proper dispatch; and that, in the event that from any cause, whether the death or absence of any party or parties to this agreement, or any other cause, said money shall not have been so expended within six months from the date hereof, then this agreement of waiver shall thereupon become thenceforth null and of no effect, and the right of said second party to use and expend said moneys shall thereupon cease, and said first party shall have the right to draw from the said bank or banks, upon its own check or checks or that of its authorized agent, said insurance moneys or so much thereof as shall not then have been actually expended as provided in this agreement, and apply the same in payment pro tanto of the indebtedness secured by said mortgage; and such check or checks of said first party or its agent as aforesaid, drawn at any time after the expiration of six months from the date hereof, shall be a full discharge and acquittance to said bank or banks for any moneys paid thereon.

It is expressly agreed, that time shall be of the essence of this agreement in all its parts, and that said agreement shall be binding upon the heirs, executors, administrators, successors and assigns of the respective parties."

On the execution of this agreement the mortgagee indorsed the draft, making it payable to Scammon or his order, and sent it to its agent at Chicago. Scammon signed on the agreement a written designation by him of "the Marine Company of Chicago," a banking institution of which he was then president, as the banking office in which to deposit the $15,000; and the draft was then delivered by the agent to Scammon, and collected, and its proceeds were deposited to his credit in the Marine Company. The transaction between Scammon and the agent took place at the banking company's office, and the agent exhibited the copy of the agreement to Scammon, as president of the bank. No checks against the money were ever countersigned by or on behalf of the mortgagee, nor was any of it used in putting up any new building on the lot, nor was any such new building put up. Scammon's daughters had no knowledge or information as to any part of the transaction between their father and the mortgagee in regard to the $15,000.

Under that state of facts, the mortgagee, in June, 1876, filed a bill in equity, in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois, for the foreclosure of the mortgage, making as defendants Scammon and the two daughters, and Reed, the husband of one of them, and other persons. The bill credits the payment of the $10,000, in November, 1876, as one by Scammon and his daughters, in reduction of the principal of the mortgage, and sets forth the release of the south one third of the lot from the lien of the mortgage, but ignores any credit of the $15,000, and claims as due $20,000, with interest at 8 per cent per annum from September 10, 1873, and moneys paid by the mortgagee for taxes and assessments.

Mrs. Reed and her sister answered the bill. The answer sets forth the transaction in regard to the $15,000, and avers that it took place without the knowledge, authority or consent of the daughters, and that the mortgagee, in consenting to the use of the $15,000 in any other way than in payment of the mortgage indebtedness, relied on the credit of Scammon and released the property of the daughters to that extent. It claims that Scammon's life estate in the north two thirds part of the lot should be first sold, and the proceeds be applied first in payment of the remaining $5,000 and interest, and the property of the daughters be thereupon released from all further liability.

After issue, the court referred the cause to a master, to take proofs and report them, with the amount due to the plaintiff. He reported the testimony, and that there was due $20,000 of principal, and interest from September 10, 1873, and certain sums paid by the plaintiff for taxes and assessments, with interest thereon. [643] Mrs. Reed and her sister excepted to the report, and the case was heard on the exceptions. The court rendered a decision (4 Fed. Rep. 263), in which it was ruled: 1, that authority in Scammon, as representing his daughters, to make the special agreement in regard to the $15,000, could not be implied from the general power he exercised over the property, in managing it, and procuring insurance and paying taxes, the daughters having themselves executed the mortgage; 2, that the insurance was obtained in pursuance of the requirements of the mortgage, and must be presumed to have covered the interests of all the mortgagors as an entirety; 3, that the mortgagee in fact dealt with the $15,000, not as Scammon's money but as representing a further security furnished under the mortgage, and as something which concerned the rights of all the mortgagors, because the agreement it made with Scammon recognized its obligation either to credit the $15,000 on the mortgage or to see that it went to restore the building; 4, that the provision of the policy, that the loss should be payable to the mortgagee, placed it in the same position towards all the mortgagors as if the policy had been taken out in the names of all, and assigned to the mortgagee, and it was bound to apply the $15,000, in accordance with the provisions of the mortgage, for the benefit of all the mortgagors, unless all consented to a different disposition of the money; 5, that in any view, if the agreement with Scammon was valid as against the daughters, the mortgagee was bound to see that the money was used to restore the building or else credit it on the mortgage.

Under these views, the court referred the case back to the master, with directions to restate the account according to the principles thus laid down. He did so, and, the case being heard on his report, the court, on the second of October, 1882, rendered a decree, which, after setting forth the material facts above stated, contains the following clauses:

"The court further finds that when the complainant originally took the said mortgage, it, by its agent, knew the state of the title of the mortgaged premises; that, in the erection of the building on said premises, and causing it to be insured, and in collecting rents and paying the [644] insurance premiums and taxes, the defendant J. Y. Scammon held the property as if it was his own; that the entire business connected with the loan from the complainant, from the time of its original negotiations down to the time of the before mentioned agreement in relation to the insurance, was transacted by J. Y. Scammon, who kept an account of the property in his bank ledger, in which rents by him received were credited, and the moneys paid out were also entered; that the defendants Florence A. D. Reed and Arianna E. Scammon knew nothing, at the time, of the insurance obtained upon the property, nor anything in relation to the agreement between their father and the complainant made in 1872; that the complainant entered into the agreement for the payment of the insurance money to Scammon, to be by him used in rebuilding, in good faith; and that said Scammon received it in good faith for that purpose, and the officers of the bank where it was deposited understood that the money was deposited there as a special deposit, subject to said agreement.

The court further finds that Florence A. D. Reed and Arianna E. Scammon did not know that this insurance had been effected on the property, or of the payment of premiums thereon, and were never consulted about the disposition of the insurance money, and had no knowledge of and gave no consent to its payment to their father and its deposit in the bank, and have never asserted any rights in relation thereto until the commencement of this suit.

The court further finds that the acts of Florence A. D. Reed and Arianna E. Scammon were limited to the execution of the bond and mortgage and the making of the agreement for partition; that said insurance was furnished under the covenants of the mortgage, and pursuant to the requirements thereof, and was an additional security held by the complainant for the payment of the principal sum and interest secured by said mortgage, and that the covenants in the mortgage for insurance operated [645] as an assignment of the insurance fund, when collected, to the mortgagee; that the acts of the complainant, its receipt of the draft for said insurance money, and its indorsement thereof to the defendant J. Y. Scammon, by ordinary commercial indorsement, and its assumed control over the ultimate destiny and use of the proceeds thereof, were equivalent to a collection of the insurance by the complainant; that the receipt by the complainant of said insurance money operated as a satisfaction pro tanto of said mortgage, so far as the estate and interests of the defendants Florence A. D. Reed and Arianna E. Scammon are involved, but that, so far as the life estate of J. Young Scammon is concerned, said mortgage remains an equitable lien and encumbrance for the full amount thereof."

The decree then goes on to declare that there is due, at its date, from Scammon to the plaintiff, on the bond and mortgage, $20,000 of principal, and $13,093.32 of interest, as reported, and $1,404.44 for interest since the date of the report; and $3,275.42 for moneys paid for taxes and to redeem from tax sales, and $490.73 for interest thereon, as reported, and $287.51 for interest since the date of the report; being, in all, $38,551.42; that that sum is a valid and first lien on the estate of Scammon, for his life, in the north two thirds of the lot (excepting therefrom a strip from off its north side, hereafter mentioned); that, of the $38,551.42, Mrs. Reed and her sister are personally liable for $5,000 of principal, and $3,273.33 interest thereon, as reported, and $351.11 interest on the $5,000 since the date of the report, and for the above named sums of $3,275.42, $490.73, and $287.51, being in all $12,678.10, which is a valid and first lien on the estate in remainder of them and each of them, after the expiration of the life estate of Scammon, in the north two thirds of the lot (excepting therefrom the strip above referred to); and that the $12,678.10 is a valid and first lien on said strip. The decree then provides for the sale at public auction of such estate in remainder, excepting the strip, and of such life estate excepting the strip, and of the strip, each separately; and directs that the proceeds of the life estate be applied first to the satisfaction of the amount for the payment of which the life estate is decreed to be the sole security, and that no portion of the amount realized from the sale of the life estate shall be applied to pay the costs of the suit, or any [646] moneys found due for taxes, or on account of that part of the principal or interest of the bond for which there is other security, until the sum for which the life estate is the sole security shall have been fully paid. From this decree the plaintiff appealed to this court.

The plaintiff assigns for error that the circuit court erred in giving the daughters credit for the $15,000. But we are of opinion that the views of that court in its decision, as above set forth, and as embodied in the decree, were correct.

The policy of insurance was a collateral security for the joint debt of the mortgagors, furnished in compliance with the provisions of the mortgage, and the mortgagee was bound to apply the insurance money to the payment of the joint debt, according to the terms of the mortgage. In the agreement with Scammon, of January 5, 1872, the mortgagee declares that it held the policy "as collateral security for the payment" of the loan secured by the mortgage, and that the $15,000 is subject to be paid to it "in accordance with the conditions" of the mortgage. Although the policy was taken out in the name of Scammon, it was, under the mortgage, a part of the security covenanted for therein; and must be treated as having been furnished by and for the benefit of all the mortgagors. The insurance was on the building as a whole and not on any particular interest in it; and was accepted and treated by the mortgagee as an insurance complying with the terms of the mortgage, and covering all the interests which the mortgage covered.

The mortgagee could not, without the consent of the daughters, surrender the proceeds of the collateral security to Scammon, or divert them from the purpose to which the mortgage devoted them. And, in any event, the mortgagee, if at liberty to use the money toward restoring the building, was bound to see that it was so applied, and took the risk of the diversion. The money not having been so applied, it must be credited in favor of the daughters. Their intention, declared by the mortgage, that the money should be credited on the mortgage, was never varied by them.

Three persons named Andrews, and the wives of two of them, were defendants to the bill. [6 It alleged that they had interests in the mortgaged lot subordinate to the lien of the mortgage. They answered the bill, setting up a prior lien in favor of the three, because they had erected a party wall on and along the north line of the lot, under a party wall agreement made prior to the mortgage, and of which the mortgagee at all times had notice; and alleging that if the mortgage was superior in lien, then the residue of the lot, not covered by the party wall, should be first sold to satisfy the mortgage. Issue was joined on the answer. In the taking of proofs, the plaintiff put in evidence a party wall agreement made June 4, 1866, between Scammon and one Smith, by which it appears that Smith owned lot 4, next north of lot 5, and gave permission to Scammon to build one half of the north wall of a building he was to erect on lot 5, to the northward of the dividing line between the two lots, and that Smith, on paying to Scammon one half of the value of the wall, was to be entitled to use the north half of it as a party wall. On the 25th of February, 1867, Scammon and his daughters and Smith executed a supplemental paper, stating that the contemplated wall had been erected, and agreeing that such wall was to be considered as built on the dividing line between lots 4 and 5, and that the center of such wall was such dividing line. There is not, in the record, any other testimony about any party wall or the strip of land, and none to support the Andrews answer, and there is no mention of the strip in either of the reports of the master. The decree, however, finds that the three Andrews defendants own in fee, subject to the lien of the mortgage, by title derived from Scammon and his two daughters, the strip of land before referred to, describing it as a strip from off the north side of lot 5, 6¾ inches wide in front, and 9¼ inches in the rear, and the depth of the lot. It also excepts that strip in declaring that the mortgage is a first lien on the life estate of Scammon in the north two thirds of the lot, and in declaring that it is a first lien on the estate in remainder of the daughters therein, and declares that the $12,678.10 is a valid and first lien on that strip, and excepts the strip from the estate in remainder, and from the life estate, [6 in describing the premises to be sold, and directs it to be sold by itself, after those estates are sold.

The appellant objects to the adjudication in regard to the strip, on the ground that there is not in the record either pleading or evidence to support it. This is true.

The decree must therefore be reversed in that respect. It is accordingly affirmed, except as to the strip, and reversed as to that, and the case is remanded to the Circuit Court, with a direction to strike out of the decree everything relating to the strip. The costs of the appeal are awarded to the daughters.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

W HALLETT PHILLIPS AND CLAVIUS PHILLIPS, Exrs. of PHILIP PHILLIPS, Deceased, Plffs. in Err.,

v.

JAMES S. NEGLEY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 665-679.)

Supreme Court of District of Columbia—power of, over its judgments—authority of Maryland decisions.

1. The Supreme Court of the District of Columbia has not, at a special term, the same discretionary power over its judgments, rendered at a previous term, without any motion or other proceeding to that end made or taken at that term, to set them aside and grant new trials, which it has over judgments when such proceedings are taken during the term at which they were rendered.
2. After the term at which judgments were rendered the power of the court over the parties and over the record remains only in certain excepted cases, when, on motion, it may be purged of clerical errors, or the judgment reversed by proceedings for errors in fact, in analogy to the practice in cases of writs of error coram vobis, unless it be invoked by bill in equity.
3. The decisions of the Maryland courts founded on general principles, made since the organization of the District of Columbia, are not binding upon the court of the District as authorities.

[No. 199.]

Argued Mar. 25, 26, 1886. Decided Apr. 12, 1886.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

The case is stated by the court.

Messrs. John Selden and W. Hallett Phillips, for plaintiffs in error.

Messrs. Job Barnard and James S. Edwards, for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Matthews delivered the opinion of the court:

The facts material to a determination of the questions arising in this cause are as follows:

Philip Phillips sued the defendant Negley, in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, on August 29, 1874, to recover $4,368, alleged to be due upon a certain order in writing, signed by Simon Witkowski and by the defendant, as attorney for Mrs. Witkowski, addressed to Charles F. Peck and Charles E. Hovey, and by them accepted, payable out of money received by them from the United States, arising from a judgment in the Court of Claims in favor of Witkowski. A copy of the order was attached to the declaration.

Process was served personally on the defendant on the same day.

On October 26, 1874, Negley filed an affidavit of defense, denying his liability, on the ground that the order was signed by him only as the agent and on behalf of Mrs. Witkowski; alleging that the plaintiff was not in fact holder of the same for value; and denying notice of nonpayment, and any indebtedness whatever.

On May 3, 1877, the plaintiff joined issue on these pleas; and on April 3, 1879, the defendant not appearing, a jury was called, who found a verdict for the plaintiff for the sum demanded with interest, and judgment was rendered thereon.

On September 4, 1882, the defendant filed his motion "to vacate the judgment and set aside the verdict entered herein ex parte on the third day of April, 1879, because of irregularity, surprise, fraud and deceit in the procurement of said verdict and judgment, and the negligence of defendant's attorney, the particulars of which appear in the affidavit of the defendant filed herewith and in the record and papers on file in this case." [667]

In support of this motion the affidavits of the defendant Negley and of Richard Harrington were filed. In that of the defendant he denies his personal liability on the order, and says that when served with process in the cause he was temporarily in Washington, being at the time and always since a resident of Pittsburgh; that he employed Harrington as his attorney and filed his affidavit of defense, and received no further notice or information in reference to the suit from the fall of 1874 until about July 26, 1882, when he was served with process in a suit brought on the judgment in Allegheny County, Pennsylvania; that after he filed his affidavit of defense in the original suit, that is, from October 26, 1874, the plaintiff "seemed to have abandoned the case, and thereby to mislead affiant's attorney;" that the plaintiff took no notice of the plea until May 3, 1877, when he joined issue but gave no notice of trial; that in the meantime, without defendant's knowledge, Harrington had removed from the City of Washington, as was well known to the plaintiff and his counsel, leaving the defendant without any attorney; that on April 3, 1879, without any notice to the defendant, the case was called for trial; and in his absence the plaintiff, with knowledge that the defendant was ignorant of the proceedings, called for a jury, and without other proof than the production of the order sued on, procured the verdict and obtained the judgment thereon; and that by reason of the premises the said proceedings and judgment are a fraud upon him.

Harrington states in his affidavit that he understood that the plaintiff had abandoned his suit, and that he believes he so informed his client, the defendant, and that he, Harrington, removed from the District of Columbia in March, 1875, and has not since resided or practiced law therein; and that on such removal he undertook to notify all his clients, but having considered this cause at an end by reason of the plaintiff's failure to join issue or take action on the plea therein, as required by the rules of the court, he did not notify the defendant; and that the plaintiff and his attorney well knew when said cause was set down for trial that the affiant had removed to Dover, Delaware. [668]

Notice of this motion was served upon the plaintiff in the judgment, who appeared and filed counter affidavits of himself and of his attorney, William F. Mattingly. The latter states that he mailed notices of the trial of the issues in the action for the May Term, 1877, in due time, to what he understood to be the postoffice address both of Harrington and of the defendant, and that the cause stood for trial from thence [illegible] a judgment [illegible] upon the merits [illegible] a final judgment, [illegible] writ of error. [illegible] the order in question [illegible] which the court had [illegible] when it was made, [illegible] that no ap- [illegible] to question its [illegible] to make it and it [illegible] the discretion of [illegible] other cases of orders [illegible] at the same term at [illegible] and granting new [illegible] left for the juris- [illegible] to act upon. The [illegible] and granting a new [illegible] acknowledged juris- [illegible] in force to be [illegible] the other hand, the order [illegible] without jurisdiction on the part [illegible] it is a proceeding [illegible] subject of review by an [illegible] The question of the jurisdic- [illegible] the present writ [illegible] necessarily involves the [illegible] Supreme Court of the Dis- [illegible] general term, and the [illegible] the order brought into re- [illegible] of our jurisdiction is [illegible] the question of the valid- [illegible] itself.

[illegible] involved in the judgment [illegible] to maintain it is that [illegible] of this District at special [illegible] discretionary power over its [illegible] a previous term of the [illegible] or other proceeding [illegible] at that term, to set [illegible] new trials of the actions [illegible] rendered, which it has over [illegible] proceedings are taken [illegible] which they were rendered; [illegible] the proceeding and [illegible] in the exercise of this [illegible] discretion, cannot be reviewed [illegible] writ of error.

[illegible] it is argued, may be deduced [illegible] and implied powers of all [illegible] according to the course of the [illegible] and if that fails, is supplied by [illegible] as to the Supreme Court [illegible] of Columbia, adopted by the [illegible] of 27th February, 1801. 2 [illegible]

[illegible] branch of this proposition is con- [illegible] for this court in regard to [illegible] of the courts of the United States [illegible] v. Schulten, 104 U. S. [illegible] L. ed. 797], which is an author- [illegible] upon the point. It was there said [illegible] Miller, speaking for the court: [illegible] all courts have terms and [illegible] The time of the commencement of [illegible] if there be half a dozen a year, is [illegible] by statute, and the end of it by the final [illegible] of the court for that term. This [illegible] case with regard to all the courts of the United States, and if there be exceptions in the state courts they are unimportant. It is a general rule of the law that all the judgments, decrees, or other orders of the courts, however conclusive in their character, are under the control of the court which pronounces them, during the term at which they are rendered or entered of record, and they may then be set aside, vacated, modified or annulled by that court. But it is a rule equally well established that, after the term has ended, all final judgments and decrees of the court pass beyond its control, unless steps be taken during that term, by motion or otherwise, to set aside, modify or correct them; and if errors exist, they can only be corrected by such proceeding, by a writ of error or appeal, as may be allowed in a court which, by law, can review the decision. So strongly has this principle been upheld by this court that, while realizing that there is no court which can review its decisions, it has invariably refused all applications for rehearing made after the adjournment of the court for the term at which the judgment was rendered. And this is placed upon the ground that the case has passed beyond the control of the court."

The opinion then notices an exception to this rule founded upon the common-law writ of error coram vobis, by which errors of fact might be corrected, limited generally to the facts that one of the parties to the judgment had died before it was rendered; or was an infant and no guardian had appeared or been appointed; or was a feme covert, and the like, or error in the process through the fault of the clerk; for which writ, as was said in Pickett's Heirs v. Legerwood, 7 Pet. 144 [32 U. S. bk. 8, L. ed. 638], in practice, a motion is now substituted, heard in a summary manner upon affidavits. And it is then added that this remedy by motion has been extended in some States so as to embrace some of the cases where equitable relief had been administered by courts of chancery. "This practice," it was said, "has been founded in the courts of many of the States on statutes which conferred a prescribed and limited control over the judgment of a court after the expiration of the term at which it was rendered. In other cases the summary remedy by motion has been granted as founded in the inherent power of the court over its own judgments and to avoid the expense and delay of a formal suit in chancery." But it is added: "The question relates to the power of the courts, and not to the mode of procedure. It is whether there exists in the court the authority to set aside, vacate and modify its final judgments after the term at which they were rendered; and this authority can neither be conferred upon nor withheld from the courts of the United States by the statutes of a State or the practice of its courts." Although the opinion also shows that, upon the facts of that case, the action of the circuit court in vacating its judgment after the term could not be justified upon any rule authorizing such relief, whether by motion or by bill in equity, nevertheless the decision of the case rests upon the emphatic denial of the power of the court to set aside a judgment upon motion made after the term and grant a new trial, except in the limited class of cases enumerated as reached by the previous practice under writs of error coram vobis, or for the purpose of correcting the record according to the fact, where mistakes have occurred from the misprision of the clerk. We content ourselves with repeating the doctrine of this recent decision, without recapitulating previous cases in this court, in which the point has been noticed, for the purpose of showing their harmony. It has been the uniform doctrine of this court. "No principle is better settled," it was said in Sibbald v. U. S. 12 Pet. 488, 492 [37 U. S. bk. 9, L. ed. 1167, 1169], "or of more universal application, than that no court can reverse or annul its own final decrees or judgments, for errors of fact or law, after the term in which they have been rendered, unless for clerical mistakes, Cameron v. McRoberts, 3 Wheat. 591 [16 U. S. bk. 4, L. ed. 467]; Bank of Ky. v. Wistar, 3 Pet. 431 [28 U. S. bk. 7, L. ed. 731], or to reinstate a cause dismissed by mistake, The Palmyra, 12 Wheat. 1 [25 U. S. bk. 6, L. ed. 531]; from which it follows that no change or modification can be made which may substantially vary or affect it in any material thing. Bills of review, in cases in equity, and writs of error coram vobis at law, are exceptions which cannot affect the present motion." And see Bank U. S. v. Moss, 6 How. 31, 38 [47 U. S. bk. 12, L. ed. 331, 334]; Schell v. Dodge, 107 U. S. 629 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 601].

It is equally well established by the decisions of this court that the appropriate remedy for relief against judgments at law wrongfully obtained is by a bill in equity, and the cases in which that remedy is applicable have been clearly defined. That rule was formulated by Chief Justice Marshall in a case arising in this district, of Marine Ins. Co. of Alexandria v. Hodgson, 7 Cranch, 332 [11 U. S. bk. 3, L. ed. 362], and more tersely stated by Mr. Justice Curtis in Hendrickson v. Hinckley, 17 How. 443 [58 U. S. bk. 15, L. ed. 123], as follows: "A court of equity does not interfere with judgments at law, unless the complainant has an equitable defense of which he could not avail himself at law, because it did not amount to a legal defense, or had a good defense at law, which he was prevented from availing himself of by fraud or accident, unmixed with negligence of himself or his agents." This rule was supported by Creath v. Sims, 5 How. 192 [46 U. S. bk. 12, L. ed. 111], and Walker v. Robbins, 14 How. 584 [55 U. S. bk. 14, L. ed. 552], and was followed in Crim v. Handley, 94 U. S. 652 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 216]; in Brown v. County of Buena Vista, 95 U. S. 157 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 422], and in Embry v. Palmer, 107 U. S. 3 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 346], where it was considered and applied in a case in which the Supreme Court of Errors of Connecticut, having enjoined proceedings in that State upon a judgment of the Supreme Court of this District for causes not sufficient in law to have authorized the latter to set it aside, the judgment of the Connecticut Court was reversed, although no question was made of the right of that court to entertain the jurisdiction to enjoin proceedings upon the judgment in question, equally with that of the court by which it was rendered. This independent jurisdiction in equity over judgments at law, by implication, negatives the remedy at law in the same courts where they are rendered for the same causes, because that equitable jurisdiction is resorted to only because there was no adequate remedy at law, the jurisdiction of the courts of law over the cause and the parties having been exhausted when the judgment became final.

[675]

But it is argued that the power exercised in the present instance is vested in the Supreme Court of this District by virtue of the laws of Maryland in force February 27, 1801, adopted by the Act of Congress of that date.

The Statute of Maryland supposed to confer [676] this power is an Act of 1787, chap. 9, 2 Kilty, Laws, Thomp. Dig. 173, relating to continuances, the sixth section of which is as follows:

"In any case where a judgment shall be set aside for fraud, deceit, surprise, or irregularity in obtaining the same, the said courts respectively may direct the continuances to be entered from the court where such judgment was obtained until such judgment shall be set aside, and may also continue such cause for so long a time as they shall judge necessary for the trial of the merits between the parties, not exceeding two courts after such cause has been reinstated, unless," etc.

This statutory provision, it will be observed, is entirely silent as to the mode according to which a judgment may be set aside at a subsequent term, whether by a writ of error coram vobis or coram nobis, bill in equity, or other procedure, and does not, either in express terms or by any necessary implication, provide that it may be done by a motion and summary proceedings thereon; and also, that it seems to proceed upon the idea that continuances should regularly be entered to show that the proceeding, if at law, to set a judgment aside, in theory at least, ought to originate at the same term at which the judgment was rendered.

The remedy by writ of error coram nobis continued in force and in use in Maryland. Hawkins v. Bowie, 9 G. & J. 437; Bridendolph v. Zeller's Exrs. 3 Md. 325. And in the first of these cases it was held that a reversal of a judgment upon such a writ was a final judgment from which an appeal would lie. The court said: "Now, if reversing the original judgment and awarding costs to the plaintiff in error, in this proceeding in error coram nobis, was not so far final as to fall within that class of judicial acts from which an appeal will lie to this court, we cannot see the reason, nor can we well conceive of any remedy the parties would have if the county courts were to undertake to vacate and annul all the judgments in their records." This remark equally applies whether the result is reached by this writ or by the more summary mode of a motion. It was so decided in Graff v. Merchants & Miners Trans. Co. 18 Md. 364, and Craig v. Wroth, 47 Md. 281. In the last named case, it was said by the court: [677] "The power to set aside judgments upon motion for fraud, deceit, surprise, or irregularity in obtaing them, is a common-law power incident to courts of record in this State, and was not conferred upon them by the Act of 1789, chap. 9, § 6, which is partially but not fully embodied in section 38, article 75 of the Code. This legislation assumes that the power resides in the courts, and provides for the entering of continuances when it is put in force. In deciding such motions made after the term is past, the court acts in the exercise of its quasi equitable powers and will, therefore, properly consider all the facts and circumstances of the case, and require that the party making the application shall appear to have acted in good faith and with ordinary diligence; relief will not be granted when he has knowingly acquiesced in the judgment complained of, or has been guilty of laches and unreasonable delay in seeking his remedy." This seems to be the settled doctrine of the Maryland Courts, as shown by a series of decisions, all of which, however, have been made since the cession of the present territory within the District of Columbia. Kemp v. Cook, 18 Md. 130; Montgomery v. Murphy, 19 Md. 576. In Kemp v. Cook, the court said: "The power of setting aside judgments upon motion is a common-law power incident to courts of record, and usually exercised under restraints imposed by their own rules and rarely after the term in which the judgment was rendered. * * * The judgment records of the State are the highest evidences of debt known to the law; they are presumed to have been made up after the most careful deliberation, upon trial or hearing of both parties. To permit them to be altered or amended without the most solemn forms of proceeding would be contrary to law and good policy."

It appears also from the case of Kearney v Sascer, 37 Md. 264, that the jurisdiction of the court of chancery, upon a bill in equity, to grant relief against a judgment on equitable grounds, constitutes part of the remedial system in that State, notwithstanding the practice to set aside judgments on motion made after the term; and in that case the court quoted and adopted the rule regulating the measure of relief, and the circumstances justifying the court in granting it, as declared by Chief Justice Marshall in Marine Ins. Co. v. Hodgson, 7 Cranch, 336 [11 U. S. bk. 3, L. ed. 363].

It thus appears that in Maryland, prior to 1801, the only statute in existence referring to the subject, while it assumes the existence of a power in the courts to set aside their judgments after the term in which they were rendered for certain causes, does not specify the modes in which that relief may be administered, and does not enumerate a summary proceeding by motion as one of them; that the cases in which that relief has been administered in that way have all arisen and been decided since the date of the cession to the United States of the territory constituting the District of Columbia; that these decisions are based, not upon the staute as creating or conferring such power, but upon an interpretation of the common law by which all courts of record are assumed to be possessed of it, as inherent in and incident to their constitution as courts of justice; that, in whatever form, the proceedings are regarded not as interlocutory steps in the original cause, but as independent applications to a legal discretion governed by fixed rules, and, therefore, terminating in final judgments, subject as in other cases to review or error in a court of appeal; and that the jurisdiction of chancery by a plenary suit in equity is not excluded, but is maintained and exercised in conformity with the general principles of equity jurisprudence.

It follows from this statement that these decisions of the Maryland courts, being founded upon general principles, and made since the organization of the District of Columbia, are not binding upon the courts of the District as authorities, though entitled to all the respect due to the opinions of the highest court of the State, a rule acted upon in this court in Ould v. Washington Hospital, 95 U. S. 303 [Bk 24, L.

ed. 450], and approved in Russell v. Allen, 107 U. S. 163, 171 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 397, 399]. We feel at liberty, therefore, to follow our own convictions as to the power of the courts of the District over their judgments; and are of opinion, and so decide, that, after the term at which they were rendered, the power of the court over the parties and over its record remains only in the excepted cases already noticed, when, on motion, it may be purged of clerical errors, or the judgment reversed by proceedings for errors in fact, in analogy to the practice in cases of writs of error coram vobis, unless it is invoked by a formal bill in equity upon grounds recognized as furnishing a title to relief.

We are, therefore, of opinion that the Supreme Court of the District, both at special and general term, in entertaining and granting the motion to set aside the judgment in the present case committed error, and the proceedings and judgment thereon are reversed, and the cause remanded, with directions to dismiss the motion of the defendant, but without prejudice to his right to file a bill in equity.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

EDWARD J. CANTRELL AND HENRY B. PETTY, Trading as CANTRELL & PETTY, Appts.,

v.

WASHINGTON WALLICK.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 689-696.)

Patent law—patent for improvement on patented device—identity of mechanical devices—burden of proof.

1. Two patents may both be valid when the invention secured by the second is an improvement on that secured by the first, but if the second includes the first, neither patentee can use the invention of the other without his consent; and a stranger who is an infringer of both cannot set up the first patent as an excuse for infringing the other.

2. Two mechanical devices are identical in the sense of the patent law when they perform substantially the same function in substantially the same way to obtain the same result.

3. Where want of novelty is set up as a defense to a suit for infringement of a patent the burden of proof is upon the defendant and he must establish the defense set up beyond a reasonable doubt.

[No. 201.]

Argued Mar. 30, 31, 1886. Decided Apr. 12, 1886.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania.

The case is stated by the court.

Mr. John Walker Shortlidge, for appellants.

Mr. Charles Howson, for appellee.

Mr. Justice Woods delivered the opinion of the court:

This was a bill in equity filed by Wallick, the appellee to restrain the infringement by Cantrell and Petty, the appellants, of letters patent granted to Wallick, dated May 25, 1875, for an "improvement in apparatus for enameling moldings," on an application filed October 16, 1874.

The specification stated the object of the invention to be "a rapid and economical production of enameled moldings." It appears from the record that the moldings referred to are those which, after being enameled, are gilded and used for picture and mirror frames and other like purposes. In order to prepare the molding to receive and retain the gilding it is necessary to enamel the surface to be gilded with a composition made of glue and whiting. Long before the date of the plaintiff's application the method of doing this was by passing the molding through a vessel containing the enameling material, the vessel having at its opposite sides and in the same line apertures of the shape of a section of the molding and large enough to permit the molding to pass through and leave a proper quantity of the enamel to pass out with and adhere to it. As early as October, 1851, a patent had been granted to Robert Marcher for an improvement in machinery for enameling moldings. In Marcher's contrivance the bottom of the box or hopper which contained the enameling composition was left open. The opposite sides of the box were made with apertures of suitable size and shape for receiving the end of the molding; and when the end of the molding was thrust through both the apertures the molding formed the bottom of the box. The result was that on passing a molding through the box its face was enameled, but its back, which did not come in contact with the composition in the box, was not. [691]

The means used to drive the moldings through the box were not covered by this patent; but this was done sometimes by hand and sometimes by passing them between revolving feed rollers. The latter became the more common method. In order to give a good enamel it was necessary to pass the molding through the box several times.

According to the contention of the plaintiff, this was the state of the art when he invented the device covered by his patent.

The specification of the plaintiff's patent stated that in enameling certain forms of molding, for instance, the moldings shown in figures 2 and 3 of the drawings, feed rollers could not be used for passing the moldings through the Marcher box without disturbing the coats of enamel on which the upper feed roller must bear. It then proceeded thus:

"The main aim of my invention has been to so construct an enameling box and so form the strips of wood that feed rollers may be employed to pass the strips through the reservoir containing the enameling composition.

"For enameled moldings like figures 1 and 2, for instance, I prepare a strip of wood, figure 5, with a groove, x, above for receiving the upper feed roller, and a groove, y, below for receiving the lower feed roller, and then pass the strip through an enameling box of peculiar construction, so that the rounded edges only are coated; and when these edges have received the proper number of coats I sever the strip, so as to produce either of the moldings, figures 1 and 2.

"For making moldings like figure 3 I prepare a strip of the form shown by figure 6, so that upper and lower feed rollers may be used to force the strip through the enameling box. [692]

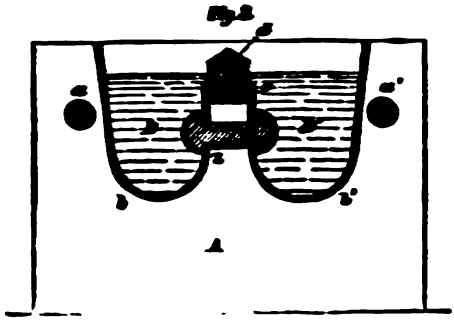
"After the edges of the strip have been

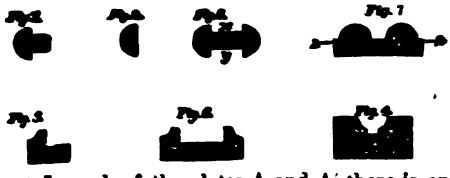
[illegible] enameled I sever it in the middle, thereby producing two moldings, like figure 3.

The box by which the enamel is applied to these strips is illustrated in the vertical section, figure 4, and transverse vertical section, figure 9 of the accompanying drawing, the box being, in the present instance, arranged for enameling the strip, figure 5.

"A and A' are two plates, which are confined by suitable bolts a a, two bent plates b b', forming, under the circumstances explained hereafter, two reservoirs, B B', for containing the fluid or semi-fluid enameling composition. The distance between the turned up portion, e, of one plate, b, and that of the other plate is equal to the width of the groove y of the strip, figure 5. A permanent longitudinal bar, d, extends from the plate

A to the plate A, and to each side of this bar is secured a plate, e, of metal, the distance across the bar and its two plates being equal to the width of the groove x of the strip, figure 5, against the edges of which groove the said plates bear.





"In each of the plates A and A' there is an opening, conforming in shape and dimensions to that of the strip, figure 5, and these openings bear such relations to the turned up edges of the plates b b' and to the bar d that the strip, when introduced into the box, will be in the position shown in figure 9, so that no parts of the strip, excepting the rounded edges, are exposed to the enameling composition. After thus passing the end of the strip of molding through the openings in the plates A A' the composition may be introduced into the reservoirs B B', for all avenues for the escape of the fluids are cut off by the strip itself.

"Feed rollers XX (shown in dotted lines) may be used for forcing strip after strip through the enameling box, the said rollers in no way interfering with the different coatings of enamel, because they are never in contact with the enameled surfaces.

"In other words, the enameling box is separated into two reservoirs, partly by a permanent partition and partly by the strip, which is passed through the box so that the edges only of the strip are exposed to the enameling composition, one edge to the composition in one compartment and the other edge to that in the other compartment."

The claim was as follows:

"An enameling box divided into two compartments by a slotted partition, and having openings at the ends in a line with the slot in the partition, all substantially as and for the purpose set forth."

The defenses relied on were that the specification was too broad, and embraced and appropriated the Marcher box, noninfringement, and prior use by Frederick W. Werner and T. C. Ladd & Co., of Brooklyn.

The first defense is based on the theory that a a patent cannot be valid unless it is new in all its elements as well as in the combination, if it is for a combination. But this theory cannot be maintained. If it were sound no patent for an improvement on a known contrivance or process could be valid. And yet the great majority of patents are for improvements in old and well known devices, or on patented inventions. Changes in the construction of an old machine which increase its usefulness are patentable. Seymour v. Osborne, 11 Wall. 516 [78 U. S. bk. 20, L. ed. 33]. So a new combination of known devices, whereby the effectiveness of a machine is increased, may be the subject of a patent. Loom Co. v. Higgins, 105 U. S. 580 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 1177]; Hailes v. Van Wormer, 20 Wall. 353 [87 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 241]. Two patents may both be valid when the second is an improvement on the first, in which event, if the second includes the first, neither of the two patentees can lawfully use the invention of the other without the other's consent. Star Salt Caster Co. v. Crossman, 4 Cliff. 568.

Therefore, letters patent for an improvement on a patented invention cannot be declared void because they include such patented invention. Much less does it lie in the mouth of a party who is infringing both the improvement and the original invention to set up the existence of the first patent as an excuse for infringing the improvement: It is only the patentee of the original invention who has the right to complain of the use made of his invention. We are, therefore, of opinion that the first defense to the suit must fail.

On the question of infringement, a comparison of the model of the plaintiff's patent with the model of the device shown to be in use by the defendants, makes it clear that the defendants have adopted substantially the invention of the plaintiff. It would baffle the ingenuity of the most skilled expert to show a substantial difference between the invention claimed by the plaintiff and that which it is conceded that the defendants use. It may be true, as contended by the defendants, that the device used by them is in some respects better than that of the plaintiff, but this cannot relieve them from the charge of infringement, if the devices are substantially alike. The rule was well stated by Mr. Justice Clifford, in delivering judgment in the case of Machine Company v. Murphy, 97 U. S. 120 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 935], when he said that "In determining the question of infringement, the court or jury are not to judge about similarities or differences by the names of things; but are to look at the machines or their several devices or elements in the light of what they do or what office or function they perform; and to find that one thing is substantially the same as another if it performs substantially the same function in substantially the same way to obtain the same result, always bearing in mind that devices in a patented machine are different in the sense of the patent law when they perform different functions or in a different way, or produce substantially a different result."

Tested by this rule the charge of infringement made against the defendants is clearly made out.

It remains to inquire whether prior use and want of novelty have been shown. The prior use and consequent want of novelty alleged by the defendant was the making in 1866, and the using from that date until 1871, by Frederick W. Werner, of a box for enameling moldings in which the invention described in the patent of the plaintiff was embodied. Werner testified to this making and use, and to the further fact that, in 1874, he sold the box to Ladd, who some time afterwards began using it.

The burden of proof is upon the defendants to establish this defense. For the grant of letters patent is prima facie evidence that the patentee is the first inventor of the device described in the letters patent and of its novelty. Smith v. Goodyear Dental Vulcanite Co. 93 U. S. 486 [Bk. 23, L. ed. 952]; Lehnbeuter v. Holthaus, 105 U. S. 94 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 939]. Not only is the burden of proof to make good this defense upon the party setting it up, but it has been held that "every reasonable doubt should be resolved against him." Coffin v. Ogden, 18 Wall. 120, 124 [85 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 821, 823]; Washburn v. Gould, 2 Story, 122, 142.

The proof of prior use in this case depends on the testimony of Werner and T. C. Ladd. The contrivance to which the testimony of these witnesses refers is not produced nor any model of it. It is merely represented in a drawing made by Werner six years after he had sold the box to Ladd.

These two witnesses are contradicted by four others who were engaged in the factory where the box was used, and who had frequently seen the box referred to when in use and the moldings enameled by its use. Their testimony shows that the distinctive element in Wallick's contrivance was not used in the box, but that it was substantially the old Marcher box. The defendants have, therefore, failed to show by preponderance of proof, much less beyond reasonable doubt, the prior use on which they rely. On the contrary the weight of the evidence is against this defense.

Decree affirmed.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

HENRY ZEIGLER, Plf. in Err., [683]

v.

THERON R. HOPKINS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 683-689.)

Ejectment—tax sale under California Statute—evidence—motion by third party to dismiss.

1. In an action of ejectment brought to recover the possession of land sold for nonpayment of taxes levied generally to defray the expenses of opening Montgomery Avenue in San Francisco, under the Act of the Legislature of California, of April 1, 1872, the landowner may show that the petition for the opening presented to the Mayor, although acted upon by him, the board of public works and the county court, was not signed by the owners of the requisite amount of frontage.

2. This court refuses to dismiss on motion of a third party based upon a charge that the suit is collusive, and upon affidavits to the effect that the amount involved is less than $5,000, the court below having found as a fact that the premises in question exceed in value the sum of $6,000.

[No. 1240.]

Submitted January 4, 1886. Leave granted A. S. Rosenbaum to file motion to dismiss, January 4, 1886. Motion to dismiss submitted, March 1, 1886. Case and motion decided, April 12, 1886.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of California.

The case is stated by the court.

Messrs. S. Shellabarger, J. M. Wilson, Daniel Rogers and E. F. Preston, for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Philip G. Galpin and Wm. F. Gibson, for defendant in error.

Messrs. D. M. Delmas and A. H. Garland, in support of Rosenbaum's motion to dismiss.

Mr. Chief Justice Waite delivered the opinion of the court: [684]

This was an action of ejectment brought by Henry Zeigler for a lot in the City and County of San Francisco, and his right to recover depends on the validity of a sale of the property for nonpayment of a tax levied and assessed under "an Act to open and establish a public street in the City and County of San Francisco, to be called 'Montgomery Avenue,' and to take private lands therefor," approved April 1, 1872.

[illegible] 911. By that Act a strip of [illegible] described was taken for Mont- [illegible] and the cost and expenses [illegible] taking and opening of said [illegible] be assessed on certain "lots, [illegible] of land," particularly [illegible] to the benefits accru- [illegible] several lots, subdivisions [illegible] respectively, which said [illegible] to be benefited by the [illegible] By section 5 it was [illegible] the owners of a ma- [illegible] the property declared to be [illegible] owners are or shall be named [illegible] annual assessment roll for [illegible] taxes," should "peti- [illegible] city and county in writ- [illegible] of Montgomery Avenue," [illegible] works," to be composed "of [illegible] collector and the city and [illegible] the City and County of San [illegible] to organize by the [illegible] This board was to ascer- [illegible] a written report * * * the [illegible] value of the several [illegible] land included in the [illegible] Montgomery Avenue, and [illegible] will be occasioned [illegible] the line and within the [illegible] The same board was [illegible]

San Francisco was not, in any event whatever, to be liable for the payment of these bonds, and any person purchasing them, or otherwise becoming the owner thereof, was to take them "upon that express stipulation and understanding." It was, however, provided that "There shall be levied, assessed and collected, annually, at the same time and in the same manner as other taxes are levied, assessed, and collected in said city and county, a tax upon the lands" which had been declared to be benefited by the opening of the avenue, "sufficient to pay the interest upon said bonds" as it matured, and also "a tax of 1 per cent upon each $100 valuation, which shall constitute a sinking fund for the redemption of said bonds." The money arising from these taxes was to be paid to the treasurer of the city and county and by him used for the purposes intended. These taxes were to be assessed upon the "values of the respective parcels of land as fixed in the said * * * report of said board."

The case was tried in the court below without a jury, and comes here on a finding of facts, which shows that a petition, regular in form, for the opening of the avenue, was presented to the mayor of the city and county in the month of April, 1872, but which was not in fact subscribed by the owners of a majority in frontage of the land declared to be benefited "as said owners" were "named in the last preceding annual assessment roll for the state, city, and county taxes," although it purported on its face to have been so signed. After the filing of this petition, the persons at that time filling the offices respectively of mayor of the city and county, tax collector and surveyor, annexed thereto their several certificates that the petition had been subscribed by the owners of the requisite amount of frontage. This being done, the board of public works, consisting of the mayor, tax collector and surveyor, organized, opened the avenue and assessed the benefits conferred on the property declared to be benefited, for the purposes of taxation. Their report, after being left at their office for thirty days, and the requisite notice thereof given, was filed with and confirmed by the county court. The lot now in question was among those declared by the law to be benefited, and was assessed by the board for the purposes of taxation. A tax levied for the year 1878–9 upon this assessed value, to meet the annual obligations under the law, was not paid by the owner, and for this default the sale was made under which Zeigler now claims title. Upon these facts the court below gave judgment against him, and to reverse that judgment this writ of error was brought.

There is in reality but a single question presented for our consideration in this case, and that is whether, in an action of ejectment brought to recover the possession of lands sold for the non-payment of taxes levied to defray the expenses of opening Montgomery Avenue generally, and not in obedience to an order of a court of competent jurisdiction to meet some particular liability which had been judicially established, the [illegible] owner is estopped from showing, by [illegible] that the petition for the opening presented to the mayor was not signed by the owners of the requisite amount of frontage; and this depends on whether the owner is con- [illegible] by the acceptance of the petition by the mayor and his certificate as to its sufficiency and the action of the board of public works thereunder; or 2, by the judgment of the county court confirming the report of the board of public works.

This precise question was most elaborately considered by the Supreme Court of California in Mulligan v. Smith, 59 Cal. 206, and decided in the negative, after full argument. With this conclusion we are entirely satisfied. It is supported by both reason and authority. The opinions of Justices M'Kee, Sharpstein and Ross, which are found in the report of the case, leave nothing further to be said on the subject. "A petition from the owners of a majority in frontage of the property to be charged with the cost of the improvement was necessary to set the machinery of the statute in motion," and "no step could be taken under the provisions of the statute until the requisite petition had been presented." Neither the mayor nor the county court was "authorized to enter into any investigation of the frontage as represented by the petition, or to adjudicate its sufficiency, or to make any record in reference to it." "The only powers which the county court, as a court of limited jurisdiction, was authorized to exercise," were such as related to the matters contained in the report of the board of public works, and this did not include the petition.

The case has been argued here as though it was between the taxpayers and bona fide holders of negotiable securities issued by them or for their account, but nothing of that kind is presented by the record. It does not appear affirmatively that a bond was ever issued. But if we are to presume from the finding that after the presentation of the petition the "mayor, tax collector, and surveyor proceeded to perform the duties imposed upon the board of public works," bonds of some kind were put out, it does not appear either that they were in such a form as to make them valid in the hands of bona fide holders if they were in fact issued without authority, or that there are any such holders. No other questions are now to be considered than such as would arise if it appeared affirmatively on the face of the record that the tax was levied simply to raise the means to pay the members of the board their own salaries as specially provided for in the Act. All we are now called on to decide is whether the presentation to the mayor of a petition, signed by the owners of less than a majority in frontage of the property to be assessed, as they were named in the last preceding annual assessment-roll, was sufficient to authorize the levy of the tax for which the lots in controversy were sold, and we have no hesitation in saying it was not. It will be time enough to consider the rights of bona fide holders of "Montgomery Avenue bonds," if there be any, when a case arises which involves such questions.

It remains only to dispose of a motion which has been made by or on behalf of Albert S. Rosenbaum, who claims to be a holder of Montgomery Avenue bonds, to dismiss the case; 1, because the value of the matter in dispute does not exceed $5,000; and 2, because the suit is colorable only, and got up by collusion so as to preclude a decision favorable to the holders of Montgomery Avenue bonds. Without deciding how far it is allowable for persons not parties to a suit to intervene with a motion of this kind, it is sufficient to say that we see no evidence of any improper collusion in this case. We are entirely satisfied that the suit was instituted in good faith by real parties for the determination of a substantial right, and that it fairly presents the questions involved. The court below found as a fact that the value of the premises in dispute exceeds $6,000, and this appears on the face of the record. While the affidavits as to value presented by Rosenbaum, taken by themselves, show that possibly the property may be worth less than $5,000, they are not enough to overcome the finding of the court below that it was actually worth more than that sum. Affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY, ROBERT GIVEN ET AL., Prosecutors, Plffs. in Err., [648]
v.
HENRY WRIGHT, Collector of Taxes.

(See S. C. "Given v. Wright," Reporter's ed. 648-657.)

Exemption from taxation—loss of franchise by acquiescence in assessment of taxes—jurisdiction of supreme court.

1. Exemption from taxation being a special privilege granted by the government to an individual, either in gross or as appurtenant to his freehold, is a franchise; and acquiescence by the land owner, for a long period of time (in this case sixty years), under the imposition of taxes, raises a presumption that such franchise has been surrendered.
2. Where it is charged that the obligation of a contract has been impaired by a state law, and the state courts justify such impairment, by the application of some general rule of law to the facts of the case, this court has jurisdiction to review that decision.

[No. 143.]

Argued Mar. 5, 1886. Decided Apr. 12, 1886.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of New Jersey.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Mr. P. L. Voorhees, for plaintiffs in error:

The Act of the Legislature of August 12, 1758 (2 Neville, Laws N. J. p. 212; Patterson, Laws N. J. p. 220), was a contract made by the State with the Indians, that the land purchased for the Indians should be free from taxation.

A covenant made at the time of the conveyance of the land, relating to the land, runs with the land and inures to the benefit of any subsequent purchasers.

Brewer v. Marshall, 18 N. J. Eq. 337; State v. Com. R. R. Taxation, 37 N. J. L. 251; 4 Kent, Com. 472; New Jersey v. Wilson, 7 Cranch, 164 (11 U. S. bk. 3, L. ed. 303).

A statute cannot be repealed by nonuser. Nothing short of a statute can repeal a statute.

Sedg. Stat. & Const. 127, ed. 1857; Smith, Stat. & Const. 908, par. 790; Potter's Dwarr. Stat. pp. 122, 153, 154; 1 Kent, Com. (467) 527, 10th ed.; White v. Boot, 2 T. R. 275; Leigh v. Kent, 3 T. R. 362; The India, Browning & Lush. 221; 4 Fisher's Dig. 8223; 6 Mew's Fisher, Dig. 2038.

The cases referred to in the opinion of the Supreme Court of New Jersey in deciding this case will be found to depend upon the proof of title by custom or usage ripening into prescriptive rights under the laws of England; and in all the cases where it was shown that such rights existed, or a grant had been made before the time of legal memory, the limitation under the laws of England, the grants were sustained and enforced. Such cases can be of but little authority in this country, where there are no such prescriptive rights. This country was not discovered or settled until after the time "whereof the memory of man runneth not to the contrary," the limitation of prescriptive rights in England.

In New Jersey it has been decided by its supreme court that there can be no title by prescription.

Ackerman v. Shelp, 7 N. J. L. 125.

The effect of such citations is stated in 1 Dillon, Mun. Corp. 324; Cooley, Const. Lim. p. 197; Com. v. Stodder, 2 Cush. 565.

Messrs. John P. Stockton, Atty-Gen. of New Jersey, and Charles E. Hendrickson, for defendant in error:

There can be no intendment to enlarge the operation of a claim restraining the exercise of a sovereign attribute of a State.

Prov. Bank v. Billings, 4 Pet. 561 (29 U. S. bk. 7, L. ed. 955); Del. R. R. Tax, 18 Wall. 206 (Bk. 21, L. ed. 888); Morgan v. La. 93 U. S. 222 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 860); Ches. & Ohio R. Co. v. Miller, 114 U. S. 176 (Bk. 29, L. ed. 121).

If the holders took from the Indians, they had no title, because the Indians had no power of alienation. If they did not take from the Indians, they took no title but that which remained in the trustees for the purpose of sale, and not for the Indians and their successors forever; and such title did not convey the exemption.

Laws 1801, p. 132.

The trust estate held for the Indians had terminated at the request of the Indians. The property reverted to the State during five years when it was held by trustees to sell for the cestui que trust. And as such, in the hands of the trustees, no such condition was attached to the power of alienation.

If the exemption remained, the prohibition of alienation must also have remained, and the title is therefore bad.

With the discovery of the Act in question (that of 1796), it became impossible for the owners to set up the exemption without clouding their title to the land; which is manifestly the reason why the exemption was surrendered.

If lapse of time makes their title good, it must also raise the presumption of a release from the exemption.

The continuous payment of taxes for sixty-six years raises the presumption of a release, waiver or acquiescence It is an estoppel in pais.

Bigelow, Estop. 477, 528; Welland Canal Co. v. Hathaway, 8 Wend. 480; Cooley, Tax. p. 578.

In order that the assignee may sue on a covenant running with the land he must be in, of the same estate in the land which the party had, with whom the covenant was made.

Bingham and Colvin, Rents, Covenants and Cond. p. 222; Spencer's Case, 1 Smith, L. Cas. 22.

It requires express words to make a covenant which is collateral run with the land.

The law will not annex the covenant to a thing which has no being.

Conover v. Smith, 17 N. J. Eq. 51.

It is a personal covenant. No privity between the State and the grantee of the trust.

Spencer's Case, 5 Coke, 39; 1 Smith, L. Cas 22; 6 Cow. 302; 8 Cow. 266; 4 N. Y. 132.

Mr. Justice Bradley delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a writ of error directed to the Supreme Court of New Jersey, to review a judgment rendered by the Court of Errors and Appeals of that State, affirming a judgment of the supreme court, and remitted thereto. The case arose upon a certiorari issued in the name of the State, on the relation of certain taxpayers of the Township of Shamong, in the County of Burlington, directed to Henry Wright, Collector of said township, for the purpose of examining the legality of a certain assessment of taxes, for the year 1876. The taxes complained of were laid upon lands of the prosecutors lying within the bounds of a tract known as the Indian Reservation. According to the New Jersey practice, reasons were filed for setting aside the assessment, and evidence was taken before a commissioner of the court. The reasons assigned were:

1. That the lands were not liable to be assessed for taxes under the Constitution and laws of New Jersey.

2. That, by virtue of a contract with the State of New Jersey, contained in the Act of the Legislature, entitled "An Act to Empower Certain Persons to Purchase the Claims of the Indians to Land in This Colony," the lands are expressly exempted from taxation.

The lands on which the assessment was laid are the same lands which were held to be exempt from taxation by this court in the case of N. J. v. Wilson, reported in 7 Cranch, 164 [11 U. S. bk. 3, L. ed. 303], where a succinct history of the transactions out of which the claimed exemption grew is given. That decision was made in February Term, 1812. Since that time, for about sixty years before the assessment in question was laid, taxes have been regularly assessed on the lands, and paid without objection. The Supreme Court of New Jersey sustained the assessment, holding that the uninterrupted acquiescence in the imposition of taxes for so long a time raises a conclusive presumption that, by some convention with the State, the right to exemption was surrendered. The court of errors and appeals affirmed this decision, and the case is now brought here for review, on the allegation of the plaintiffs in error that the obligation of the contract of exemption has been impaired by the laws of New Jersey under which the tax was imposed.

The alleged contract is contained in a law of the New Jersey Colonial Legislature passed August 12, 1758. There remained at that time within the Colony a remnant of the Delaware Indians, who claimed certain lands in different parts of the Colony, which they alleged had never been sold by them. In consequence of a convention had with them, the Legislature passed the law in question, entitled "An Act to Empower Certain Persons to Purchase the Claims of the Indians to Land in This Colony."

The Act appointed five commissioners, with authority to lay out any sum, not exceeding £1,600 proclamation money, to purchase the right and claims of the Indians. The second section of the Act was as follows:

"And whereas, The Indians south of Raritan River have represented their inclination to have part of the sum allowed them laid out in land whereon they may settle and raise their necessary subsistence; in order that they may be gratified in that particular, and that they may have always in their view a lasting monument of the justice and tenderness of this Colony toward them; Be it enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the commissioners aforesaid, or any three of them, with the approbation and consent of His Excellency, the Governor, or the Governor or Commander-in-Chief for the time being, shall purchase some convenient tract or tracts of land for their settlement, and shall take a deed or deeds in the name of His said Excellency or Commander-in-Chief of this Colony for the time being, and of the commissioners, and their heirs, in trust for the use of the said Indian natives, who have or do reside in this Colony, south of Raritan, and their successors, forever; Provided, nevertheless, That it shall not be in the power of the said Indians or their successors or any of them, to lease or sell to any person or persons, any part thereof. And if any person or persons, Indians excepted, shall attempt to settle on the said tract or tracts, it shall and may be lawful for any justice of the peace to issue his warrant to remove any such person or persons from such land. And if any person or persons, Indians excepted, shall fall, cut up, or cart off, any cedar, pine, or oak trees, such person or persons shall forfeit and pay, for each tree so fell, cut up, or carted off, the sum of forty shillings," etc.

The seventh section was as follows:

"7. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the lands to be purchased for the Indians, as aforesaid, shall not hereafter be subject to any tax, any law, usage, or custom to the contrary thereof in any wise notwithstanding."

In pursuance of this law a tract of about 3,000 acres of land, situate in the Township of Evesham, in Burlington County (now in the Township of Shamong aforesaid), was purchased by the commissioners for the sum of £740, and conveyed to "His said Excellency, Francis Bernard, Esquire, Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the Province of New Jersey, and to them the said Andrew Johnston, Richard Salter, Charles Read, John Stevins, William Foster and Jacob Spicer, Esquires, and their heirs forever; in trust, nevertheless, that they shall permit such Indian natives as have resided or do reside in this Colony south of Raritan, and their successors forever, to cultivate and inhabit the same to and for such uses as are declared in an Act of General Assembly of the Colony of New Jersey, entitled 'An Act to Empower Certain Persons to Purchase the Claims of the Indians to Lands in This Colony.'"

The tract purchased included a cedar swamp and sawmill, and was surrounded by wild lands which furnished good hunting ground, and they were sufficiently near the coast for fishing.

The Indian beneficiaries of this trust, who were but a small band (about sixty in all, as stated by the historian Smith), removed to the settlement purchased (which received the name of Brotherton), and remained there until the latter part of the century, when they desired a change in the mode of managing their lands. The old commissioners having died, they desired new ones appointed to take charge of the lands and mill, and to let or lease the same for their use and benefit.

Accordingly, on their petition, an Act was passed on the 17th of March, 1796, which appointed three commissioners to take charge of the lands "and lease out the same, from time to time, on such terms and in such manner as should most conduce to the advantage of said Indians." The commissioners were directed to apply the moneys arising from the lands unto the Indians, or the value thereof in necessaries, such as provisions and clothing, or to such of them as should stand most in need. They were to account annually to the Court of Common Pleas of Burlington County, which court was invested with power to remove them for misconduct, and in case of a vacancy to appoint new commissioners. It was expressly provided, however, that nothing in the Act should prevent the Indians from residing on the lands, or cutting wood or timber for their own use.

It was not long after this before the Indians desired to have their lands sold, and to join their brethren at New Stockbridge in the State of New York. The Legislature complied with their wishes, and on the third of December, 1801, passed an Act appointing commissioners [652] to sell the lands, and to appropriate the money thence arising for the benefit of the Indians. The Act directed the tract to be divided up into lots not exceeding a hundred acres in each, and to give notice of the time and place of sale; all of which was done. The lands were sold and deeds of conveyance in fee simple were given to the purchasers; but neither in the law nor in the deeds was anything said about exemption from taxes.

After the sale the assessors of the township in which the lands lay proceeded to assess the same for taxes, but on a certiorari from the Supreme Court of New Jersey, the assessment was set aside in September, 1804. On the first of December, 1804, the Legislature repealed the seventh section of the Act of 1758, which contained the exemption from taxes. Another assessment was then made, and the matter was brought before the supreme court a second time in the case of N. J. v. Wilson, reported in 1 Pennington, 300. The assessment was now sustained. Judges Rossell and Pennington delivered quite elaborate opinions, arguing that, by the Act of 1758, and the purchase under the same, the lands were intended as a permanent possession of the Indians as a home, protected against their natural improvidence by being made inalienable by sale or lease, or by the imposition of taxes; that the exemption from taxes was one of the incidents of the Indian tenure, and had no congruity with absolute ownership of citizens; and that when, at the request of the Indians, the land was sold to other parties in fee simple absolute, the abnormal qualities of the Indian tenure were extinguished, and all the conditions which rendered exemption from taxes requisite and proper ceased to exist. Judge Pennington added that the fee was not in the Indians; that the purchasers could not claim title from or under them; that the commissioners were not authorized to sell the interests or rights of the Indians, but to sell the land, the fee of which was in trustees who were agents of the State; and that the State in selling the land was under no obligation to continue the exemption from taxes, and did not do so. On writ of error from this court, however, this judgment was reversed, the Act of 1758 was [653] held to be a contract, and the Act of 1804, repealing the exemption, was held to impair the obligation of that contract, and was, therefore, void. N. J. v. Wilson, 7 Cranch, 164. [11 U. S. bk. 3, L. ed. 308]. It appears from the record of that case, preserved in our files, that the Act of 1796, authorizing the lands to be leased out, was not brought to the attention of this court. Whether, [655] if it had been, it would have affected the judgment of this court is uncertain. It probably would not have done so; and we must assume it to be res judicata, that in 1805 (when the case of N. J. v. Wilson arose) the lands remained exempt from taxation in the hands of the purchasers.

We do not feel disposed to question the decision in N. J. v. Wilson. It has been referred to and relied on in so many cases from the day of its rendition down to the present time, that it would cause a shock to our constitutional jurisprudence to disturb it now. If the question were a new one we might regard the reasoning of the New Jersey judges as entitled to a great deal of weight, especially since the emphatic declarations made by this court in Providence Bank v. Billings, and other cases, as to the necessity of having the clearest legislative expression in order to impair the taxing power of the State. See the cases collected in Vicksburg R. R. Co. v. Dennis [ante, 770].

The question, then, will be whether the long acquiescence of the land owners, under the imposition of taxes, raises a presumption that the exemption which once existed has been surrendered.

This question, by itself, would be a mere [656] question of state municipal law, and would not involve any appeal to the Constitution or laws of the United States. But where it is charged that the obligation of a contract has been impaired by a state law, as in this case by the general tax law of New Jersey as administered by the state authorities, and the state courts justify such impairment by the application of some general rule of law to the facts of the case, it is our duty to inquire whether the justification is well grounded. If it is not, the the party is entitled to the benefit of the constitutional protection. Murdock v. Memphis, 20 Wall. 590, 636, prop. 6 [87 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 429, 444].

We have carefully read the evidence in this case, and are satisfied that the lands were regularly assessed for taxes, and that the taxes were paid without objection from 1814, or about that time, down to 1876, the time of the assessment complained of, a period of sixty years. If an exemption from taxation can be lost in any case by long acquiescence under the imposition of taxes, it would seem that an acquiescence of sixty years, and indeed a much shorter period, would be amply sufficient for this purpose, by raising a conclusive presumption of a surrender of the privilege. An easement may be lost by nonuser in twenty years, and even in a less time, if it is affected by positive acts of invasion. A franchise may be lost in the same way, nonuser being one of the common grounds assigned as a cause of forfeiture. 3 Bl. Com. 262. Exemption from taxation being a special privilege granted by the government to an individual, either in gross, or as appurtenant to his freehold, is a franchise. Nonuser for sixty, or even thirty years, may well be regarded as presumptive proof of its abandonment or surrender. The present case is a strong one. The nonuser consists of acquiescence in actual taxation, or an actual invasion of the franchise, year by year, for a period of years reaching almost beyond the memory of man. It is not merely a case of nonuser, but one of disaffirmance of the privilege for this long period.

If the franchise were one which affected adversely the rights of other individuals, they might not be able to question its validity in a collateral proceeding. But it is set up against the government itself, while exercising one of its most important prerogatives. We see no reason why, in such a case, the government may not claim the benefit of lapse of time as a ground of presumption of the surrender of the franchise, though the same period of nonuser would be a ground of forfeiture in a direct proceeding on the part of the State to revoke the franchise. We think the reasoning of the Supreme Court of New Jersey in this case is entirely satisfactory.

The judgment is affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

JOSEPH JACKSON ET AL., Appts.,
v.
FREDERICK H. LAWRENCE ET AL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 679-683.)

Deed absolute in terms—parol contract accompanying—rights of purchasers under power of sale.

Where a debtor executed a deed, absolute in terms, to his creditor (with the verbal agreement that it was to secure a note and that if the note was not paid when due the creditor should be authorized to sell the land), a bona fide purchaser of the land on sale by the creditor after default, who paid just the amount of the debt, takes it free from all rights of creditors of the first grantors who levied an attachment prior to the sale. Such attaching creditors have no right of redemption.

[No. 205.]

Submitted April 1, 1886. Decided April 12, 1886.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States, for the Western District of Missouri.

The case is stated by the court.

Messrs. T. J. Johnston, H. M. Jackson, and A. S. Everest, for appellants:

The relation between Lancaster and Wells created by the deed executed September 15, 1875, by Lancaster to said Wells, conveying the real estate involved, was that of mortgagor and mortgagee.

O'Neill v. Capelle, 62 Mo. 202; Brant v. Robertson, 16 Mo. 129; Wilson v. Drumrite, 21 Mo. 325; Worley v. Dryden, 57 Mo. 226; Miller v. Thomas, 14 Ill. 428; Russell v. Southard, 12 How. 139 (53 U. S. bk. 13, L. ed. 927); Babcock v. Wyman, 19 How. 289 (60 U. S. bk. 15, L. ed. 647); Villa v. Rodriguez, 12 Wall. 323 (79 U. S. bk. 20, L. ed. 406); Peugh v. Davis, 96 U. S. 332 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 775); Pierce v. Robinson, 13 Cal. 116.

The deed from Lancaster to Wells being a mortgage, it was subject to all the incidents and attributes of a mortgage, just as much so as if the defeasance had been written in it; and no contemporaneous, or other or subsequent agreement would change its character as such, unless such agreement had been reduced to or proved by some writing signed by Lancaster, or some one thereunto by him lawfully authorized, and such agreement be based upon and supported by a sufficient consideration. If not in writing such agreement would be invalid, under the Statute of Frauds, and without a consideration to support it, a nudum pactum.

Wilson v. Drumrite, 21 Mo. 325; Henry v. Davis, 7 Johns. Ch. 40; Peugh v. Davis, supra; Batty v. Snook, 5 Mich. 231; 1 Hill. Mort. 3d ed. pp. 67, 78; Jones, Mort. § 7, 340; Youle v. Richards, 1 N. J. Eq. 534; Richard v. Eaton, 38 Conn. 434; 3 Wheat. 449 (16 U. S. bk. 4, L. ed. 432); Oliver v. Piatt, 3 How. 333 (44 U. S. bk. 11, L. ed. 623).

Mr. B. F. Lucas, for appellees.

Mr. Justice Woods delivered the opinion of the court:

The appellants filed a bill in the circuit court. The following facts are shown by the record: one Alvin N. Lancaster being the owner in fee simple of certain lands in Worth, Nodaway and Atchison Counties, in the State of Missouri, conveyed them on September 15, 1875, to Edward L. Wells, by deed absolute on its face. At the time the deed was executed Lancaster made and delivered to Wells his promissory note for $1,300, payable in ninety days. There was at the time a verbal understanding between them that the deed was made as security for the payment of the note and that if the note was not paid at maturity Wells should have the right to sell the land to whom he pleased. The note was not paid at maturity. Wells pressed Lancaster for payment, and on his failure to pay, about January 5, 1876, contracted to sell the lands to George C. Tallman, and executed to him a quitclaim deed of that date therefor, which, however, was not delivered until January 20, 1876.

On January 15, 1876, the plaintiffs in this suit began, by attachment, in the Circuit Court of Worth County, Missouri, an action against Lancaster, in which the lands in controversy were seized; and on October 24, 1876, they recovered judgment against him for $895. On February 21, 1878, executions were issued on the judgment to the sheriffs of the counties where the lands lay, and the lands were sold by virtue thereof, and purchased by the plaintiffs, to whom deeds therefor were made. George C. Tallman, the vendee of Wells, died on May 5, 1880, and the defendants in the present suit were his devisees of the lands above mentioned. Afterwards, on January 31, 1882, the plaintiffs filed the bill in this case, in which they alleged that the deed of Lancaster to Wells was in effect a mortgage executed to secure the note made by the former to the latter. They tendered to the defendants the amount due on the note, with all the taxes paid by the latter on the lands, and prayed for a decree permitting them, as [681] purchasers of Lancaster's equity of redemption, to redeem the lands, and for general relief.

The defendants answered that at the time George C. Tallman purchased the lands, and at the time of the delivery of said deed, which they averred to be on January 5, 1876, he had no notice of any claim of the plaintiffs against Lancaster, or that the title of Wells to the lands in controversy was other or different from the absolute title which the deed from Lancaster to him purported to convey, and that Tallman intended to purchase, and did purchase, the absolute title thereto, for which he paid a full and valuable consideration.

On final hearing the circuit court dismissed the bill, and the plaintiffs appealed.

There is no conflict in the testimony, or disagreement between the parties touching the terms on which Lancaster conveyed the lands in controversy to Wells. Lancaster, Wells and one Jordan, who acted as agent for Wells in the transaction, all give the same account. The deed was executed to secure the payment of the note made by Lancaster to Wells for $1,300, due in ninety days, with the distinct agreement that if the note was not paid when due, Wells should be authorized to sell the land. No other account is given of this transaction by any witnesses.

The deed from Lancaster to Wells was, therefore, in effect a mortgage, for it is settled that an absolute deed intended by the parties as a security for a debt is in equity a mortgage. Hughes v. Edwards, 9 Wheat. 489 [22 U. S. bk. 6, L. ed. 142]; Sprigg v. Bank of Mount Pleasant, 14 Pet. 201 [39 U. S. bk. 10, L. ed. 419]; Morris v. Nixon, 1 How. 118 [42 U. S. bk. 11, L. ed. 69]; Peugh v. Davis, 96 U. S. 332 [Bk. 24. L. ed. 775]; Teal v. Walker, 111 U. S. 242 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 415]; Brant v. Robertson, 16 Mo. 129; Worley v. Dryden, 57 Mo. 226; O'Neill v. Capelle, 62 Mo. 202. It is also settled that evidence written or oral may be admitted to show the real character of the transaction. Russell v. Southard, 12 How. 139 [53 U. S. bk. 13, L. ed. 927]; Babcock v. Wyman, 19 How. 289 [60 U. S. bk. 15, L. ed. 644]; Peugh v. Davis, ubi supra; Brick v. Brick, 98 U. S. 514 [Bk. 25, L. ed. 256].

There being no dispute, therefore, in relation to the terms of the agreement between Lancaster and Wells, on which the deed of the former [682] to the latter was executed and delivered, it is to be read in equity precisely as if the agreement were set out therein, and is to be considered a mortgage to secure the payment of the note made by Lancaster to Wells according to its tenor, with power to Wells in default of payment to sell the mortgaged premises.

This condition must be taken as a whole; no part of it can be rejected. The authority to Wells to sell the premises, in default of payment of the note, was just as much an element in the condition as the right of Lancaster to a reconveyance upon payment of the note. The right of Wells to sell the premises in default of payment was a right of property which he had bought and paid for, which could not be impaired by an attachment levied on the property by Lancaster's creditors. Their attachment was as much subject to the right of Wells to sell in default of payment of the note as it would have been to his right to foreclose a mortgage made in the usual form. After the attachment was levied Wells exercised the right to sell. He sold, as the record abundantly shows, with the knowledge and concurrence of Lancaster. The property brought enough to pay the debt, and no more. It is not disputed that the sale was fair and bona fide. It therefore cut up by the roots all title of Lancaster, and all claim of the plaintiffs acquired by their attachment upon the lands in question, and left neither in them nor Lancaster any right to redeem. The vendee of Wells stands upon the same ground as if he had bought the premises at a foreclosure sale; and his title is indefeasible.

This conclusion does not depend upon the fact whether or not Tallman purchased with or without notice of the verbal condition under which the deed from Lancaster to Wells was executed. The rights of Lancaster and those claiming under him are not strengthened by the fact that the condition was a verbal one. They are in no better position than if the condition had been incorporated in the deed and put upon the public records, thereby giving constructive notice to all the world. In the latter case it is clear that Wells, having power to sell, could sell to whomsoever he chose. Therefore, [683] whether the vendee had notice of the condition would be immaterial. But the proof in the record that Tallman had no knowledge or notice of the condition, and that when he bought he supposed the deed was what it purported to be, an absolute conveyance, is clear and positive.

The case, therefore, in all its elements, falls within the rule laid down by the Supreme Court of Missouri in Wilson v. Drumrite, 21 Mo. 325. In that case a deed absolute on its face was executed by Wilson to Drumrite, but was in fact given as a security for a debt. There was a verbal agreement between Wilson and Drumrite that the latter should reconvey if the debt was paid when due; in case of default Drumrite was authorized to sell the land to enforce payment of his debt. Wilson failed to pay the debt when due, and Drumrite sold part of the land to a purchaser without notice. The court, laying stress upon the fact that the vendee had no notice of the condition, held that the sale was valid, but that Drumrite must account to Wilson for the land sold, and must reconvey the residue.

In the present case, even under the rule laid down by the Supreme Court of Missouri, there is no right of redemption.

Upon the whole record, therefore, the decree of the Circuit Court dismissing the bill was right.

Decree affirmed.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

COUNTY OF DAVIESS, Plf. in Err., v. J. M. DICKINSON,

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 657-665.)

Municipal bonds—excessive issue by county court—Statute of Kentucky—estoppel—payment of interest, whether a ratification.

1. Under the Act of the Legislature of Kentucky, of February 27, 1867, the County Court of the County of Daviess acquired no authority to issue bonds for stock of the Owensboro and Russellville Railroad Company for a greater amount than $250,000; and all bonds issued in excess of that amount are invalid, even in the hands of a purchaser for value, before maturity, and without notice of the excessive issue.

2. The County is not estopped to deny the validity of a particular bond by a certificate on the back thereof by the county judge, to the effect that it was duly authorized.

3. The payment of interest on all of the bonds does not amount to a ratification of those issued beyond the lawful limit.

4. It seems that the bonds first delivered, up to the amount authorized, without regard to classification, are valid.

[No. 186.]

Argued March 22, 1886. Decided April 12, 1886.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Kentucky.

Statement by Mr. Justice Gray:

This was an action brought April 8, 1879, in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Kentucky, by Dickinson against the County of Daviess, on bonds and coupons alleged to have been issued under the Statute of Kentucky of February 27, 1867, chap. 1505, incorporating the Owensboro and Russellville Railroad Company, the material provisions of which were as follows:

By section 1 five persons named in Daviess County, and certain other persons named in each of four other counties, are "appointed commissioners, under the direction of whom, or any three of whom, in each of said counties, subscription may be received to the capital stock of the Owensboro and Russellville Railroad Company hereby incorporated."

By section 2, "The capital stock of said Owensboro and Russellville Railroad Company shall be $1,000,000, in shares of $25 each."

By section 19, "The county courts of Daviess," and those four other counties, "shall have power and are hereby authorized to subscribe to the capital stock of said company in such number of shares as may be determined by said county courts respectively, and to levy upon the taxpayers of such counties, respectively, such NOTE.—Municipal bonds; recitals; estoppel. See Mercer Co. v. Hackett, 68 U. S., bk. 17, 548, note.

Overissue of bonds.

"In a suit brought by a bona fide holder for value, to recover the amount of certain coupons of township bonds, it cannot be shown, as a defense to a recovery, that, at the time of voting and issuing the series of bonds, the value of the taxable property of the township was not in amount sufficient to authorise the voting and issuing of the whole series, according to the State Act which authorised their issue, where there is a recital in the bonds that the requirements of such Act have been complied with." Head note to Marcy v. Oswego, 92 U. S., bk. 23, 748. See also Humboldt v. Long, 92 U. S., bk. 23, 752, and dissenting opinion, p. 764. See Burroughs, Pub. Securities, p. 230 et seq., for discussion of this general subject.

taxes as may be necessary to pay the stock so by them respectively subscribed; and said county courts may if they shall deem it prudent, issue the bonds of said counties respectively for the amount of stock subscribed, or any part thereof; said bonds to be in such sums, and payable at such times, as said county courts may determine upon. But before such stock shall be subscribed by said county courts, the said county courts shall submit to the voters of said counties the proposition to subscribe stock and the amount thereof (to be suggested and fixed by the commissioners named herein in each of said counties), at an election to be held on the third Monday in April, 1867, in each of the counties aforesaid, due notice of which shall be given by the sheriffs in each of said counties, by written advertisements posted in each of the voting precincts thereof for at least thirty days before said day of election; and said stock shall not be subscribed unless a majority of all the votes cast at such election be in favor of such proposition; and said county courts shall have power to appoint suitable and necessary officers to conduct such election, and to provide for the collection of the tax aforesaid, if a majority of the votes cast at such election is in favor of the proposition aforesaid."

At the trial the following facts were admitted:

At March Term, 1867, of the Daviess County Court, upon the suggestion of the five commissioners named in the charter of the railroad company, that court ordered to be submitted to the voters of the County, on the third Monday in April, 1867, this proposition: "Shall or shall not the County Court of Daviess County subscribe ten thousand shares, being the sum of $250,000, to the capital stock of said Owensboro and Russellville Railroad Company?"

At April Term, 1868, George W. Triplett, presiding judge, and a majority of the justices of the peace of the County being present, the county court, upon motion of Edward C. Berry, one of those justices, adopted the following order: "In obedience to the will of the majority of the voters and taxpayers of this County, as expressed and recorded in the poll book at the election held on the 15th day of April, 1867, it is now ordered that this court do subscribe $250,000 to the capital stock of the Owensboro and Russellville Railroad Company; and George W. Triplett, presiding judge of this court, is ordered and directed to make said subscription of said stock in manner and form as prescribed by the charter incorporating said company."

At July Term, 1868, of the county court "It is ordered that George W. Triplett, presiding Judge of Daviess County Court, William B. Tyler (who was the treasurer of the railroad company) and E. C. Berry be and are hereby appointed a committee on behalf of the County Court of Daviess County, to have bonds executed and prepared of a sufficient amount to satisfy and pay off the subscription on the part of the County of Daviess to the Owensboro and Russellville Railrord Company; that said bonds be executed and made payable as as follows, viz.:

"Fifty thousand dollars, five years from date.

"Fifty thousand dollars, ten years from date.

"Seventy-five thousand dollars, fifteen years from date.

"Seventy-five thousand dollars, twenty years from date. [660]

"The county reserving the right to pay at any time after five years; the interest on the same, at the rate of 6 per cent per annum, to be due and payable semi-annually at such place or places as the committee may determine upon; and that such bonds shall be of such denominations as said committee shall deem best, with interest coupons attached, and said bonds shall be signed by the presiding judge of Daviess County and the clerk of the County Court of Daviess County, and have the seal of the County impressed on each; and said committee or a majority of the same may sell and dispose of said bonds either to the Owensboro and Russellville Railroad Company, or to individuals or other corporations, on such terms as said committee may deem best and most advisable to the interests of the County of Daviess in paying the subscription of said County to the said Owensboro and Russellville Railroad Company; and they are hereby authorized to raise funds from said bonds, either by sale to individuals or corporations, or by contract with said railroad company, so as to pay off and meet all calls made by the Owensboro and Russellville Railroad Company by reason of the subscription of stock on behalf of the County of Daviess to said railroad company.

"It is further ordered that whenever any bond shall be sold or otherwise disposed of by said committee for the purposes aforesaid, that a list of said bonds shall be made, giving the amount, number and denomination of same, with the amount of coupons attached to each at the time of their disposal; and said list so furnished shall be entered upon the records of the County Court of Daviess by the clerk of same."

George W. Triplett, the presiding judge, and Thomas C. Jones, the clerk of the county court, claiming to act under the authority of this order, signed as such judge and clerk bonds of the county, and under the seal of the county court, as follows:

Bonds payable in five years, to the amount of	$51,250
Bonds payable in ten years, to the amount of	65,200
Bonds payable in fifteen years, to the amount of	76,500
Bonds payable in twenty years, to the amount of	127,500
	$320,450

The bonds of each class had distinct letters [661] and were numbered in a series; and each bond, omitting the letter and number, the sum and the time of payment, and the coupons annexed, was as follows:

"United States of America,

"County of Daviess, State of Kentucky:

"On account of stock subscribed in the Owensboro and Russellville Railroad Company ——— years after date the County of Daviess in the State of Kentucky promise to pay to bearer the sum of ——— dollars, with interest thereon at the rate of 6 per cent per annum, payable semi-annually, upon presentation of the proper coupons hereto attached, the principal and interest being payable at the Deposit Bank, Owensboro, and to secure the payment of which the property and credit of the county are pledged.

In testimony whereof, the judge of the County Court of Daviess County has hereunto set his hand and affixed the seal of the said court, and caused the same to be countersigned by the clerk of the said court, who has also signed the coupons hereto attached, this — day of ———, 18—.

[Seal.] George W. Triplett,
"T. C. Jones, Judge of County Court."
County Clerk."

Each bond had the following certificate, plainly printed on the back thereof: "This bond is issued as authorized by an Act of the Kentucky Legislature, approved February 27, 1867, entitled 'An Act to Charter the Owensboro and Russellville Railroad Company,' and by an ordinance of the County Court of Daviess in pursuance thereof;" and signed "George W. Triplett, Judge of the County Court of Daviess."

All the bonds so issued (except bonds to the amount of $800, payable in five years, and of $200, payable in ten years, which were sold and delivered to individuals by Triplett, Tyler and Berry, committee as aforesaid, in September, 1879) were delivered by Triplett to the railroad [662] company in various amounts on different days from June 5, 1869, to March 22, 1870. The last two deliveries were as follows: on February 17, 1870, were delivered bonds payable in ten years, to the amount of $12,500, like bonds to the amount of $53,700 having been delivered previously; on March 22, 1870, were delivered bonds payable in twenty years, to the amount of $92,500, the amount of like bonds previously delivered being $35,000, and the amount of all bonds previously delivered being $227,950. Of the bonds delivered to the railroad company before February 17, 1870, there were afterwards returned by the company, and canceled and destroyed by the County, bonds payable in five years to the amount of $100, and bonds payable in fifteen years to the amount of $3,000, leaving the excess issued $67,350.

Among the records of the county court was a register, open to public inspection, in which were registered all the bonds as they were delivered.

The coupons on all the bonds were paid by the County up to and including January 1, 1877. The County also paid, before July 1, 1877, all or nearly all the bonds payable in five years, as well as five bonds of $100 each payable in ten years. The other bonds have not been paid.

The court, against the defendant's objection, admitted testimony of the plaintiff that at various dates from February 1, 1870, to July 9, 1875, he purchased, before maturity and for value, the bonds and coupons sued on. These consisted mostly of bonds payable in ten years to the amount of $9,000, being some of those delivered to the railroad company on February 17, 1870, and the unpaid coupons annexed; and of coupons for $1,880, detached from some of the bonds payable in twenty years, which had been delivered to the railroad company on March 22, 1870. Payment of the bonds and coupons held by the plaintiff was demanded by him on January 1, 1879, and refused by the County.

Upon a bill filed May 12, 1875, by taxpayers of the County against the county court, the railroad company, and various bondholders by name (not including the present plaintiff), the circuit court of the County, on January 24, 1876, adjudged that the issue of bonds beyond [663] $250,000 was unlawful and void, and that the county court be restrained by injunction from levying any tax to pay the excess of $67,350, or interest thereon; and on March 30, 1876, the decree was affirmed by the court of appeals. Daviess Co. Court v. Howard, 13 Bush, 101.

The defendant moved the court to instruct the jury to find for the defendant. But the court overruled the motion; and, at the plaintiff's request, instructed the jury that if they believed that the plaintiff purchased the bonds and coupons sued on, before their maturity and for value, and without notice that more than $250,000 of bonds had been issued by the defendant, the law was for the plaintiff; and that the plaintiff, before purchasing the bonds, was not bound to examine the records of the county court, and cannot be presumed to have known what the records contained when he made the purchase. The defendant excepted to these rulings and instructions and, after verdict for the plaintiff, sued out this writ of error.

Messrs. J. D. Atchison and Geo. W. Jolly, for plaintiff in error:

The county judge was not authorized by the Act to determine the amount of stock, or submit the question to the voters, or decide whether the vote had resulted in favor of a subscription, or to determine the amount of bonds to be issued, or to issue the bonds; and he has no general authority to do any of these things.

The bonds, on the face, do not profess to be issued under any Act of the Legislature or other authority; the Act is not referred to in any way.

The county judge has no power, from any source whatever, to determine whether the bonds were issued "as authorized" by the Act.

The certificate is not countersigned by the county clerk, nor is the seal of the county court attached to it; and of course it is not the certificate of the committee.

As a separate and independent instrument it is entitled to no consideration, for the reason that it was made without authority.

See Kenicott v. Supervisors, 16 Wall. 452 (83 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 319); Knox County v. Aspinwall, 21 How. 529 (62 U. S. bk. 16, L. ed. 208).

It is only where the bonds on their face recite the circumstances which bring them within the power, that the corporation is estopped to deny the truth of the recital.

County of Moultrie v. Rockingham Savings Bank, Marcy v. Oswego, Town of Coloma v. Eaves and Humboldt Township v. Long, 92 U. S. 636, 638, 484, 642 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 634, 748, 579 and 752); Orleans v. Pratt, 99 U.S. 676 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 404), Dixon Co. v. Field, 111 U. S. 94 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 360); Buchanan v. Litchfield, 102 U. S. 292 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 138); Hayes v. Holly Springs, ante, 81.

To the extent the county court paid out of the taxes, any interest on, or principal of, the overissue, it was without authority and in violation of the law, and did not amount to a ratification.

See Marsh v. Fulton Co. 10 Wall. 684 (Bk. 19, L. ed. 1040); Hayes v. Holly Springs, supra; McCracken v. San Francisco, 16 Cal. 624.

Messrs. J. Hubley Ashton, P. B. Muir and James Speed, for defendant in error:

The bonds in question are all payable to bearer, and were all signed by the county judge and countersigned by the clerk. The signatures are admitted to be genuine; and the bonds were all sold for value by the county judge within three months after their date. Being in possession of defendant in error, the presumption of law is that he acquired them "bona fide, for full value, in the usual course of business, before maturity, and without notice of any circumstances impeaching their validity, and that he is the owner thereof."

1 Dan. Neg. Inst. § 812 and cases there cited.

Such instruments are commercial paper, and governed by the rules of the law merchant concerning such paper; and as respects a holder for value, before due, without notice of facts constituting a defense thereto, the only defense which is available is that there was no power in the defendant corporation to issue the bonds or instruments in question.

Dill. Law of Mun. Bonds, § 7; St. Joseph's Township v. Rogers, 16 Wall. 644 (83 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 328).

Irregularities in the exercise of the power, as against a holder for value, without notice of such irregularities, constitute no defense.

Dill. Law of Mun. Bonds, § 7; Knox Co. v. Aspinwall, 21 How. 539 (62 U. S. bk. 16, L. ed. 208); Marsh v. Fulton Co. 10 Wall. 676 (77 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 1040), and many later cases in this court.

It may well be contended that the express power to create this debt carried with it the implied power to issue bonds to an amount sufficient, at their market value, to pay the debt. The Supreme Court of Ohio so held in the case of Bank of Chillicothe v. Chillicothe, 7 Ohio, pt. 2, 31.

The doctrine in Iowa and Wisconsin is the same.

Hull v. County of Marshall, 12 Iowa, 142; Mills v. Gleason, 11 Wis. 470; State v. Madison, 7 Wis. 688.

Such seems to have been the ruling of this court in Lynde v. Winnebago Co. 16 Wall. 12 (83 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 272).

As there was authority for the issue of the subscription bonds which is indorsed on the bonds by reference to the law from which it is derived, the purchaser before maturity was not bound to look further.

County of Moultrie v. Fairfield, 105 U. S. 374 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 945); Knox v. Aspinwall, 21 How. 539 (62 U. S. bk. 16, L. ed. 208); Town of Coloma v. Eaves, Humboldt Township v. Long and Marcy v. Township of Oswego, 92 U. S. 484, 642, 687 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 579, 752 and 748).

There was no want of power to issue more bonds of any class than the order prescribed for that class; and at most the issuing of such bonds was a mere irregularity which cannot avail the County as a defense to the bonds in the hands of a bona fide purchaser for value.

The irregularity, if it was one, was committed by the agents of the County; and the County is precluded from taking advantage of it, upon the plainest principles of justice

This would be true if there had been no representation or warranty or certificate, on the part of the county court, upon the bonds, that everything necessary by law had been done, and every fact necessary by law to have existed did exist, to make the bonds lawful and binding. But there is such a certificate on the back of each bond, which declared to the purchaser that "This bond is issued as authorized by an Act of the Kentucky Legislature, approved February 27, 1867, entitled, 'An Act to Charter the Owensboro and Russellville Railroad Company,' and by an ordinance of the County Court of Daviess in pursuance thereof."

This certificate was a part of the bond, as prepared, executed and issued under the order of the county court, by authority of the statute.

See Marshall Co. Supervisors v. Schenck, 5 Wall. 772 (72 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 556); Pendleton Co. v. Amy, 13 Wall. 297 (80 U. S. bk. 20, L. ed. 597); County of Clay v. Society for Savings, 104 U. S. 591 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 856); Anderson Co. Commissioners v. Beal, 113 U. S. 240 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 966); Moran v. Miami Co. 2 Black, 722 (67 U. S. bk. 17, L. ed. 342); Zabriskie v. Cleveland, C. & C. R. R. Co. 23 How. 381 (64 U. S. bk. 16, L. ed. 488); Grand Chute v. Winegar, 15 Wall. 355, 373 (82 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 170, 174); Knox Co. v. Aspinwall, 21 How. 539 (62 U. S. bk. 16, L. ed. 208); Mercer Co. v. Hackett and Myer v. City of Muscatine, 1 Wall. 83, 384 (68 U. S. bk. 17, L. ed. 548, 564).

Mr. Justice Gray, after stating the case as above reported, delivered the opinion of the court: [663]

The county court had no power to subscribe for stock in the railroad corporation, or to issue bonds therefor, except as authorized by statute. The statute authorized the county court to subscribe for such an amount of stock only, as should be fixed and proposed by the commissioners named in the statute, and be approved by the vote of a majority of the voters of the County; and the authority of the county court, either to levy taxes, or to issue bonds, was limited to the amount so proposed and voted. That amount was $250,000. The county court therefore had no authority to issue bonds for a greater amount, and any bonds issued in excess of that amount were unlawful and void.

By the statute the bonds were to be in such sums and payable at such times as the county court should determine. The county court ordered that the bonds should be executed and made payable, $50,000 in five years; $50,000 in ten years; $75,000 in fifteen years; and $75,000 in twenty years; and that the bonds should be signed by the judge and the clerk of the county court, and have the seal of the County impressed on each. Notwithstanding this, bonds so signed and sealed were issued of each class to a larger amount, amounting in all to $320,450, showing, after deducting bonds returned and canceled, an excess of $67,350. To the ex- [664] tent of this excess, the bonds were invalid, and the county is liable upon bonds to the amount of $250,000 only. It does not deny its liability to that amount.

Then comes the question, Which of the bonds are valid and which invalid? We can have no doubt that the test is: Which were first delivered—if that can be ascertained, and without regard to the classification of bonds according to times of payment in the order of the county court; for, as the county court was authorized to determine at what time the bonds should be payable, anyone, taking a bond signed by the presiding judge and the clerk and bearing the seal of the County, had the right to presume that it was valid, provided the county court had not already issued bonds to the amount limited by the statute and by the vote.

The certificate of the judge of the county court upon the back of each bond, that it was issued as authorized by the statute and by an order of the county court in pursuance thereof, cannot estop the County to deny that the particular bond is void because the county court, at the time of issuing it, had exhausted the power conferred by the Act of the Legislature and the vote of the people. The certificate is not a recital in the bond. It is not the act of the county court, is not under its seal, nor signed by its clerk; but is simply the certificate of the person holding the office of judge of that court. Neither the statute, nor the vote of the people, nor the order of the county court, empowered him to make such a certificate, or to determine the question whether the county court had exceeded the power conferred upon it. An officer's certificate of a fact which he has no authority to determine is of no legal effect. Dixon Co. v. Field, 111 U. S. 83 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 360].

Nor can the payment of interest on all the bonds have the effect of ratifying bonds issued beyond the lawful limit; for a ratification can have no greater force than a previous authority, and the county cannot ratify what it could not have authorized. Marsh v. Fulton Co. 10 Wall. 676 [77 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 1040].

The necessary consequence is that the court below erred in instructing the jury that the plaintiff was entitled to recover on all the bonds and coupons sued on, if he purchased them before their maturity and for value, and without notice that more than $250,000 of bonds had been issued by the defendant. Merchants Bank v. Bergen Co. 115 U. S. 384 [Bk. 29, L. ed. 430].

The judgment must therefore be reversed, and the case remanded, with directions to set aside the verdict and order a new trial. What part of his bonds and coupons the plaintiff may enforce against the County may depend upon further evidence of the exact dates of the delivery and the purchase of the several bonds, that may be introduced upon another trial of this case, or perhaps in some other suit to which all the bondholders may be made parties, and therefore no opinion is expressed upon that question.

Judgment reversed.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

CXVII UNITED STATES.

117 U. S. 1-34, 29 L. 791, EXPRESS CASES.

Railroads are not legally bound to carry all express companies as such, p. 26.

Cited in 62 Am. St. Rep. 519, note.

Railroads, in absence of law or usage, need not carry express carrier in order to do express business, p. 26.

Approved in Chicago, etc., Ry. v. Pullman Car Co., 139 U. S. 89, 35 L. 101, 11 S. Ct. 494, upholding contract for furnishing of sleeping-cars; Pacific Exp. Co. v. Seibert, 44 Fed. 318, upholding State tax receipts of express company; Chicago, etc., Ry. v. Osborne, 52 Fed. 915, 10 U. S. App. 430, holding joint tariff rates, the standard for determining whether act forbidding greater compensation for a shorter haul was violated; Ilwaco, etc., Nav. Co. v. Oregon, etc., Ry., 57 Fed. 676, 15 U. S. App. 173, holding company not required to permit boats of a competitor to land; Union Pac. Ry. v. United States, 59 Fed. 827, 19 U. S. App. 531, holding railroad could contract with telegraph company for joint maintenance of a line of poles; Oregon, etc., Ry. v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 61 Fed. 160, 15 U. S. App. 479, provision of interstate commerce law for protection of traffic cannot be invoked by carrier against connecting carrier; St. Louis Drayage Co. v. Louisville, etc., R. R., 65 Fed. 41, upholding contract of connecting carriers for exclusive privileges; Voight v. Baltimore, etc., Ry., 79 Fed. 564, holding void, contract exempting railroad for injury to express messenger; Pfister v. Central Pac. R. R., 70 Cal. 182, 59 Am. Rep. 414, 11 Pac. 692, holding railroad not bound to carry gold of county treasurer as luggage; Louisville, etc., Ry. v. Keefer, 146 Ind. 26, 35, 58 Am. St. Rep. 351, 357, 44 N. E. 798, 800, 38 L. R. A. 94, 96, and Pittsburgh, etc., Ry. v. Mahoney, 146 Ind. 200, 62 Am. St. Rep. 507, 46 N. E. 918, 40 L. R. A. 103, holding that common carriers may contract as private carriers; Bates v. Old Colony R. R., 147 Mass. 266, 17 N. E. 635, holding express messenger could not recover for injuries; Wiggins Ferry Co. v. Chicago, etc., Ry., 128 Mo. 246, 27 S. W. 571, any contract which prevents a railroad from performing its duties to the public is invalid; State v. Sioux City, etc., R. Co., 46 Neb. 700, 65 N. W. 771, 31 L. R. A. 54, holding invalid, statute regulating freight rates; Atlantic Exp. Co. v. Wilmington, etc., R. R., 111 N. C. 477, 479, 481, 32 Am. St. Rep. 810, 811, 813, 16 S. E. 395, 396, 18 L. R. A. 397, 398, and n., holding railroad is not compelled to furnish facilities to an express company; Post v. Southern Ry., 103 Tenn. 202, 52 S. W. 306, holding that initial carrier cannot be compelled to make a through shipment to a point beyond its line. See 11 Am. St. Rep. 653, 61 Am. St. Rep. 361, and 62 Am. St. Rep. 513, 514, 515, 516, notes.

Distinguished in Central Trust Co. v. Wabash, etc., Ry., 29 Fed. 557, 560, enforcing contracts between railroads as to use of right of way; United States v. Delaware, etc., Ry., 40 Fed. 104, State v. Delaware, etc., Telephone Co., 47 Fed. 639, 640, and Delaware, etc., Telephone Co. v. Delaware, 50 Fed. 680, 3 U. S. App. 30, holding telephone company bound to furnish equal facilities to all; United States v. Addyston, etc., Steel Co., 85 Fed. 287, 54 U. S. App. 755, holding contracts restraining soliciting of orders are in restraint of trade; Covington, etc., Bridge Co. v. South, etc., Ry., 93 Ky. 141, 19 S. W. 404, 15 L. R. A. 829, holding bridge company could not remove rails for street cars.

Courts cannot make arrangement for business intercourse, in absence of usage, contract or law, p. 29.

Reaffirmed in Paxton, etc., Irr. Co. v. Farmers, etc., Irr. Co., 45 Neb. 901, 50 Am. St. Rep. 596, 64 N. W. 348, 29 L. R. A. 858, State v. Sioux City, etc., R. Co., 46 Neb. 699, 703, 65 N. W. 771, 772, 31 L. R. A. 54, 55, Delaware, etc., R. R. v. Central Stock, etc., Co., 43 N. J. Eq. 81, 10 Atl. 605, and Delaware, etc., R. R. v. Central Stock, etc., Co., 45 N. J. Eq. 55, 17 Atl. 148, 6 L. R. A. 858, and n. Approved in Joy v. St. Louis, 138 U. S. 50, 34 L. 859, 11 S. Ct. 258, enjoining railroad from refusing to permit other company to use its way; Union Pac. Ry. v. Chicago, etc., Ry., 163 U. S. 602, 41 L. 279, 16 S. Ct. 188, specifically enforcing contracts between railroads as to running arrangements; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Cincinnati, etc., Ry., 167 U. S. 500, 42 L. 253, 17 S. Ct. 900, holding interstate commerce commission could not determine future rates; Little Rock, etc., R. Co. v. St. Louis, etc., Ry., 41 Fed. 568, holding equity could not compel railroad to enter into contract for joint through rate; Little Rock, etc., R. Co. v. East Tennessee, etc., R. Co., 47 Fed. 779, holding there was no unlawful discrimination; Little Rock, etc., R. Co. v. St. Louis, etc., Ry., 59 Fed. 400, holding railroad not required to furnish equal facilities to connecting lines; Schmidt v. Louisville, etc., R. R., 101 Ky. 483, 41 S. W. 1027, 38 L. R. A. 822, holding that equity should enforce contract specifically; Atlantic Exp. Co. v. Wilmington, etc., R. R., 111 N. C. 482, 32 Am. St. Rep. 814, 16 S. E. 397, 18 L. R. A. 398, and n., holding railroad is not compelled to furnish facilities to an express company.

Miscellaneous.— Cited generally in Fargo, etc., Exp. Co. v. Southeastern Ry. Co., 28 Fed. 906.

117 U. S. 34-51, 29 L. 785, PICKARD v. PULLMAN, ETC., CAR CO.

Commerce.— Tennessee act, 1877, taxing leased sleeping-cars, is void as to interstate transportation, p. 51.

Reaffirmed in Tennessee v. Pullman, etc., Car Co., 117 U. S. 52, 29 L. 791, 6 S. Ct. 643. Approved in Wabash, etc., Ry. v. Illinois, 118 U. S. 564, 575, 30 L. 246, 250, 7 S. Ct. 6, 12, holding invalid, State statute regulating freight rates; Targo v. Michigan, 121 U. S. 245, 30 L. 894, 7 S. Ct. 863, holding void, State tax upon gross receipts of railroads; Philadelphia S. S. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 122 U. S. 346, 30 L. 1205, 7 S. Ct. 1125, holding invalid, State tax upon gross receipts of steamship company from transportation between different States; Bowman v. Chicago, etc., Ry., 125 U. S. 508, 31 L. 715, 8 S. Ct. 1066, holding invalid, Iowa statute forbidding common carriers to bring intoxicating liquors into the State; Leloup v. Port of Mobile, 127 U. S. 648, 32 L. 314, 8 S. Ct. 1384, holding invalid, general license tax on telegraph company; McCall v. California, 136 U. S. 110, 34 L. 393, 10 S. Ct. 883, holding invalid, license tax upon agency of foreign railroad; Allen v. Pullman, etc., Car Co., 139 U. S. 662, 35 L. 305, 11 S. Ct. 683, purely injunction bills cannot be sustained to restrain the collection of unconstitutional taxes; Crutcher v. Kentucky, 141 U. S. 58, 35 L. 652, 11 S. Ct. 854, holding invalid, act requiring agent of foreign express company to procure a license, etc.; Hooper v. California, 155 U. S. 653, 39 L. 300, 15 S. Ct. 209, upholding provision of California code, forbidding anyone to procure insurance for a resident from foreign company not having filed bond; Mobile, etc., R. Co. v. Sessions, 28 Fed. 594, holding State cannot regulate interstate commerce; Pullman's, etc., Car Co. v. Twombly, 29 Fed. 668, holding property used for interstate commerce is not exempt from equal taxation; United States v. Hopkins, 82 Fed. 538, stock shipped to a point, there to be sold or reshipped, does not cease to be a subject of interstate commerce, by being unloaded; Colt Co. v. Sutton, 102 Mich. 327, 60 N. W. 691, 25 L. R. A. 820, holding franchise fee did not apply to foreign corporations selling through itinerant agents; Postal, etc., Cable Co. v. Adams, 71 Miss. 560, 562, 42 Am. St. Rep. 477, 479, 14 So. 37, 38, upholding privilege tax of $1 per mile, on telegraph company; State v. Stephens, 146 Mo. 682, 69 Am. St. Rep. 637, 48 S. W. 934, holding cars in transits not taxable; Lumberville Bridge Co. v. Assessors, 55 N. J. L. 535, 26 Atl. 713, 25 L. R. A. 137, upholding yearly license fee upon corporations; People v. Pennsylvania R. R., 138 N. Y. 6, 33 N. E. 721, 19 L. R. A. 696, holding corporation engaged in interstate commerce was not taxable; Bain v. Richmond, etc., R. R., 105 N. C. 367, 18 Am. St. Rep. 916, 11 S. E. 312, 8 L. R. A. 301, and n., holding State could not tax rolling-stock of non-resident railroad; State v. Rankin, 11 S. Dak. 149, 76 N. W. 301, invalidating license fee on solicitors for mercantile orders; Gulf, etc., Ry. v. Dwyer, 75 Tex. 579, 16 Am. St.

Rep. 828, 12 S. W. 1002, 7 L. R. A. 479, holding State cannot regulate rate of freight for goods shipped between States; Wœssner v. Cottam Co., 19 Tex. Civ. App. 615, 47 S. W. 680, holding invalid, law denying right to sue to foreign corporation not paying franchise tax; dissenting opinions in Maine v. Grand Trunk Ry., 142 U. S. 234, 35 L. 997, 12 S. Ct. 163, majority upholding State tax on franchises according to gross receipts; O'Neill v. Vermont, 144 U. S. 346, 36 L. 461, 12 S. Ct. 702, majority holding that no Federal question was involved; Pollock v. Farmers, etc., Trust Co., 158 U. S. 691, 39 L. 1144, 15 S. Ct. 941, majority holding income tax invalid; Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio, 165 U. S. 234, 41 L. 700, 17 S. Ct. 314, majority holding invalid, statute of Ohio for taxation of express companies; Central Trust Co. v. Pullman Car Co., 139 U. S. 51, 35 L. 65, 11 S. Ct. 485, arguendo. See 27 Am. St. Rep. 563, note.

Distinguished in Pullman's Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 25, 35 L. 617, 11 S. Ct. 879, upholding State statute imposing tax on capital stock of railroads in proportion to miles of road in State; Hall v. Refrigerator, etc., Co., 24 Colo. 299, 65 Am. St. Rep. 226, 51 Pac. 424, upholding State tax on refrigerator-cars; Osborne v. State, 33 Fla. 178, 186, 191, 39 Am. St. Rep. 109, 114, 118, 14 So. 593, 595, 597, 25 L. R. A. 126, 128, 130, upholding license tax on express companies; Transit Co. v. Lynch, 18 Utah, 390, 55 Pac. 642, where tax was according to value of cars.

Commerce power of Congress, interstate, is exclusive, p. 49.

Approved in Robbins v. Shelby Taxing Dist., 120 U. S. 498, 30 L. 696, 7 S. Ct. 594, holding State cannot tax interstate commerce; Rhea v. Newport, etc., R. Co., 50 Fed. 22, upholding erection of bridge by State across navigable river. See 59 Am. Rep. 269, and 27 Am. St. Rep. 550, notes.

117 U. S. 51-52, 29 L. 791, TENNESSEE v. PULLMAN, ETC., CAR CO.

Commerce.— Tennessee privilege sleeping-car tax of 1881, is void as to interstate transportation, p. 52.

Cited in 27 Am. St. Rep. 563, note.

117 U. S. 52-71, 29 L. 805, HAGOOD v. SOUTHERN.

Taxation.— Holder of State scrip receivable for taxes may not sue thereon until tendered for taxes and refused, p. 64.

Approved in President, etc. v. Sanger, 62 Fed. 182, enjoining State treasurer from threatened diversion of income under unconstitutional statute.

States.— Where relief is actually sought against State, though nominally its officer, suit is not maintainable, p. 67.

Reaffirmed in In re Ayers, 123 U. S. 490, 491, 502, 31 L. 224, 225, 228, 8 S. Ct. 175, 181, Ferguson v. Ross, 38 Fed. 163, 3 L. R. A. 324, and n., and Mills Pub. Co. v. Larrabee, 78 Iowa, 100, 42 N. W. 594. Approved in Christian v. Atlantic, etc., R. R., 133 U. S. 243, 33 L. 593, 10 S. Ct. 263, dismissing suit, since State was an indispensable party; Hans v. Louisiana, 134 U. S. 10, 33 L. 845, 10 S. Ct. 505, holding State cannot be sued without its consent; North Carolina v. Temple, 134 U. S. 30, 33 L. 852, 10 S. Ct. 511, and New York Guaranty Co. v. Steele, 134 U. S. 232, 33 L. 892, 10 S. Ct. 512, holding suit to compel auditor to raise a tax was against State; Pennoyer v. McConnaughy, 140 U. S. 10, 35 L. 365, 11 S. Ct. 701, reviewing cases; Reagan v. Farmers, etc., Trust Co., 154 U. S. 389, 38 L. 1020, 14 S. Ct. 1051, upholding suit against railroad commissioners; Belknap v. Schild, 161 U. S. 18, 40 L. 602, 16 S. Ct. 446, dismissing injunction against officers of United States; Tindal v. Wesley, 167 U. S. 220, 42 L. 142, 17 S. Ct. 776, holding suit against secretary of State, in possession in his official capacity, was really against the State; McConnaughy v. Pennoyer, 14 Sawy. 588, 43 Fed. 199, enjoining sale by commissioners; Chicago, etc., Ry. v. Dey, 35 Fed. 870, 1 L. R. A. 747, and n., restraining railroad commissioners from putting in force a schedule of rates; Mills v. Greene, 67 Fed. 824, enjoining supervisor of registration; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Henderson, 68 Fed. 597, restraining auditor from certifying valuations of property for taxation under statute claimed to be unconstitutional; Green v. Mills, 69 Fed. 863, 25 U. S. App. 383, 30 L. R. A. 97, holding supervisor of registration could not be enjoined on ground that laws were unconstitutional; Smith v. Rackliffe, 87 Fed. 966, 59 U. S. App. 430, holding action against treasurer to recover taxes was against State; Wesley v. Eells, 90 Fed. 156, 162, holding that scrip constituted bills of credit, and was void; In re Comingore, 96 Fed. 562, holding State has no authority to permit collector of internal revenue to certify copies of reports on file in his office; Hickman v. Missouri, etc., Ry., 151 Mo. 656, 52 S. W. 354, holding action by railroad commissioners was really by the State; Lowry v. Thompson, 25 S. C. 420, 1 S. E. 144 (see dissenting opinion in 25 S. C. 431, 432, 1 S. E. 152, 153), holding case was really against State; Water-Power Co. v. Electric Co., 43 S. C. 167, 168, 20 S. E. 1007, dismissing equitable issue of injunction, it being against the State; Miller v. State Board of Agriculture, 46 W. Va. 194, 32 S. E. 1008, denying mandamus, to compel officer to execute contract of State; dissenting opinion in Butler v. Ellerbe, 44 S. C. 261, 22 S. E. 429, majority holding to restrain payment of warrants not a suit against State.

Distinguished in McConnaughy v. Pennoyer, 14 Sawy. 597, 43 Fed. 340, holding that suit was not against the State; Railroad Commrs. v. Pensacola, etc., R. R., 24 Fla. 461, 462, 463, 12 Am. St. Rep. 223, 224, 225, 5 So. 131, 132, 2 L. R. A. 506, 507, holding bill filed against railroad commissioners was not an action against State.

States.—Distinction is between suits to enforce State's political obligations, and to protect personal rights, p. 70.

Approved in Pennoyer v. McConnaughy, 140 U. S. 16, 17, 35 L. 367, 11 S. Ct. 704, reviewing [illegible] Tschman v. Welch, 42 Fed. 552, and M. Chandler Rottling [illegible] v. Welch, 42 Fed. 563, both restraining county attorney from instituting proceedings for contempt; President, etc., of Tab[illegible] v. Sanger, 62 Fed. 182, enjoining State treasurer from [illegible] diversion of income under an unconstitutional [illegible] Union Tel. Co. v. Henderson, 68 Fed. 59[illegible] [illegible] restrain auditor from certifying valuations for [illegible] claimed to be unconstitutional; [illegible] 82 Fed. 710, enjoining State officer from [illegible] Lowry v. Thompson, 25 S. C. 422, 1 S. E. [illegible] [illegible] really against State.

[illegible] WRIGHT v. KENTUCKY, ETC., RY.

[illegible] contract of Kentucky and Great Eastern [illegible] and held to create no lien, p. 93.

[illegible] contract, made with knowledge of vendor's [illegible] no lien superior thereto, p. 94.

[illegible] directors cannot so place themselves that personal con[illegible] corporate interests, p. 94.

[illegible] in Thomas v. Peoria, etc., Ry., 36 Fed. 816, holding [illegible] to mortgagor by car company dominated by same per[illegible] be made the basis of an accounting; Central Trust Co. [illegible] 37 Fed. 767, 16 U. S. App. 115, holding contract made by [illegible] stockholder for his own benefit cannot be questioned by [illegible] persons not injured thereby.

Railroad mortgage covers only mortgagor's interest, and bondholders acquire no rights superior to prior vendor's lien, p. 94.

117 U. S. 96-122, 29 L. 811, LEATHER MANUFACTURERS' BANK v. MORGAN.

Bank and its depositor sustain relation of debtor and creditor, p. 106.

Reaffirmed in McKeen v. Boatmen's Bank, 74 Mo. App. 288.

Bank depositor must examine his book promptly and report errors, or will be estopped thereby, p. 106.

Reaffirmed in First Nat. Bank v. Allen, 100 Ala. 482, 46 Am. St. Rep. 83, 14 So. 336, 27 L. R. A. 430, and n., and Weinstein v. National Bank, 69 Tex. 43, 5 Am. St. Rep. 27, 6 S. W. 174. Approved in Porter v. Price, 80 Fed. 657, 49 U. S. App. 300, acquiescence in account rendered concludes party; Charlotte, etc., Fertilizer Co. v. Hartog, 85 Fed. 155, 42 U. S. App. 716, holding silence did not estop party from showing fraud, etc., in account; Turnbull v. Home Fire Ins. Co., 83 Md. 324, 34 Atl. 877, holding failure of agent of assured to disclose that gasolene was used on the premises, avoided policy; Gladstone Bank v. Keating, 94 Mich. 431, 53 N. W. 1111 (see dissenting opinion in 94 Mich. 434, 435, 53 N. W. 1112), holding bank could recover against the partnership; McKeen v. Boatmen's Bank, 74 Mo. App. 289, 290, 291, holding that bank-book is an account stated; Shipman v. Bank of New York, 126 N. Y. 328, 330, 22 Am. St. Rep. 828, 829, 27 N. E. 373, 374, 12 L. R. A. 796, 797, and n., holding that depositor is not presumed to know signature of payee; United Security, etc., Co. v. Bank, 185 Pa. St. 601, 40 Atl. 99, holding depositor is not required to examine indorsements of paid checks; National Bank v. National Bank, 92 Tex. 439, 440, 49 S. W. 368, 369, mere silence, in absence of proof that bank was prejudiced, will not estop depositor.

Estoppel does not necessarily imply intent to mislead; negligence is sufficient, p. 108.

Approved in Edison, etc., Light Co. v. Buckeye Electric Co., 59 Fed. 700, holding party estopped by acts done under a mistaken idea of the law; Davis, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Dix, 64 Fed. 410, holding parties could not set up an unauthorized alteration.

Bank officer overlooking forgery, for want of proper care, depositor can recover, though not examining returned checks, p. 112.

Reaffirmed in Janin v. London, etc., Bank, 92 Cal. 23, 27 Am. St. Rep. 84, 27 Pac. 1100, 14 L. R. A. 322, and Brixen v. National Bank, 5 Utah, 512, 18 Pac. 45. Approved in First Nat. Bank v. South Nat. Bank, 56 Fed. 971, 16 U. S. App. 1, charging bank with notice of letters duly mailed to it; Rice v. Citizens' Nat. Bank, — Ky. —, 51 S. W. 455, holding bank liable for payment of forged check; Todd v. Meding, 56 N. J. Eq. 101, 38 Atl. 355, holding receiver not excused from liability of payment.

Estoppel arises against depositor if his negligence prevented bank promptly getting redress from forger, p. 115.

Approved in Robb v. Vos, 155 U. S. 39, 39 L. 62, 15 S. Ct. 13, holding party estopped to deny authority of attorney to appear for him; Manhattan Beach Co. v. Harned, 23 Blatchf. 500, 27 Fed. 489, holding purchaser had right to rely upon diligence of corporation; Janin v. London, etc., Bank, 92 Cal. 26, 27 Am. St. Rep. 87, 27 Pac. 1101, 14 L. R. A. 328 (see dissenting opinion in 92 Cal. 29, 27 Pac. 1108, 14 L. R. A. 324), holding bank not prejudiced by the erroneous instruction; Lynch v. Smyth, 25 Colo. 112, 54 Pac. 637, it is sufficient that conduct of surety prevented obligee from trying to procure other security; Kuriger v. Jœst, 22 Ind. App. 639, 52 N. E. 767, holding surety estopped from claiming his signature to be a forgery; Welsen, etc., Mach. Co. v. Southern Exp. Co., 42 La. Ann. 599, 7

So. 712, holding an estoppel arises where one induces another to omit some act which otherwise he would have done and prevented loss; Andrews v. Clark, 72 Md. 436, 437, 20 Atl. 433, holding party not estopped by his delay; Turnbull v. Home Fire Ins. Co., 83 Md. 323, 34 Atl. 876, holding assured should have read policy; Wind v. Fifth Nat. Bank, 39 Mo. App. 86, holding depositor loses recourse against bank, if he might have discovered forgeries; McKeen v. Boatmen's Bank, 74 Mo. App. 290, reasonableness of time in which customer of bank should make objection is a question of law; Devine v. Bank of Baldwin, 91 Wis. 75, 64 N. W. 592, holding defendant, to establish an estoppel, must show it had been or might be prejudiced; Shepard, etc., Lumber Co. v. Eldridge, 171 Mass. 533, 68 Am. St. Rep. 463, 51 N. E. 16, 41 L. R. A. 624, and First Nat. Bank v. Fourth Nat. Bank, 56 Fed. 971, 16 U. S. App. 1, arguendo.

Banks.— Where depositor's agent for examining returned checks is forger, depositor is liable unless diligent, p. 116.

Reaffirmed in Myers v. Southwestern Nat. Bank, 192 Pa. St. 12, 44 Atl. 281. Approved in John Shillito Co. v. M'Clung, 45 Fed. 779, to point that matters of estoppel may be set up in actions at law; First Nat. Bank v. Fourth Nat. Bank, 56 Fed. 969, 16 U. S. App. 1, holding bank mailing certificate of deposit to debtor, negligent; Armstrong v. Chemical Nat. Bank, 83 Fed. 573, 574, 54 U. S. App. 494, 496, passing of monthly statement was notice to directors of second bank of loan; Wilson, etc., Mach. Co. v. Southern Exp. Co., 42 La. Ann. 598, 7 So. 711, holding an estoppel arises where one induces another to omit some act which otherwise he would have done, and prevented loss; Wind v. Fifth Nat. Bank, 39 Mo. App. 79, holding depositor loses recourse against bank if he might have discovered forgeries; People's Bank v. Franklin Bank, 88 Tenn. 308, 17 Am. St. Rep. 889, 12 S. W. 718, 6 L. R. A. 726, bank negligently cashing forged check drawn upon another bank, is liable to drawee for money received; Spargo v. Nelson, 10 Utah, 279, 37 Pac. 496, estopping company from asserting its priority of lien; Marrow v. Brinkley, 85 Va. 62, 6 S. E. 609, estopping parties to deny authority of attorneys to represent them; Two Rivers Mfg. Co. v. Day, 102 Wis. 332, 78 N. W. 442, holding disclaimer estopped from asserting his title.

Distinguished in Atlantic Nat. Bank v. Burke, 81 Ga. 601, 7 S. E. 740, 2 L. R. A. 99, and n., holding depositor had a right to presume indorsement was genuine.

Banks.— Questions of estoppel and diligence, arising from loss by raised checks, are for jury, p. 122.

Reaffirmed in Beatty v. Mutual, etc., Life Assn., 75 Fed. 68, 44 U. S. App. 527. Approved in Southern Pac. Co. v. Burke, 60 Fed. 715, 23 U. S. App. 1, holding question of negligence was properly submitted to jury; McKeen v. Boatmen's Bank, 74 Mo. App. 292, holding that facts warranted an action at law; Devine v. Bank of Baldwin, 91 Wis. 74, 64 N. W. 591, holding defendant, as a matter of law, was guilty of such negligence as to estop him. See 27 Am. St. Rep. 89, note.

Distinguished in Charlotte, etc., Fertilizer Co. v. Hartog, 85 Fed. 157, 42 U. S. App. 716, holding case was properly withheld from jury; Anderson v. Walker, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 49 S. W. 951, generally.

Miscellaneous.— Cited generally in Leather Manufacturers' Bank v. Cooper, 120 U. S. 781, 30 L. 818, 7 S. Ct. 778.

117 U. S. 123-129, 29 L. 837, CHICAGO, ETC., RY. v. OHLE.

Domicile.— State citizenship is lost or gained only where residence is, in good faith, changed, p. 128.

Approved in Alabama, etc., R. Co. v. Carroll, 84 Fed. 780, 52 U. S. App. 458, taking case from jury and dismissing same, where evidence showed no intention to permanently change domicile. See 48 Am. St. Rep. 715, note.

Appellate court cannot decide jury's verdict wrong, though charge correct, where some evidence supports it, p. 129.

Reaffirmed in Clark v. Carlisle, etc., Min. Co., 5 N. Mex. 325, 21 Pac. 356. Approved in New York, etc., Ry. v. Estill, 147 U. S. 617, 37 L. 305, 13 S. Ct. 454, holding court could not review verdict as to weight of evidence.

Evidence.— Party's affidavit as to residence held admissible against it on another issue, p. 129.

Approved in Cleveland v. Cleveland, etc., Ry., 98 Fed. 129, holding allegation was not an admission that defendant's possession was adverse.

Miscellaneous.— Cited in Wetmore v. Rymer, 169 U. S. 121, 42 L. 684, 18 S. Ct. 295, generally.

117 U. S. 129-139, 29 L. 830, TENNESSEE v. WHITWORTH.

Taxation.— Corporations have four separate taxable elements: Franchises, property, shares in its own, and individual hands, p. 136.

Approved in New Orleans v. Houston, 119 U. S. 277, 30 L. 415, 7 S. Ct. 205, holding assessment upon shares was substantially a tax upon the corporation; Gibbons v. Mahon, 136 U. S. 557, 34 L. 527, 10 S. Ct. 1058, holding stock dividend was an accretion to capital; Bank of Commerce v. Tennessee, 161 U. S. 147, 40 L. 649, 16 S. Ct. 461, holding both capital stock and shares may be taxed; Owensboro Nat. Bank v. Owensboro, 173 U. S. 682, 19 S. Ct. 542, holding tax on franchise of corporation was illegal under the statute; Tennessee v. Bank of Commerce, 53 Fed. 747, holding charter exemption exempted shares of stock; Memphis v. Home Ins. Co., 91 Tenn.

561, 19 S. W. 1043, holding exemption did not extend to shares of stock; Memphis v. Memphis City Bank, 91 Tenn. 578, 19 S. W. 1046, holding that capital stock and shares of stock are separate properties; Memphis v. U. & P. Bank, 91 Tenn. 553, 19 S. W. 760, State v. Bank of Commerce, 95 Tenn. 227, 31 S. W. 995, and Commonwealth v. Charlottesville, etc., Loan Co., 90 Va. 792, 44 Am. St. Rep. 951, 20 S. E. 365, holding that capital stock and shares of capital stock may both be taxed; dissenting opinion in Hancock v. Singer Mfg. Co., 62 N. J. L. 348, 41 Atl. 854, 42 L. R. A. 862, majority holding exemption of shares from taxation also exempts capital stock.

Taxation.— Every presumption is against surrender of taxing power, p. 136.

Reaffirmed in Memphis v. U. & P. Bank, 91 Tenn. 550, 19 S. W. 759, Memphis v. Memphis City Bank, 91 Tenn. 580, 19 S. W. 1046, Turnpike Cases, 92 Tenn. 373, 22 S. W. 76, and Railroad v. Harris, 99 Tenn. 693, 43 S. W. 117. Approved in Shelby County v. Union, etc., Bank, 161 U. S. 160, 40 L. 655, 16 S. Ct. 562, holding provision for annual tax in lieu of all other taxes, does not exempt capital stock; Memphis v. Home Ins. Co., 91 Tenn. 562, 19 S. W. 1043, holding exemption did not extend to shares of stock.

Taxation.— Double taxation is never presumed, p. 137.

Approved in Western Union Tel. Co. v. Harris, — Tenn. —, 52 S. W. 752, holding telegraph company having paid one privilege tax, was not exempt from another.

Statutory contracts are to receive meaning intended at time of enactment, p. 137.

Taxation.— Exemption of "capital stock" exempts individual shares, p. 139.

Reaffirmed in Central R. R. v. Wright, 164 U. S. 335, 41 L. 457, 17 S. Ct. 83. Approved in State v. Hernando, etc., Ins. Co., 97 Tenn. 92, 36 S. W. 722, holding capital stock not exempt by charter provision for annual tax in lieu of all other taxes; Foster v. Stevens, 63 Vt. 182, 22 Atl. 79, 13 L. R. A. 168, and n., holding shares of stock of Canadian bank, which pays a direct tax in Canada, are exempt from taxation as against residents.

Distinguished in Street R. R. v. Morrow, 87 Tenn. 422, 11 S. W. 351, 2 L. R. A. 858, tax against corporation and also its shares is not double; Memphis v. Home Ins. Co., 91 Tenn. 563, 19 S. W. 1043, holding that exemption did not extend to shares of stock.

Miscellaneous.— Cited in Tennessee v. Union, etc., Bank, 152 U. S. 460, 38 L. 514, 14 S. Ct. 656, and Arkansas v. Kansas, etc., Coal Co., 96 Fed. 355, to point that case is removable if record shows either party claims a right under the Constitution and laws of United States.

117 U. S. 139-150, 29 L. 833, TENNESSEE v. WHITWORTH.

Taxing power of State is never presumed relinquished, p. 145.

Reaffirmed in Memphis v. Memphis City Bank, 91 Tenn. 580, 19 S. W. 1046. Approved in Memphis v. Home Ins. Co., 91 Tenn. 562, 19 S. W. 1043, holding exemption did not extend to shares of stock; Dow v. Northern R. R., 67 N. H. 49, 36 Atl. 535, arguendo.

Taxation.— Grant of another corporation's rights, etc., carries a tax exemption, notwithstanding Tennessee Constitution, p. 146.

Reaffirmed in State Board of Assessors v. Morris, etc., R. R., 49 N. J. L. 207, 7 Atl. 832. Approved in Phœnix Ins. Co. v. Tennessee, 161 U. S. 179, 181, 40 L. 662, 663, 16 S. Ct. 473, 474, confining exemption to line defined in charter of first corporation; Citizens' Bank v. Board of Assessors, 54 Fed. 76, holding that exemption from taxation followed extension of charter; United States v. Stanford, 70 Fed. 359, 363, 44 U. S. App. 68, holding there was a waiver of individual liability of stockholders; Buchanan v. Knoxville, etc., R. Co., 71 Fed. 338, 37 U. S. App. 499, arguendo.

Distinguished in Keokuk, etc., R. R. v. Missouri, 152 U. S. 311, 38 L. 455, 14 S. Ct. 596, holding a new company was formed from date of consolidation, and exemption did not pass; Adams v. Yazoo, etc., R. Co., — Miss. —, 24 So. 209, 210, 211, and S. C., — Miss. —, 24 So. 318, where there was a mere merger; Memphis v. Phœnix, etc., Ins. Co., 91 Tenn. 572, 19 S. W. 1045, holding grant of "rights and privileges" did not carry exemption from taxation.

Corporation, consolidated, presumably has powers, privileges, restrictions and liabilities of predecessors, p. 147.

Reaffirmed in Natchez, etc., R. R. v. Lambert, 70 Miss. 790, 13 So. 35. Approved in Africa v. Board of Mayor, etc., 70 Fed. 789, holding consent of city not terminated by extinguishment of companies; Langhorne v. Richmond R. Co., 91 Va. 374, 22 S. E. 161, holding consolidated corporation may be sued for liabilities of old.

Distinguished in Keokuk, etc., R. R. v. Missouri, 152 U. S. 307, 38 L. 454, 14 S. Ct. 594, holding a new company was formed from date of consolidation, and exemption did not pass.

Corporations.— Grant of privileges to railroad "for its government," means for regulation, not as limitation, p. 149.

Miscellaneous.— Tennessee v. Union, etc., Bank, 152 U. S. 460, 38 L. 514, 14 S. Ct. 656, on removal question.

117 U. S. 151-180, 29 L. 845, VAN BROCKLIN v. STATE OF TENNESSEE.

United States may take for public use under eminent domain, paying just compensation, p. 154.

Reaffirmed in Ryan v. United States, 136 U. S. 81, 34 L. 452, 10 S. Ct. 918. Approved in Cherokee Nation v. Kansas Ry., 135 U. S.

656, 34 L. 302, 10 S. Ct. 970, holding railroad could take private property for right of way; Luxton v. North River Bridge Co., 153 U. S. 530, 38 L. 810, 14 S. Ct. 892, holding United States could take private land to build bridge across navigable stream; United States v. Certain Tract of Land, 67 Fed. 871, holding United States could not take land for national cemetery at Gettysburg; Abbott v. New York, etc., R. R., 145 Mass. 453, holding right of eminent domain granted to domestic corporation might pass to foreign corporation, its successor.

States.— Ordinance of 1787 had no force in any State after its admission, any more than other acts of Congress, p. 159.

Reaffirmed in Sands v. Manistee, etc., Imp. Co., 123 U. S. 296, 31 L. 152, 8 S. Ct. 117, and People v. Thompson, 155 Ill. 473, 40 N. E. 313. Approved in Illinois v. Illinois, etc., R. Co., 33 Fed. 754, 755, holding State could fix line beyond which docks could not be built.

Public lands.— Disposition of, lies wholly with Congress, p. 168.

Approved in Wiseman v. Eastman, 21 Wash. 175, 57 Pac. 401, holding decision of United States land department could not be reviewed.

Taxation.— State taxing laws do not include State or municipal property, although not in terms exempt, p. 173.

Approved in Springville v. Johnson, 10 Utah, 355, 37 Pac. 577, holding lands of municipality were exempt.

United States property is exempt from State taxation, p. 178.

Reaffirmed in Wisconsin R. R. v. Price County, 133 U. S. 504, 33 L. 692, 10 S. Ct. 344, and Bannon v. Burnes, 39 Fed. 898, 899. Approved in United States v. Nashville, etc., Ry., 118 U. S. 126, 30 L. 83, 6 S. Ct. 1009, holding statute of limitations did not run against bonds held by United States in trust for Indians; Pollock v. Farmers, etc., Trust Co., 157 U. S. 584, 39 L. 819, 15 S. Ct. 691, holding invalid, tax on interest on municipal bonds; Central, etc., R. R. v. California, 162 U. S. 125, 40 L. 915, 16 S. Ct. 779, holding State may tax property of corporation, an agent of United States; Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Stanley, 49 Fed. 265, it would be inequitable to regard one as owner for purposes of taxation, and not for purpose of enforcing his rights; United States v. Devereux, 90 Fed. 186, 61 U. S. App. 557, property claimed by United States as cestui que trust, is not subject to statute of limitations; United States v. Bell Telephone Co., 167 U. S. 265, 42 L. 163, 17 S. Ct. 820, United States v. Bee, 54 Fed. 114, 7 U. S. App. 459, and United States v. Willamette, etc., Road Co., 54 Fed. 810, all holding defense of laches is not applicable to United States; Nichols v. Council, 51 Ark. 33, 14 Am St. Rep. 22, 9 S. W. 306, holding statute of limitations will not run in favor of enterer's grantee, while title remains in the government; Ex parte Gaines, 56 Ark. 280, 19 S. W. 602, holding lessee of land of United States subject to State taxation; State v. Burk, 68 Ark. 58, 37 S. W. 407, holding statute of limitations was no defense to action by State to foreclose mortgage security for school funds; Davis v. Magoun, — Iowa, —, 80 N. W. 429, holding land was taxable from time of reinstatement of cancelled entry; State v. Central Pac. R. R., 21 Nev. 269, 30 Pac. 692, holding unsurveyed lands not taxable; Howard Sav. Inst. v. Newark, 63 N. J. L. 549, 44 Atl. 655, holding United States securities not taxable; Jackson v. La Moure County, 1 N. Dak. 238, 46 N. W. 449, holding indemnity lands were not taxable until selected; Tyler v. Cass County, 1 N. Dak. 382, 48 N. W. 233, holding lands upon which United States had lien for survey fee, were not taxable; Duncan v. Newcomer, 9 S. Dak. 377, 69 N. W. 581, until new proof of homestead entry was made, land was not taxable; dissenting opinion in Pollock v. Farmers, etc., Trust Co., 158 U. S. 666, 693, 39 L. 1135, 1145, 15 S. Ct. 931, 942, majority holding income tax invalid; Frost v. Spitley, 121 U. S. 556, 30 L. 1012, 7 S. Ct. 1131, arguendo.

United States, acquiring land at tax sale, may not be taxed by State, as respects it, p. 179.

Approved in United States v. Insley, 130 U. S. 265, 32 L. 969, 9 S. Ct. 485, holding United States holds right of redemption for public purposes; Graff v. Ackerman, 38 Neb. 723, 57 N. W. 513, holding land purchased from government not taxable, before issuance of patent.

117 U. S. 180-197, 29 L. 839, GRAFFAM v. BURGESS.

Execution.— Party misled, and lulled into security, so as to prevent her from redeeming, may have extra time, p. 190.

Reaffirmed in Power v. Larabee, 3 N. Dak. 509, 44 Am. St. Rep. 581, 57 N. W. 791. Approved in Schroeder v. Young, 161 U. S. 345, 40 L. 727, 16 S. Ct. 516, allowing relief, notwithstanding statutory period for redemption had expired; Young v. Schroeder, 10 Utah, 172, 37 Pac. 256, setting aside execution sale.

Judicial sale will not be set aside for inadequacy, unless so great as to shock conscience, p. 192.

Reaffirmed in Fidelity Trust, etc., Co. v. Mobile, etc., Ry., 54 Fed. 28, Fidelity Ins., etc., Co. v. Roanoke Iron Co., 84 Fed. 755, Magan v. Segal, 92 Fed. 256, 257, 258, 259, 262. Hudgins v. Morrow, 47 Ark. 518, 2 S. W. 105, Carden v. Lange, 48 Ark. 219, 3 Am. St. Rep. 229, 2 S. W. 710, and Phillips v. Pullen, 45 N. J. Eq. 836, 18 Atl. 851. Approved in Pewabic Mining Co. v. Mason, 145 U. S. 367, 36 L. 738, 12 S. Ct. 892, refusing to set aside sale; Schroeder v. Young, 161 U. S. 340, 40 L. 725, 16 S. Ct. 514, setting aside sale; Colonial, etc., Mortgage Co. v. Sweet, 65 Ark. 154, 67 Am. St. Rep. 912, 45 S. W.

60, holding mortgagee could not have sale set aside upon offer of a larger bid.

Distinguished in Central Trust Co. v. Street Ry., 96 Iowa, 651, 65 N. W. 984, holding bidder at foreclosure sale could not object to resale, because of inadequacy of price.

Judicial sale will be set aside for gross inadequacy, shocking the conscience, unfairness practiced, or surprise, p. 192.

Reaffirmed in Schrœder v. Young, 161 U. S. 338, 40 L. 724, 16 S. Ct. 514. Approved in Detwiler v. Schultheis, 122 Ind. 166, 23 N. E. 712, upholding sufficiency of cross-complaint to quiet title; Power v. Larabee, 3 N. Dak. 508, 44 Am. St. Rep. 580, 57 N. W. 790, setting aside sale, where right of redemption was injuriously interfered with; Horse Springs Cattle Co. v. Schofield, 9 N. Mex. 142, 49 Pac. 956, setting aside receiver's sale, where purchaser enjoyed an unconscionable advantage through mistake; Young v. Schrœder, 10 Utah, 167, 37 Pac. 254, setting aside execution sale; Davenport v. Moore, 74 Fed. 953, arguendo.

Judicial sales.— Gross inadequacy requires very slight additional circumstances of unfairness, to constitute fraud, p. 192.

Reaffirmed in Branch v. Foust, 130 Ind. 544, 30 N. E. 633. Approved in Fletcher v. McGill, 110 Ind. 402, 10 N. E. 654, and Wright v. Dick, 116 Ind. 545, 19 N. E. 309, setting aside sheriff's sale; Detwiler v. Schultheis, 122 Ind. 165, 23 N. E. 712, upholding sufficiency of cross-complaint, to quiet title; Russell v. Pew, 12 Mont. 516, 31 Pac. 76, refusing to set sale aside; Warren v. Stinson, 6 N. Dak. 303, 305, 70 N. W. 282, 283, ignorance of facts, and inadequate price suffices to justify annulment of sale; Young v. Schrœder, 10 Utah, 168, 37 Pac. 254, setting aside execution sale; Parry v. Parry, 80 Wis. 131, 48 N. W. 657, setting aside sale.

Equity.— Prayer of bill may sometimes be amended at hearing, to conform to proof, p. 195.

Approved in Mackintosh v. Flint, etc., R. Co., 34 Fed. 614, allowing supplemental bill to stand; Bass v. Feigenspan, 82 Fed. 261, refusing amendment to prayer after replication; Tennant v. Dunlop, 97 Va. 239, 33 S. E. 621, upholding change in prayer for relief; Detwiler v. Schultheis, 122 Ind. 166, 23 N. E. 712, arguendo.

Miscellaneous.— Cited generally in Burgess v. Doble, 149 Mass. 258, 21 N. E. 438.

117 U. S. 197–198, 29 L. 888, AKERS v. AKERS.

Removal of suit cannot be had, unless diverse citizenship existed at its commencement, p. 198.

Reaffirmed in Stevens v. Nichols, 130 U. S. 232, 32 L. 915, 9 S. Ct. 519, Hone v. Dillon, 29 Fed. 466, Seddon v. Virginia, etc., Iron Co., 36 Fed. 8, 1 L. R. A. 109, Graswell v. Belanger, 56 Fed. 560, 15 U. S.

App. 104, Foster v. Paragould, etc., R. Co., 74 Fed. 273, Amy v. Manning, 144 Mass. 154, 10 N. E. 740, and Herndon v. Lancashire Ins. Co., 107 N. C. 193, 12 S. E. 241, 10 L. R. A. 54. Approved in Moore v. Edgerfield, 32 Fed. 500. excluding interest accumulated pending suit, in estimating amount in dispute; La Montagne v. T. W. Harvey Lumber Co., 44 Fed. 647, holding filing of counterclaim in State, by non-resident defendant, does not preclude his right of removal; Burnham v. First Nat. Bank, 53 Fed. 165, 10 U. S. App. 485, holding case not removable, where substituted parties were citizens of separate States.

117 U. S. 199, 29 L. 888, JOHNSON v. KEITH.

Appeal and error.— Judgment of reversal and new trial is not a final appealable judgment, p. 199.

Reaffirmed in Brown v. Baxter, 146 U. S. 620, 36 L. 1107, 13 S. Ct. 261, and Union, etc., Life Ins. Co. v. Kirchoff, 160 U. S. 378, 40 L. 463, 16 S. Ct. 320. Approved in MacLeod v. Graven, 79 Fed. 84, 47 U. S. App. 573, holding writ of error does not lie to review judgment of Circuit Court of Appeals, which is not final.

117 U. S. 200-201, 29 L. 887, HARWOOD v. DICKERHOFF.

Appeal and error.— Increase in amount of appeal bond for death of one of appellants, refused, p. 201.

Not cited.

117 U. S. 201-210, 29 L. 855, TUA v. CARRIERE.

Insolvency of attached debtor, in Louisiana, dissolves attachment not matured into judgment, p. 204.

Reaffirmed in Shwartz v. H. B. Claflin Co., 60 Fed. 685 13 C. C. App. 707.

Insolvency.— Cession of all property by surviving partners, though illegal as to deceased, yet when accepted and acted on by court, cannot be collaterally attacked by creditor, p. 206.

Reaffirmed in Geilinger v. Philippi, 133 U. S. 255, 33 L. 617, 10 S. Ct. 268.

Courts.— Property being administered by one court, cannot be seized under process from another, p. 208.

Reaffirmed in Geilinger v. Philippi, 133 U. S. 257, 33 L. 617, 10 S. Ct. 269. Approved in Milliken v. Barrow, 55 Fed. 148, after surrender of property by insolvent, executory process cannot be issued by a Federal court.

Insolvency law of a State, in force when national bankrupt law passed, revives on latter's repeal, p. 210.

Approved in In re Gutwilling, 90 Fed. 476, holding voluntary assignments for creditors, voidable within four months; In re Bruss-Ritter Co., 90 Fed. 652, holding bankrupt act suspends State insolvency laws.

117 U. S. 210-227, 29 L. 860, PATCH v. WHITE.

Wills.— Latent ambiguity in will may be removed by extrinsic evidence, p. 217.

Reaffirmed in Decker v. Decker, 121 Ill. 350, 12 N. E. 754, and Webster v. Morris, 66 Wis. 380, 28 N. W. 357. Approved in Post v. Jackson, 70 Conn. 286, 39 Atl. 152, rejecting extrinsic evidence, where language of testator was not ambiguous; Seebrock v. Fedawa, 33 Neb. 417, 29 Am. St. Rep. 491, 50 N. W. 271, holding error in description will not avoid will; dissenting opinion in Eckford v. Eckford, 91 Iowa, 65, 74, 58 N. W. 1096, 1099, 26 L. R. A. 374, 377, majority admitting extrinsic identification. See 50 Am. St. Rep. 285, 287, and 65 Am. St. Rep. 521, notes.

Wills.— Latent ambiguity may arise where two persons or things answer the given description, or there is misdescription, p. 217.

Reaffirmed in Gilmer v. Stone, 120 U. S. 590, 30 L. 736, 7 S. Ct. 690. Approved in Whitcomb v. Rodman, 156 Ill. 122, 47 Am. St. Rep. 183, 40 N. E. 554, 28 L. R. A. 151, holding that devise carried adjoining forties; Daugherty v. Rogers, 119 Ind. 259, 20 N. E. 781, 13 L. R. A. 851, and n., admitting extrinsic evidence; Stewart v. Stewart, 96 Iowa, 625, 65 N. W. 977, holding devise of land described as northeast quarter, passed southeast quarter; Oldham v. York, 99 Tenn. 77, 41 S. W. 335, holding metes and bounds control estimated acreage; dissenting opinion in Eckford v. Eckford, 91 Iowa, 64, 58 N. W. 1096, 26 L. R. A. 374, majority admitting extrinsic proof to show what quarter decedent owned. See 50 Am. St. Rep. 290, note.

Wills.— If latent ambiguity consist in misdescription, court may strike it out, if remainder sufficient, p. 217.

Reaffirmed in Decker v. Decker, 121 Ill. 352, 12 N. E. 755, and Huffman v. Young, 170 Ill. 296, 49 N. E. 572. Cited in 50 Am. St. Rep. 284, note.

Evidence.— Well-known map, to which all recorded conveyances refer, may be judicially noticed, p. 220.

Approved in Morris v. United States, 174 U. S. 269, 19 S. Ct. 678, holding that Dermott map was the one intended to be annexed to act of 1797.

Wills.— Devise of lot 6, which testator did not own, held valid devise of lot 3, which he did own, p. 220.

Reaffirmed in Eckford v. Eckford, 91 Iowa, 58, 58 N. W. 1094, 26 L. R. A. 372 (see dissenting opinion in 91 Iowa, 69, 71, 58 N. W. 1097, 26 L. R. A. 375, 376), and Hawkins v. Young, 52 N. J. Eq. 510, 28 Atl. 511. Approved in Estate of Callaghan, 119 Cal. 575, 576, 51 Pac. 861, 862, 39 L. R. A. 690, 691, holding parol evidence is inadmissible where there is no question of misdescription or identity. See 50 Am. St. Rep. 298, note.

Distinguished in Ehrman v. Hoskins, 67 Miss. 194, 19 Am. St. Rep. 298, 6 So. 777, holding parol evidence inadmissible to show wrong lot was described; Wildberger v. Cheek, 94 Va. 527, 27 S. E. 445, holding children omitted from the class specifically enumerated, did not take.

117 U. S. 228-232, 29 L. 858, BARNEY v. WINONA, ETC., R. R.

Courts.— Opinion on matters obiter the issue, may be reconsidered on second appeal, p. 231.

Reaffirmed in Donnelly v. United States Cordage Co., 66 Fed. 615, Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Sanders, 46 Fed. 244, and Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Sanders, 47 Fed. 605. Approved in Thatcher v. Gottlieb, 59 Fed. 873, 19 U. S. App. 469, where facts are substantially the same, court is bound by former decision; Clark v. Hershy, 52 Ark. 480, 12 S. W. 1078, holding questions not presented on first appeal may be reviewed; dissenting opinion in Wright v. Carson Water Co., 23 Nev. 50, 42 Pac. 200, majority holding, where facts are not changed, court is bound by former decision.

Public lands.— "Granted lands" and "indemnity lands," in railroad grant, defined and explained, p. 232.

Approved in Wisconsin R. R. v. Price County, 133 U. S. 513, 33 L. 695, 10 S. Ct. 347, United States v. Missouri, etc., Ry., 141 U. S. 375, 35 L. 771, 12 S. Ct. 19, and New Orleans, etc., Ry. v. Parker, 143 U. S. 58, 36 L. 70, 12 S. Ct. 369, all holding title to indemnity lands does not pass until their selection is approved by secretary of interior; Wisconsin, etc., R. Co. v. Forsythe, 43 Fed. 888, until indemnity lands are selected, title remains in United States; Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Amacker, 58 Fed. 54, holding party was entitled to perfect his title; United States v. Winona, etc., R. Co., 67 Fed. 952, 967, 32 U. S. App. 272, holding lands pre-empted at time map of location is filed are exempted from grant; St. Paul, etc., Ry. v. Sage, 71 Fed. 46, 50, 36 U. S. App. 340, holding act, in absence of filing of map, did not withdraw lands; Southern Pac. R. R. v. Wood, 124 Cal. 488, 57 Pac. 398, holding filing of map did not perfect title to indemnity lands; Jackson v. La Moure County, 1 N. Dak. 239, 240, 46 N. W. 450, indemnity lands are not taxable until their selection is approved by secretary of interior; Northern Pac. R. R. v. Barnes, 2 N. Dak. 365, 51 N. W. 406, arguendo.

Public lands.— Act of 1865, granting lands to Minnesota, reserved the "granted" not the "indemnity" lands, p. 232.

Reaffirmed in St. Paul, etc., Ry. v. Greenalgh, 139 U. S. 21, 35 L. 73, 11 S. Ct. 396.

117 U. S. 233-235, 29 L. 890, COFFEY v. UNITED STATES.

Courts.— Practice in suits in rem, in Federal courts, was not changed by process act of 1872, p. 235.

Approved in United States v. Molloy, 31 Fed. 23, holding defendant, under Federal statutes, was not entitled to a new trial; United States v. Fifty Boxes, 92 Fed. 602, holding R. S., § 914, does not require Federal court to follow State statute as to manner of taking depositions in proceedings in rem.

117 U. S. 236-241, 29 L. 888, PHELPS v. OAKS.

Courts.— R. S., § 914, establishing State practice in Federal courts, does not require them to renounce a jurisdiction lawfully attaching under act of Congress, p. 239.

Reaffirmed in O'Connell v. Reed, 56 Fed. 534. Approved in Southern Pac. Co. v. Denton, 146 U. S. 209, 36 L. 945, 13 S. Ct. 47, and Mexican Central Ry. v. Pinkney, 149 U. S. 206, 37 L. 704, 13 S. Ct. 864, both holding Texas statute giving to special appearance the effect of a general appearance, is not binding on Federal courts; Campbell v. Haverhill, 155 U. S. 615, 39 L. 282, 15 S. Ct. 219, holding statutes of limitation of several States apply to actions at law for infringement of patent; In re Rugheimer, 36 Fed. 373, holding institution of condemnation proceedings by petition of agent of United States, was proper; Nat. Cash-Register Co. v. Leland, 77 Fed. 243, holding act of 1892 merely provided an additional mode of taking depositions; Chappell v. United States, 81 Fed. 767, holding question of damages was properly submitted to jury.

Courts.— Admission of landlord as defendant in ejectment against tenant was proper under Missouri practice, but this need not divest Circuit Court's jurisdiction from diverse citizenship of original defendants, p. 241.

Reaffirmed in Hardenbergh v. Ray, 151 U. S. 118, 38 L. 95, 14 S. Ct. 306. Approved in Baltimore, etc., Loan Assn. v. Alderson, 90 Fed. 147, 61 U. S. App. 645, upholding appointment of receiver for property outside of jurisdiction; Rock Island Nat. Bank v. Thompson, 173 Ill. 600, 64 Am. St. Rep. 141, 50 N. E. 1091, holding lien of Federal judgment is co-extensive with its territorial jurisdiction; Bland v. Fluman, 29 Fed. 673, holding parties could intervene regardless of citizenship; Jarboe v. Temple, 38 Fed. 217, holding subsequent transfer of cause of action will not divest jurisdiction; Burnham v. First Nat. Bank, 53 Fed. 166, holding citizenship of substituted parties cannot give right of removal; Minneapolis v. Reum, 56 Fed. 581, State statute giving elective franchise does not affect status of alien; Wetherby v. Stinson, 62 Fed. 176, holding defendant, by disclaiming, was not dismissed from case; Wheeling Bridge, etc., Ry. v. Cochran, 68 Fed. 144, holding Federal courts should follow State practice; Society of Shakers v. Watson, 68 Fed. 736, holding subsequent intervention of executrix did not oust jurisdiction; Sioux City, etc., Warehouse Co. v. Trust Co., 82 Fed. 128, 49 U. S. App. 533, holding subsequent introduction of parties will not oust jurisdiction; Mitchell v. Smale, 140 U. S. 409, 35 L. 443, 11 S. Ct. 820 (see dissenting opinion, 140 U. S. 416, 35 L. 446, 11 S. Ct. 840), arguendo.

Parties.— Court may allow stranger to intervene pro interesse suo, p. 241.

Approved in Osborne v. Barge, 30 Fed. 806, holding party could intervene in equitable action, though he would have had a remedy at law; Compton v. Jesup, 68 Fed. 279, 31 U. S. App. 486, holding court could compel any person claiming an interest to come in.

117 U. S. 241-254, 29 L. 868, EX PARTE ROYALL.

Courts.— Circuit Court may release on habeas corpus State prisoner, held contrary to Federal Constitution, p. 250.

Reaffirmed in In re Ah Jow, 12 Sawy. 91, 29 Fed. 183, and Ex parte Jervey, 66 Fed. 959. Approved in In re Loney, 134 U. S. 377, 33 L. 951, 10 S. Ct. 586, discharging person arrested for perjury in testifying upon a contested election of congressman; In re Mills, 135 U. S. 269, 34 L. 110, 10 S. Ct. 764, granting writ where sentence was unconstitutional; In re Chapman, 156 U. S. 215, 39 L. 402, 15 S. Ct. 332, refusing writ; In re Neagle, 14 Sawy. 245, 39 Fed. 842, 5 L. R. A. 83, discharging United States marshal arrested under State process; In re Reinitz, 39 Fed. 205, 4 L. R. A. 237, releasing extradited person arrested under State process, before he could return; In re Beine, 42 Fed. 546, releasing agent imprisoned for selling liquor; In re White, 43 Fed. 914, 11 L. R. A. 285, releasing agent citizen of another State, soliciting without a license; Ex parte Conway, 48 Fed. 77, releasing person imprisoned for act done under Federal authority; In re Waite, 81 Fed. 362, releasing officer of United States charged with crime in State court; dissenting opinion in Mahon v. Justice, 127 U. S. 718, 32 L. 289, 8 S. Ct. 1214, majority refusing to discharge on habeas corpus person abducted to another State and arrested; In re Ladd, 74 Fed. 34, and United States v. Rauscher, 119 U. S. 431, 30 L. 433, 7 S. Ct. 246, arguendo. See 10 Am. St. Rep. 210, note.

Courts.— But such release is discretionary, to be subordinated to special circumstances requiring immediate action, p. 253.

Reaffirmed in Ex parte Mirzan, 119 U. S. 586, 30 L. 513, 6 S. Ct. 342, Ex parte Hanson, 11 Sawy. 661, 28 Fed. 130, United States v. Ronan, 33 Fed. 119, 120, In re Christensen, 43 Fed. 243, 244, In re Van Vliet, 43 Fed. 768, 10 L. R. A. 454, In re King, 51 Fed. 436, United States v. Chapel, 54 Fed. 140, In re Huse, 79 Fed. 306, 308, 48 U. S. App. 321, 324, In re Grice, 79 Fed. 633, In re Alexander, 84 Fed. 633, Nesbit v. Hert, 91 Fed. 125, and Eaton v. West Virginia,

91 Fed. 766, 61 U. S. App. 676. Approved in Ex parte Royall, 117 U. S. 255, 29 L. 872, 6 S. Ct. 742, refusing to discharge prisoner in advance of trial; Ex parte Fonda, 117 U. S. 518, 29 L. 994, 6 S. Ct. 848, denying petition; In re Terry, 128 U. S. 302, 32 L. 408, 9 S. Ct. 78, reprinted in 13 Sawy. 461, holding Supreme Court not required to exercise power to inquire into restraint of any person; In re Neagle, 135 U. S. 74, 34 L. 75, 10 S. Ct. 672, 14 Sawy. 315, discharging United States marshal from State custody; In re Duncan, 139 U. S. 454, 35 L. 222, 11 S. Ct. 575, refusing to interfere pending appeal; In re Wood, 140 U. S. 289, 35 L. 509, 11 S. Ct. 742, holding that question should have been raised and determined by trial court; Cook v. Hart, 146 U. S. 194, 195, 36 L. 940, 13 S. Ct. 43, 44, and In re Frederich, 149 U. S. 75, 77, 37 L. 656, 657, 13 S. Ct. 795, 796, in absence of special circumstances, person should be compelled to seek review by writ of error; New York v. Eno, 155 U. S. 92, 39 L. 82, 15 S. Ct. 31, declining writ, where it did not appear that case was urgent; In re Chapman, 156 U. S. 216, 217, 39 L. 402, 403, 15 S. Ct. 332, 333, courts are reluctant to interfere with proceedings not finally determined; Washington v. Coovert, 164 U. S. 702, 41 L. 1182, 17 S. Ct. 1000, discharging writ; Iasigi v. Van De Carr, 166 U. S. 394, 41 L. 1049, 17 S. Ct. 596, upholding order of District Court dismissing writ; Whitten v. Tomlinson, 160 U. S. 240, 241, 242, 40 L. 411, 412, 16 S. Ct. 301, 302, Baker v. Grice, 169 U. S. 290, 42 L. 750, 18 S. Ct. 325, and Tinsley v. Anderson, 171 U. S. 105, 18 S. Ct. 807, dismissing writ issued before trial; Fitts v. McGhee, 172 U. S. 532, 533, 19 S. Ct. 275, 276; dissolving injunction of Circuit Court restraining prosecution of indictments in State court; Ohio v. Thomas, 173 U. S. 284, 285, 19 S. Ct. 456, releasing Federal officers arrested by State; Markuson v. Boucher, 175 U. S. 186, 20 S. Ct. 77, holding State judgments in criminal cases should not be reviewed on habeas corpus; Ex parte Yung Jon, 12 Sawy. 78, 28 Fed. 309, denying writ; In re Neagle, 14 Sawy. 249, 39 Fed. 845, 5 L. R. A. 85, discharging United States marshal arrested by State court; Ex parte Coy, 32 Fed. 916, holding relator could claim exemption from trial for any offense other than that in extradition papers; In re Reinitz, 39 Fed. 209, 4 L. R. A. 239, releasing extradited person arrested under State process before he could return; In re Converse, 42 Fed. 218, refusing to discharge prisoner; Ex parte Kieffer, 40 Fed. 400, issuing habeas corpus, right of appeal being an inadequate protection; United States v. Fiscus, 42 Fed. 397, refusing to discharge prisoner in advance of trial; In re Johnson, 46 Fed. 480, where prisoner confined under sentence of Federal court is released by State court, he may be rearrested; In re Fox, 51 Fed. 433, person under bail in Federal court has no right to be released from arrest by State court; In re Flinn, 57 Fed. 499, leaving constitutionality of act to State courts; In re Maldonado, 63 Fed. 827, holding that the error of State court could not be corrected by habeas corpus; In re Hacker, 73 Fed. 468, holding prisoner will not be discharged on habeas corpus for insufficiency of indictment; In re Krug, 79 Fed. 310, refusing to issue writ where it would interfere with execution of State laws; Campbell v. Waite, 88 Fed. 107, 59 U. S. App. 744, releasing Federal officer arrested while discharging his duty; United States v. M'Alcese, 93 Fed. 658, refusing relief where prisoner had exhausted his remedy in State court; In re Anderson, 94 Fed. 492, refusing to discharge United States marshal executing process outside of his district; In re Bradley, 96 Fed. 970, 971, refusing to discharge prisoner on ground that offense was committed at soldiers' home; King v. M'Lean Asylum, 64 Fed. 357, 21 U. S. App. 407, 26 L. R. A. 798, and In re Rowe, 77 Fed. 167, 40 U. S. App. 516, arguendo.

Courts.— Even after conviction, prisoner may be so discharged, in discretion of Circuit Court, p. 253.

117 U. S. 254-255, 29 L. 872, EX PARTE ROYALL.

Courts.— Federal court should not release, on habeas corpus, one unlawfully in State custody, in advance of trial, p. 255.

Reaffirmed in Ex parte Mirzan, 119 U. S. 586, 30 L. 513, 6 S. Ct. 342. Approved in New York v. Eno, 155 U. S. 95, 96, 39 L. 88, 15 S. Ct. 32, declining writ, where it did not appear that case was urgent; In re Chapman, 156 U. S. 217, 39 L. 403, 15 S. Ct. 333, courts are reluctant to interfere with proceedings not finally determined; United States v. Fiscus, 42 Fed. 397, refusing to discharge prisoner in advance of trial.

117 U. S. 255-271, 29 L. 892, APPLEGATE v. LEXINGTON, ETC., MIN. CO.

Ejectment.— Deed genuine in appearance, of antiquity, and free from suspicion, is admissible in evidence, p. 260.

Evidence.— Record of former suit is admissible to prove collateral fact of antiquity of deeds and custody, p. 261.

Evidence.— Recorder's apparently genuine certificate is competent evidence that deed recorded, p. 262.

Evidence.— Deed is admissible, if thirty years' old, in proper custody, and possession had thereunder, p. 263.

Reaffirmed in M'Claskey v. Barr, 47 Fed. 169, Templeton v. Luckett, 75 Fed. 258, 41 U. S. App. 392, Reuter v. Stuckart, 181 Ill. 538, 54 N. E. 1017, and Woods v. Bonner, 89 Tenn. 419, 18 S. W. 69. Approved in Fulkerson v. Holmes, 117 U. S. 397, 29 L. 918, 6 S. Ct. 784, admitting deed as an ancient document; Van Gunden v. Virginia, etc., Iron Co., 52 Fed. 845, 8 U. S. App. 229, admitting copy of unrecorded and lost deed.

Courts.— It is presumed that court of general jurisdiction had parties duly served by publication, where its order is on file, p. 271.

Approved in Guaranty Trust Co. v. Green Cove R. R., 139 U. S. 148, 35 L. 120, 11 S. Ct. 516, holding publication for four lunar months was insufficient; Foster v. Givens, 67 Fed. 691, 31 U. S. App. 626, holding recital in judgment, of service by publication, was sufficient; Boyd v. Roane, 49 Ark. 413, 414, 5 S. W. 708, holding presumption of service raised by record to be conclusive; Gregory v. Bartlett, 55 Ark. 36, 17 S. W. 345, where statute requires a warning order to appear of record, no presumption in favor of record will be indulged in its absence; McConnell v. Day, 61 Ark. 475, 33 S. W. 734, presuming judgment of domestic court of general jurisdiction in collateral inquiry, to be within jurisdiction; Porter v. Dooley, 66 Ark. 7, 49 S. W. 1085, refusing to set aside decree, because affidavit contained no certificate of magistracy; Seculovich v. Morton, 101 Cal. 677, 40 Am. St. Rep. 107, 36 Pac. 387, plaintiff, in spite of defendant's absence from State, could have had a commissioner appointed to convey the land; State v. Eddy, 10 Mont. 318, 25 Pac. 1034, holding taking of personal judgment, without embodying directions for sale, did not destroy lien of attachment; Amy v. Amy, 12 Utah, 314, 323, 326, 42 Pac. 1126, 1129, where judgment recites service by publication, presumption of court's jurisdiction is not overcome by defendant's non-residence. See 94 Am. Dec. 769, note. Smythe v. Henry, 41 Fed. 710, arguendo.

Miscellaneous.— Cited generally in Clarke v. Seay, — Ky. —, 51 S. W. 589.

117 U. S. 271-272, 29 L. 898, BOARDMAN v. TOFFEY.

Appeal.— General finding by court, without jury, precludes inquiry into special facts, p. 272.

Approved in Bowden v. Burnham, 59 Fed. 754, 19 U. S. App. 448, and Fourth Nat. Bank v. Belleville, 83 Fed. 675, 58 U. S. App. 629, an assignment of error upon a general finding by court, without a jury, raises no question for review; Burrows v. Niblack, 84 Fed. 112, 53 U. S. App. 715, holding, under Illinois statute, motion in arrest of judgment in assumpsit, rendered after waiver of jury, will not lie, where finding is general.

Miscellaneous.— Miscited in Boyd v. Roane, 49 Ark. 414, 5 S. W. 708.

117 U. S. 272-275, 29 L. 897, JEFFERSON v. DRIVER.

Removal for local prejudice is only obtainable where all defendants of different citizenship from plaintiffs, p. 274.

Reaffirmed in Rosenthal v. Coates, 148 U. S. 146, 37 L. 400, 13 S. Ct. 577, Thouron v. East Tennessee, etc., Ry., 38 Fed. 676, and Adelbert College v. Toledo, etc., Ry., 47 Fed. 845. Approved in Lawson v. Richmond, etc., R. R., 112 N. C. 397, 17 S. E. 172, where prerequisites for removal do not exist, State court may decline to permit it; Baird v. Richmond, etc., R. R., 113 N. C. 608, 18 S. E. 699, Circuit Court, on being satisfied of its jurisdiction, can order removal of suit.

Distinguished in Whelan v. New York, etc., R. Co., 35 Fed. 857, 1 L. R. A. 71, and n., holding act of 1887 repeals subd. 3, § 639, R. S.; Bonner v. Meikle, 77 Fed. 489, under act of 1887-1888, it is not necessary, where all plaintiffs are citizens of State where suit is brought, that all defendants be citizens of different States.

Removal of separable controversy, provided in R. S., § 639, does not apply to removal for local prejudice, p. 274.

Reaffirmed in Cambria Iron Co. v. Ashburn, 118 U. S. 57, 30 L. 61, 6 S. Ct. 930. Cited in Young v. Parker, 132 U. S. 270, 33 L. 353, 10 S. Ct. 77, arguendo.

Removal.— Purchaser pendente lite, made party, is subject to disabilities of other parties, as respects removal, p. 274.

Approved in Farmers, etc., Nat. Bank v. Schuster, 86 Fed. 165, 52 U. S. App. 620, one intervening, after mistrial in State court, cannot have cause removed.

117 U. S. 275-279, 29 L. 899, SLOANE v. ANDERSON.

Removal.— Joint action in tort is not rendered separable by separate answers and defenses, p. 279.

Reaffirmed in Fidelity Ins. Co. v. Huntington, 117 U. S. 281, 29 L. 899, 6 S. Ct. 734, Plymouth Min. Co. v. Amadore Canal Co., 118 U. S. 270, 30 L. 234, 6 S. Ct. 1037, Little v. Giles, 118 U. S. 601, 30 L. 271, 7 S. Ct. 35, Thorn, etc., Hedge Co. v. Fuller, 122 U. S. 543, 30 L. 1237, 7 S. Ct. 1267, Graves v. Corbin, 132 U. S. 588, 33 L. 468, 10 S. Ct. 202, Louisville, etc., R. R. v. Wangelin, 132 U. S. 601, 33 L. 476, 10 S. Ct. 204, Torrence v. Shedd, 144 U. S. 531, 36 L. 531, 12 S. Ct. 727, Powers v. Chesapeake, etc., Ry., 169 U. S. 97, 42 L. 675, 18 S. Ct. 266, Rumsey v. Call, 28 Fed. 771, Southworth v. Reid, 36 Fed. 452, Stanbrough v. Cook, 38 Fed. 373, 3 L. R. A. 402, Ames v. Chicago, etc., Ry., 39 Fed. 683, State v. Columbus, etc., Ry., 48 Fed. 628, and O'Harrow v. Henderson, 52 Fed. 769. Approved in Core v. Vinal, 117 U. S. 348, 29 L. 913, 6 S. Ct. 767, holding separable controversy cannot arise when defendants in trespass plead jointly; Brooks v. Clark, 119 U. S. 511, 30 L. 485, 7 S. Ct. 303, holding that controversy was not a separable one; Winnemans v. Edgington, 27 Fed. 326, holding cause not separable when all defendants are interested adversely to defendant; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Brown, 32 Fed. 338, holding no separable controversy for purpose of removal exists in action against principal and surety on bond; Seddon v. Virginia, etc., Iron Co., 36 Fed. 9, 1 L. R. A. 110, holding defendants sued jointly must be regarded as real parties in interest; Sexton v. Seelye, 39 Fed. 705, holding neither joint defendant may remove, on ground that he might have been sued separately; Burnham v. First Nat. Bank, 53 Fed. 166, 10 U. S. App. 485, holding non-resident defendant in replevin, substituted for sheriff, cannot remove; Thompson v. Chicago, etc., Ry., 60 Fed. 774, holding failure of defendants to join in petition, fatal to removal, cause not being separable; In re The Jarnecke Ditch, 69 Fed. 170, holding cause not made separable by filing of conflicting separate defenses; Warax v. Cincinnati, etc., Ry., 72 Fed. 640, holding joinder of resident defendant, to prevent removal, must be affirmatively shown; Creagh v. Equitable Life Ins. Co., 88 Fed. 3, holding one of several joint defendants cannot remove, on ground of separable controversy as to lien; Zeller v. Martin, 84 Wis. 6, 54 N. W. 331, holding defendant cannot insist upon change of venue, not desired by joint and several co-defendants; Wetherby v. Stinson, 62 Fed. 176, 18 U. S. App. 714, dismissing suit, although defendant co-citizen of complainant, filed disclaimer; Woodrum v. Clay, 33 Fed. 899, and Kaitel v. Wylie, 38 Fed. 867, when plaintiff elects to sue jointly, defendants cannot make action several; Dow v. Bradstreet Co., 46 Fed. 826, holding allegations of complaint true, in determining whether cause is separable; Brown v. Coxe, 75 Fed. 690, and Moore v. Los Angeles, etc., Steel Co., 89 Fed. 78, both holding on plaintiff's election to sue jointly, neither defendant can treat action as several, for removal purposes; Deere v. Chicago, etc., Ry., 85 Fed. 881, holding plaintiff may sue jointly, although motive is to prevent removal; Weller v. J. B. Pace T. Co., 32 Fed. 862, arguendo.

Distinguished in Fergason v. Chicago, etc., Ry., 63 Fed. 178, holding cause of action against railroad and employees, for negligence, separable.

117 U. S. 280-282, 29 L. 898, FIDELITY INS. CO. v. HUNTINGTON.

Removal cannot be had for separable controversies, on creditor's bill to subject incumbered property to lienholders, p. 281.

Reaffirmed in Young v. Parker, 132 U. S. 270, 33 L. 353, 10 S. Ct. 76, Rosenthal v. Coates, 148 U. S. 147, 37 L. 400, 13 S. Ct. 577, and Turnbull Wagon Co. v. Linthicum Carriage Co., 80 Fed. 5. Approved in Little v. Giles, 118 U. S. 601, 30 L. 271, 7 S. Ct. 35, Graves v. Corbin, 132 U. S. 588, 33 L. 468, 10 S. Ct. 201, Torrence v. Shedd, 144 U. S. 530, 532, 36 L. 531, 12 S. Ct. 727, 728, Rumsey v. Call, 28 Fed. 771, Hax v. Caspar, 31 Fed. 500, Stanbrough v. Cook, 38 Fed. 873, 3 L. R. A. 402, Ames v. Chicago, etc., Ry., 39 Fed. 883, 884, In re San Antonia, etc., Ry., 44 Fed. 145, State v. Columbus, etc., R. Co., 48 Fed. 628, and Thurber v. Miller, 67 Fed. 375, 32 U. S. App. 209, all holding filing of separate answers by defendants jointly sued, does not create separate controversies; Brooks v. Clark, 119 U. S. 511, 30 L. 485, 7 S. Ct. 303, holding that controversy was not a separable one; Bellaire v. Baltimore, etc., R. R., 146 U. S.

112, 36 L. 341, 13 S. Ct. 17, petition of city against lessor and lessee, to condemn land, is not a separable controversy between lessee and plaintiff; Thompson v. Dixon, 28 Fed. 6, remanding cause to State court; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Brown, 32 Fed. 339, holding no separable controversy for purposes of removal exists, in action against principal and surety on bond; Anderson v. Appleton, 32 Fed. 859, holding action to establish a will was a single controversy; Woodrum v. Clay, 33 Fed. 899, when plaintiff elects to sue jointly, defendants cannot make action several; Bissell v. Canada, etc., Ry., 39 Fed. 226, holding petition failed to show a separable controversy between mortgagee and lien claimants; Welder v. Virginia, etc., Iron Co., 46 Fed. 681, holding incidental averments of indebtedness did not constitute a separable controversy; Adelbert College v. Toledo, etc., Ry., 47 Fed. 846, in suit to assert lien of certain railroad equipment bonds, trustees under mortgage cannot remove cause; Shaver v. Hardin, 30 Fed. 802, and Marsh v. Atlanta, etc., R. Co., 53 Fed. 168, holding there was no separable controversy; Sweeney v. Grand Island, etc., R. Co., 61 Fed. 6, suit to enforce mechanic's lien on railroad, was not a separable controversy between plaintiff and railroad; Garner v. Second Nat. Bank, 66 Fed. 871, where defendants are citizens of different State from plaintiff, any one of them may remove cause; In re The Jarnecke Ditch, 69 Fed. 169, 170, 171, holding cause not made separable by filing of conflicting defenses; Davis v. County Court, 88 Fed. 706, holding suit for injunctions was not separable; Alkire Grocery Co. v. Richesin, 91 Fed. 84, holding that amount claimed by judgment creditor determined jurisdiction of court; Springer v. Sheets, 115 N. C. 379, 20 S. E. 470, where complete relief cannot be had without the presence of all defendants, there is no separable controversy; State v. Adams, 9 Ohio C. C. 24, holding that there was a single cause of action; Merchants, etc., Press Co. v. Insurance Co., 151 U. S. 382, 38 L. 208, 14 S. Ct. 371, and Insurance Cos. v. Carrier Cos., 91 Tenn. 542, 19 S. W. 756, in action against carrier, there is no separable controversy as to his insurers; Weller v. J. B. Pace Tobacco Co., 32 Fed. 862, arguendo.

Distinguished in Foster v. Chesapeake, etc., Ry., 47 Fed. 378, 379, removing controversy as to priority of liens; Ferguson v. Chicago, etc., Ry., 63 Fed. 178, holding cause of action against railroad and employees, for negligence, separable.

117 U. S. 282-288, 29 L. 905, KLEINSCHMIDT v. McANDREWS.

Exception to ruling sustaining non-suit is an exception within Montana code, p. 286.

Reaffirmed in Emerson v. Eldorado Ditch Co., 18 Mont. 254, 44 Pac. 971, and McKay v. Montana Union Ry., 13 Mont. 20, 31 Pac. 1001. Approved in Lalande v. McDonald, 2 Idaho, 287, 13 Pac. 348, holding appeal will lie from judgment of non-suit.

Exceptions, bill of, may include matters previous to final judgment; e. g., testimony on which non-suit based, p. 286.

Appeal.— Montana law, limiting time for appeals, does not apply to ruling sustaining non-suit, p. 287.

Reaffirmed in Gilliam v. Black, 16 Mont. 219, 40 Pac. 304.

Fraudulent conveyances.— Bill of sale, at 9 o'clock, p. m., followed by possession, 4 a. m., is "immediate delivery," p. 288.

Cited in 97 Am. Dec. 346, note.

117 U. S. 288–312, 29 L. 880, THE CHEROKEE TRUST FUNDS.

Indians.— United States has, by treaties, recognized Cherokees as one tribe or nation, p. 295.

Approved in Mehlin v. Ice, 56 Fed. 16, 19, 12 U. S. App. 305, holding judgments of courts of Cherokee Nation entitled to same respect as those of territorial courts.

Indians.— Cherokees, in North Carolina, left their nation by refusal to remove, and are State citizens, p. 309.

Approved in United States v. Boyd, 68 Fed. 578, 580, 582, 584, entertaining suit by United States, as guardian of North Carolina Cherokees, to protect their interests; State v. Newell, 84 Me. 466, 24 Atl. 943, holding Indians, resident within State, are not "Indian Tribes;" In re Narragansett Indians, 20 R. I. 781, 40 Atl. 372, where tribe of Indians has ceased to exercise the functions of government, State may terminate its tribal existence.

Indians.— North Carolina Cherokees were entitled to no share in Cherokee annuity fund, p. 312.

117 U. S. 312–327, 29 L. 873, PHŒNIX TRUST CO. v. ERIE, ETC., TRANSPORTATION CO.

Insurance.— At common law, carrier's right of subrogation could only be asserted in insured's name, p. 321.

Approved in United States v. American Tobacco Co., 166 U. S. 474, 41 L. 1083, 17 S. Ct. 621, holding that action was properly brought in name of insured; Southern, etc., Telegraph Co. v. Watts, 66 Fed. 464, 25 U. S. App. 214, where loss has been paid, action is properly brought in name of assured.

Carrier is liable for value of goods at destination, in absence of stipulation contra, p. 322.

Approved in East Tennessee, etc., R. R. v. Kelly, 91 Tenn. 707, 30 Am. St. Rep. 906, 20 S. W. 314, 17 L. R. A. 696, and n., holding measure of damages was value of goods at place where stored.

Carriers.— Exemption from liability for negligence is void, as against public policy, p. 322.

Reaffirmed in Liverpool Steam Co. v. Phenix Ins. Co., 129 U. S. 442, 32 L. 792, 9 S. Ct. 472, Woodburn v. Cincinnati, etc., Ry., 40 Fed. 734, Thomas v. Lancaster Mills, 71 Fed. 485, 34 U. S. App. 404, Trenton, etc., Ry. v. Guarantors' Liability Co., 60 N. J. L. 252, 37 Atl. 611, 44 L. R. A. 215, and Davis v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 93 Wis. 481, 57 Am. St. Rep. 939, 67 N. W. 19, 33 L. R. A. 658. Approved in The G. R. Booth, 171 U. S. 460, 19 S. Ct. 12, holding carrier for injury from water, due to explosion; The Brantford City, 29 Fed. 396, holding that stipulations as to negligence were invalid; Voight v. Baltimore, etc., Ry., 79 Fed. 563, holding void, contract of express company exempting railroad from liability.

Insurance on ship or cargo covers loss by perils of sea, though occasioned by crew's negligence, p. 323.

Reaffirmed in California Ins. Co. v. Union Compress Co., 133 U. S. 414, 33 L. 737, 10 S. Ct. 371, Hartford Ins. Co. v. Chicago, etc., Ry., 175 U. S. 99, 20 S. Ct. 36, and The Barnstable, 84 Fed. 901. Approved in Constable v. Nat. Steamship Co., 154 U. S. 62, 38 L. 910, 14 S. Ct. 1067 (see dissenting opinion in 154 U. S. 101, 38 L. 923, 14 S. Ct. 1081), upholding stipulation that company should not be liable for fire happening after unloading; State v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 36 Fed. 656, upholding release by widow of her claim; The Ontario, 37 Fed. 224, holding insured could not recover for expenses in rescuing vessel from peril, brought about by negligence in navigation; Pelzer Mfg. Co. v. St. Paul, etc., Ins. Co., 41 Fed. 274, holding failure to mention fact of release of railroad, would not invalidate policy; Earnmoor, etc., Co. v. Union Ins. Co., 44 Fed. 376, holding ordinary negligence of shipmaster no defense; Liverpool, etc., Ins. Co. v. M'Neill, 89 Fed. 138, 59 U. S. App. 511, holding stipulation did not exempt from loss due to carrier's negligence; South Carolina, etc., R. Co. v. Carolina, etc., R. Co., 93 Fed. 560, construing contract for exemption from liability for negligence; Louisville Ins. Co. v. Monarch, 99 Ky. 593, 36 S. W. 566, negligence of owners and officers of boat is no defense by insurance company; Casualty Ins. Co.'s Cases, 82 Md. 576, 577, 34 Atl. 786, 38 L. R. A. 117, and n., holding carrier could insure against loss due to his own negligence; Minneapolis, etc., Ry. v. Home Ins. Co., 64 Minn. 69, 66 N. W. 135, and Kansas City, etc., R. Co. v. Southern, etc., News Co., 151 Mo. 385, 387, 74 Am. St. Rep. 552, 553, 52 S. W. 207, 208, 45 L. R. A. 384, 385, holding carrier could insure against loss due to negligence of his servants. See 36 Am. St. Rep. 852, note; Savannah, etc., Ins. Co. v. Pelzer Mfg. Co., 60 Fed. 43, note.

Insurance.— Carrier's stipulation for benefit of insurance obtained by shipper, limits insurer's rights, p. 325.

Reaffirmed in Orient Ins. Co. v. Adams, 123 U. S. 73, 31 L. 66, 8 S. Ct. 71, Wager v. Providence Ins. Co., 150 U. S. 108, 37 L. 1017, 14 S. Ct. 58, Leavitt v. Canadian Pac. Ry., 90 Me. 162, 37 Atl. 889, 38

L. R. A. 154. Approved in Liverpool Steam Co. v. Phenix Ins. Co., 129 U. S. 462, 32 L. 799, 9 S. Ct. 489, holding steamship, connecting carrier, had not right to insurance; North American Ins. Co. v. Hibernia Ins. Co., 140 U. S. 573, 35 L. 521, 11 S. Ct. 911, upholding contract of reinsurance for full amount; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Manheim Ins. Co., 56 Fed. 303, holding insurance company, and not carriers, liable; Ginn v. Ogdensburg Transit Co., 85 Fed. 986, 57 U. S. App. 406, upholding limitation in bill of lading, as to time within which action must be brought; Stephens v. Southern Pac. Co., 109 Cal. 95, 50 Am. St. Rep. 23, 41 Pac. 786, 29 L. R. A. 755, upholding covenant that lessor shall not be liable for damage by fire; Sun Ins. Office v. Merz, 63 N. J. L. 370, 43 Atl. 695, holding that contract of reinsurance was lawful; Fayerweather v. Phenix Ins. Co., 118 N. Y. 328, 23 N. E. 193, 6 L. R. A. 806, holding provision in bill cut off insurer's right of subrogation; Insurance Co. v. Easton, 73 Tex. 173, 11 S. W. 181, 3 L. R. A. 427, and n., upholding stipulation that carrier shall have benefit of insurance; Kidd v. Greenwich Ins. Co., 35 Fed. 352, and The Iniziativa, 50 Fed. 231, arguendo.

Distinguished in The Roanoke, 59 Fed. 165, 18 U. S. App. 407, holding exceptions in bill of lading did not exempt owner of vessel from a general average claim; Willock v. Pennsylvania R. R., 166 Pa. St. 191, 192, 45 Am. St. Rep. 678, 679, 30 Atl. 949, 950, 27 L. R. A. 230, 231, holding shipper could recover, though not insuring.

Insurer paying total loss, is subrogated only to assured's rights of action against third persons, p. 326.

Reaffirmed in Chicago, etc., R. R. v. Pullman Car Co., 139 U. S. 88, 35 L. 101, 11 S. Ct. 493, St. Louis, etc., Ry. v. Commercial Ins. Co., 139 U. S. 235, 35 L. 158, 11 S. Ct. 557, Leavitt v. Canadian Pac. Ry., 90 Me. 161, 165, 37 Atl. 888, 890, 38 L. R. A. 154, 155, Platt v. Richmond, etc., R. R., 108 N. Y. 364, 15 N. E. 395, and Home Mutual Ins. Co. v. O. R. & N. Co., 20 Or. 573, 23 Am. St. Rep. 154, 26 Pac. 859. Approved in The Bristol, 29 Fed. 870, restricting insurer to what owner could recover; The Young America, 30 Fed. 800, allowing insurers and libellants to share ratably in residue; Phenix Ins. Co. v. Chadbourne, 31 Fed. 301, holding receipt of insurance, taken as security, extinguished debt; Force v. Providence, etc., Ins. Co., 35 Fed. 775, holding that collection of freight did not discharge insurance pro tanto; Savannah, etc., Ins. Co. v. Pelzer Mfg. Co., 60 Fed. 42, holding covenant that railroad should not be liable to warehouseman for fire, was binding on insurer; The Burlington, 73 Fed. 261, where there is total loss, property passes to insurer without a formal abandonment; Pacific Coast, etc., Co. v. Bancroft, etc., Co., 94 Fed. 192, holding insurance company not prevented by dissolution of partnership from maintaining suit in its name against carrier; Louisville, etc., Ry. v. Nicholai, 4 Ind. App. 125, 51 Am. St. Rep. 211, 30 N. E. 426, allowing party full amount of loss sustained; Lumbermen's, etc., Ins. Co. v. Kansas, etc., R. R., 149 Mo. 180, 50

S. W. 286, holding insurance company subrogated to rights of owner; American, etc., Ins. Co. v. Chicago, etc., Ry., 74 Mo. App. 106, sub-lessee, receiving benefits of parol lease, is estopped to deny its validity; Hartford Ins. Co. v. Chicago, etc., Ry., 175 U. S. 96, 20 S. Ct. 35, and Wachusett Nat. Bank v. Sioux City Stove Works, 62 Fed. 370, arguendo.

117 U. S. 327-336, 29 L. 901, GLASGOW v. LIPSE.

Payment in Confederate money, to Virginia executor, in 1862, in good faith, was valid, p. 334.

Approved in Washington v. Opie, 145 U. S. 221, 36 L. 684, 12 S. Ct. 824, upholding payment of mortgage bonds, made in Confederate notes, and acquiesced in by heirs; Hendry v. Benlisa, 37 Fla. 622, 20 So. 802, 34 L. R. A. 285, regarding payment during Civil War in Confederate money as full settlement.

Distinguished in Opie v. Castleman, 32 Fed. 514, 515, holding acceptance of payment in Confederate money, and investing same in Confederate bonds, was illegal.

Executors or administrators could not invest in Confederate securities, p. 334.

Cited in 12 Am. St. Rep. 315, note.

117 U. S. 336-340, 29 L. 904, NEW PROVIDENCE v. HALSEY.

Courts.— Circuit Court has no jurisdiction of suit on bonds, assigned to give Federal jurisdiction, p. 338.

Reaffirmed in Bernards Twp. v. Morrison, 133 U. S. 527, 33 L. 729, 10 S. Ct. 335.

Courts.— Transferee of negotiable bonds may sue in Federal court, though transferrer could not, p. 338.

Reaffirmed in Cross v. Allen, 141 U. S. 533, 35 L. 847, 12 S. Ct. 69. Cited in 51 Am. St. Rep. 857, note.

Municipal corporations.— Bond purchaser is entitled to rely on commissioners' decision as to amount issued, p. 338.

Approved in Fulton v. Riverton, 42 Minn. 397, 44 N. W. 258, holding recital by officers conclusive upon municipality.

Costs.— To stop costs, offer to allow judgment should be in open court, after notice, p. 339.

117 U. S. 340-345, 29 L. 907, RAND v. WALKER.

Parties.— In suit for assignment of dower, in lots jointly held, though legal title in one, both are necessary, p. 344.

Approved in Weller v. J. B. Pace Tobacco Co., 32 Fed. 862, holding cause being inseparable, not removable; Watkins v. Bryant, 91

Cal. 504, 27 Pac. 777, holding decree annulling deed of trust, not void as to creditors not made parties.

Distinguished in Thompson v. Dixon, 28 Fed. 6, remanding cause.

Removal of separable controversy is confined to parties "actually interested in such controversy," p. 345.

Approved in Merchants, etc., Press Co. v. North America Ins. Co., 151 U. S. 387, 38 L. 205, 14 S. Ct. 373, holding there was no right of removal on part of plaintiffs.

Courts.— Bill alleging Federal judgment ineffective as to one not party, raises no Federal question, p. 345.

117 U. S. 346-347, 29 L. 912, DUNPHY v. SULLIVAN.

Adverse possession for three years gave title in Montana, before 1877, p. 346.

Not cited.

117 U. S. 347-348, 29 L. 912, CORE v. VINAL.

Removable case, because of separable controversy, cannot arise on general issue, pleaded by defendants in tort action, p. 348.

Reaffirmed in Little v. Giles, 118 U. S. 601, 30 L. 271, 7 S. Ct. 35. Approved in Brooks v. Clark, 119 U. S. 511, 30 L. 485, 7 S. Ct. 303, holding that controversy was not a separable one; Weller v. J. B. Pace Tobacco Co., 32 Fed. 862, arguendo.

117 U. S. 348-355, 29 L. 909, MACKIN v. UNITED STATES.

Indictment.— Crime punishable in penitentiary is infamous, requiring presentment by grand jury, p. 354.

Reaffirmed in United States v. De Walt, 128 U. S. 393, 32 L. 486, 9 S. Ct. 111, In re Claasen, 140 U. S. 204, 35 L. 411, 11 S. Ct. 737, United States v. Johannesen, 35 Fed. 412, Ex parte M'Clusky, 40 Fed. 72, 73, 74, and United States v. Smith, 40 Fed. 757, 758, 759, 760. Approved in Ex parte Bain, 121 U. S. 13, 30 L. 853, 7 S. Ct. 787, holding falsifying of reports by bank cashier, an infamous crime; Parkinson v. United States, 121 U. S. 282, 30 L. 960, 7 S. Ct. 896, holding offenders against §§ 5511 and 5512, R. S., must be prosecuted by indictment; Medley, Petitioner, 134 U. S. 169, 33 L. 839, 10 S. Ct. 387, holding statute adding to punishment of death, solitary confinement until execution, is ex post facto; In re Mills, 135 U. S. 267, 34 L. 109, 10 S. Ct. 763, holding "punishable by imprisonment at hard labor," in act of 1889, embraces offenses which may, in the discretion of court, be punishable by imprisonment in a penitentiary; In re Bonner, 151 U. S. 257, 38 L. 152, 14 S. Ct. 326, after person is convicted and sentenced in Federal court, judge cannot adjudge that imprisonment be in State penitentiary; Bannon v. United States, 156 U. S. 466, 467, 39 L. 495, 496, 15 S. Ct. 468, 469, holding conspiracy to commit an offense against United States is not a felony; Wong Wing v. United States, 163 U. S. 234, 41 L. 142, 16 S. Ct. 979, act subjecting aliens coming to this country in spite of exclusion act to infamous punishment, must provide for a judicial trial; United States v. Harmon, 34 Fed. 873, holding bad, indictment for mailing of obscene matter; Ex parte Brown, 40 Fed. 83, an assault with an intent to kill is an infamous offense; United States v. Cobb, 43 Fed. 571, 573, one sentenced for less than a year, cannot be imprisoned in State prison; United States v. Sutton, 47 Fed. 130, declaring adultery to be an infamous crime; Ex parte Van Vranken, 47 Fed. 889, holding punishment "at hard labor" could only be inflicted by naval court-martial in cases punishable with death; United States v. Wong Dep Ken, 57 Fed. 211, holding imprisonment at hard labor renders crime "infamous;" United States v. Cadwallader, 59 Fed. 679, holding that statute defines three separate crimes; Bright v. Patton, 5 Mack. 534, 60 Am. Rep. 399, 400, officer may not arrest without warrant for misdemeanor after offense; Stokes v. United States, 60 Fed. 598, 23 U. S. App. 289, holding conviction for using mails to defraud, reviewable in Supreme Court; Gardes v. United States, 87 Fed. 185, holding, where statute provides imprisonment, "at hard labor" should not be added to sentence; Crum v. State, 148 Ind. 409, 47 N. E. 836, declaring larceny to be an infamous crime; Butler v. Wentworth, 84 Me. 32, 24 Atl. 458, 17 L. R. A. 766, and n., rendering imperative, a sentence of imprisonment, makes crime infamous; In re Kirby, 84 Fed. 607, disbarring attorney for offense for which Congress has provided infamous punishment, though not a felony; Harris v. Terry, 98 N. C. 134, 3 S. E. 746, charging postmaster with breaking mail is actionable as slander; dissenting opinion in Rosen v. United States, 161 U. S. 45, 40 L. 611, 16 S. Ct. 481, majority upholding indictment for mailing obscene matter; United States v. Van Leuven, 62 Fed. 68, arguendo.

117 U. S. 355–363, 29 L. 920, UNION PAC. RY. v. UNITED STATES.

Post-office.— Court of Claims finding as to amount due Union Pacific railway for mails, held sufficient, p. 360.

Railroads.— Omaha bridge is part of Union Pacific railway, for purpose of computing government transportation rates, p. 362.

Approved in Union Pac. Ry. v. Chicago, etc., Ry., 51 Fed. 323, 10 U. S. App. 98, upholding contract to let another company into the joint use of a bridge.

Railroad service in carrying local passenger, is not same as through passenger between same points, p. 363.

Reaffirmed in Texas Pac. Ry. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 231, 40 L. 951, 16 S. Ct. 680, and Kentucky, etc., Bridge Co. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 37 Fed. 632, 2 L. R. A. 326.

Approved in Ex parte Kœhler, 31 Fed. 320, carrier may reduce rate on long haul, under interstate commerce act; Ex parte Kœhler, 12 Sawy. 453, 454, 31 Fed. 319, 320, that there is competition to or from a particular place, justifies a carrier to charge less for a long than a short haul; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 43 Fed. 50, giving of party-rate tickets is not an unjust discrimination; Cleveland, etc., Ry. v. Closser, 126 Ind. 353, 22 Am. St. Rep. 597, 26 N. E. 161, 9 L. R. A. 757, and n., holding contract giving special rate to shipper, and providing for drawback, is not in itself illegal.

117 U. S. 363-365, 29 L. 920, STURGES v. UNITED STATES.

Taxation.— Repeal of legacy tax exempts legacy to which right had not accrued, p. 365.

Not cited.

117 U. S. 365-367, 29 L. 924, PHŒNIX LIFE INS. CO. v. WALRATH.

Removal.— Right to, lost by failure to act at first trial term, is not restored by amendment of pleadings, p. 366.

Approved in Stix Co. v. Keith, 90 Ala. 125, 7 So. 424, holding right of removal attaches on filing of a sufficient petition.

117 U. S. 367-370, 29 L. 923, EX PARTE PHŒNIX INS. CO.

Appeal.— Decrees, distinct as to parties, causes of action, or liabilities, cannot be joined to give appellate amount, p. 369.

Approved in Gibson v. Shufeldt, 122 U. S. 38, 30 L. 1087, 7 S. Ct. 1071, and Wheeler v. Cloyd, 134 U. S. 547, 33 L. 1012, 10 S. Ct. 604, in suit on distinct demands, defendant can appeal to Supreme Court only on those in which more than $5,000 is decreed; Walter v. Northeastern R. R., 147 U. S. 374, 37 L. 208, 13 S. Ct. 350, holding Circuit Court without jurisdiction of bill to enjoin collection of taxes upon distinct assessments, each less than $2,000; Hosford v. Germania Fire Ins. Co., 127 U. S. 402, 32 L. 197, 8 S. Ct. 1201, arguendo.

117 U. S. 370-373, 29 L. 913, VAN RISWICK v. SPALDING.

Fraudulent conveyances.— Action of mortgagee, taking security in satisfaction, and conveying to debtor's children, upheld, p. 373.

Not cited.

117 U. S. 373-378, 29 L. 950, YALE LOCK CO. v. SARGENT.

Patents.— Where essential feature of lock not used, or equivalent, held no infringement, p. 378.

Approved in Dryfoos v. Wiese, 124 U. S. 37, 31 L. 364, 8 S. Ct. 357, holding patent must be limited to mechanism described and claimed; Forncrook v. Root, 127 U. S. 181, 32 L. 99, 8 S. Ct. 1249, holding Forncrook patent for "improvement in sectional honey-frames" invalid for want of novelty; Smith v. Putnam, 45 Fed. 203, holding closet with two jets not infringed by closet with one jet; Reece, etc., Mach. Co. v. Globe, etc., Mach. Co., 61 Fed. 963, 21 U. S. App. 244, holding Reece patent for improvements in button-hole machines not infringed; Eagle, etc., Cremation Co. v. Elwood, 73 Fed. 485, to be equivalents there must be an identity of functions; Campbell, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Duplex, etc., Press Co., 86 Fed. 334, holding specifications cannot be referred to, to expand claim.

Distinguished generally in Everest v. Buffalo, etc., Oil Co., 31 Fed. 746.

117 U. S. 379-387, 29 L. 924, KERR v. SOUTH PARK COMMISSIONERS.

Appeal.— After term when decree entered, Circuit Court may permit evidence and charge to jury to be put in record, p. 383.

Approved in Wilson v. Riddle, 123 U. S. 615, 31 L. 283, 8 S. Ct. 259, what issues should be submitted to jury is within discretion of court.

Equity decree, reciting that verdict on law side had been set aside and second rendered, affirms such action, p. 384.

Eminent domain.— On park condemnation proceedings, evidence of adjoining sale thereafter, not evidence of prior value, p. 385.

Approved in Shoemaker v. United States, 147 U. S. 297, 305, 37 L. 184, 187, 13 S. Ct. 390, 393, in determining value of land, appraisers should exercise their own judgment; San Diego Land, etc., Co. v. Neale, 78 Cal. 75, 20 Pac. 378, enhancement of value of adjoining lands could not be considered.

117 U. S. 388-389, 29 L. 927, KERR v. SOUTH PARK COMMISSIONERS.

Adjudged in conformity with preceding case, q. v.

117 U. S. 389-401, 29 L. 915, FULKERSON v. HOLMES.

Evidence.— Deed sixty years old, produced by grantee's heirs, was properly admitted, p. 397.

Evidence.— Witness as to pedigree must be shown a relation of family by independent proof, p. 397.

Approved in Flora v. Anderson, 75 Fed. 234, holding rule is limited to declarations by relatives.

Evidence.— Declaration by grantor in ancient deed, that he was only heir, etc., is admissible, p. 399.

Approved in De Leon v. McMurray, 5 Tex. Civ. App. 283, 23 S. W. 1069, admitting declarations as to pedigree; Harman v. Stearns, 95

Va. 63, 27 S. E. 603, accepting recital in deed that grantor was a widow.

117 U. S. 401–405, 29 L. 914, HOYT v. RUSSELL.

Evidence.— Court will judicially notice the extent of its jurisdiction, p. 404.

Reaffirmed in Jones v. United States, 137 U. S. 214, 34 L. 696, 11 S. Ct. 84. Approved in Mills v. Green, 159 U. S. 658, 40 L. 295, 16 S. Ct. 135, judicially noticing a State constitutional convention; The James G. Swan, 50 Fed. 111, condemning vessel killing fur seals in Alaska waters; Kansas City, etc., R. R. v. Burge, 40 Kan. 737, 21 Pac. 589, judicially noticing county boundaries. See 89 Am. Dec. 679, 696, note.

Evidence.— Court should judicially notice whether certain act is in force at certain time, not require proof, p. 405.

Approved in United States v. Williams, 6 Mont. 391, 12 Pac. 856, taking judicial notice of regulations of secretary of interior as to cutting of timber. See 89 Am. Dec. 665, note.

Mines.— Query, whether after act of 1872, territory could add to requirements of notice of location, p. 405.

Approved in O'Donnell v. Glenn, 8 Mont. 255, 19 Pac. 305, upholding statute requiring declaratory statement to mining claim to be sworn to.

117 U. S. 406–410, 29 L. 928, SIOUX CITY R. R. v. CHICAGO RY.

Public lands.— Title to railroad grant relates back to date of act, but superior title might arise in lieu lands, p. 410.

Reaffirmed in Donahue v. Lake Superior Canal, etc., Co., 155 U. S. 387, 39 L. 195, 15 S. Ct. 116, and Sioux City, etc., R. R. v. United States, 159 U. S. 365, 367, 40 L. 182, 183, 16 S. Ct. 23, 24. Approved in Wisconsin R. R. v. Price County, 133 U. S. 513, 33 L. 695, 10 S. Ct. 347, until secretary of interior approves selection of indemnity lands, no title passes; Chicago, etc., Ry. v. United States, 159 U. S. 374, 375, 40 L. 185, 186, 16 S. Ct. 27, holding company estopped by decree in cited case; United States v. Southern Pac. R. R., 146 U. S. 595, 36 L. 1097, 13 S. Ct. 156, and Southern Pac. R. R. v. United States, 168 U. S. 42, 42 L. 374, 18 S. Ct. 25, upon acceptance of maps, rights of company in lands attached as of date of act; United States v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 14 Sawy. 68, 71, 39 Fed. 138, 140, holding company not having complied with conditions of grant, had no right to indemnity lands; United States v. Sioux City, etc., R. Co., 43 Fed. 619, 621, holding road was only entitled to such part of grant as was proportioned to part of road built; Wisconsin, etc., R. Co. v. Forsythe, 43 Fed. 888, holding no title had been acquired to indemnity lands, since they had never been selected; United States

v. Sioux City, etc., Ry., 46 Fed. 503, 504, where railroad failed to earn right to overlapping land, it reverted to United States; Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Stanley, 49 Fed. 264, holding full title passed at time of filing map of definite location; United States v. Winona, etc., R. Co., 67 Fed. 967, 968, 32 U. S. App. 272, considering exceptions from lands granted in indemnity limits; St. Paul, etc., Ry. v. Sage, 71 Fed. 46, 36 U. S. App. 340, holding lands within indemnity limits are not reserved until selected or withdrawn; McCarver v. Herzberg, 120 Ala. 531, 25 So. 4, holding grant was of equal undivided shares for benefit of each railroad, regardless of priority of location; Western Land Co. v. Hamblin, 79 Iowa, 546, 44 N. W. 808, holding first location, having failed to meet requirements of Congress, was not conclusive; Bowne v. Bilsland, 83 Iowa, 167, 49 N. W. 162, road not having been completed, lands reverted to United States; Sioux City, etc., Ry. v. Countryman, 83 Iowa, 180, 183, 49 N. W. 75, holding plaintiff could not claim land on uncompleted part of road as indemnity lands; United States v. Missouri, etc., Ry., 141 U. S. 375, 35 L. 771, 12 S. Ct. 19, State v. Sage, 75 Minn. 454, 78 N. W. 16, and Jackson v. La Moure County, 1 N. Dak. 240, 46 N. W. 450, holding title to Northern Pacific indemnity lands did not pass until selection by company, with approval of secretary of interior; Northern Pac. R. R. v. Barnes, 2 N. Dak. 365, 51 N. W. 403, considering legislative power of taxation.

117 U. S. 411-415, 29 L. 960, KNAPP v. HOMEOPATHIC, ETC., LIFE INS. CO.

Insurance.— Failure to elect upon courses prescribed upon default in premium, held to cancel life policy, p. 414.

Approved in Cravens v. New York, etc., Ins. Co., 148 Mo. 611, 71 Am. St. Rep. 646, 50 S. W. 526, it was a condition precedent to holder's right of a paid-up policy, that demand be made within six months; Schneider v. United States Life Ins. Co., 128 N. Y. 114, 20 Am. St. Rep. 729, 25 N. E. 322, holding failure to pay premium rendered policy void.

117 U. S. 415-419, 29 L. 919, MARSHALL v. HUBBARD.

Fraud.— False representations, to be actionable, must be intentional, and have caused injury, p. 418.

Approved in First Nat. Bank v. Marshall, etc., Bank, 83 Fed. 735, 54 U. S. App. 527, holding bank not estopped by representation of its officer; Thorp v. Smith, 18 Wash. 279, 51 Pac. 381, party reciting false consideration, bill thereby enabling agent to deceive principal, is not liable to latter.

Trial.— Instruction for plaintiff is proper, if evidence contra, with all inferences, is insufficient, p. 419.

Reaffirmed in Robertson v. Edelhoff, 132 U. S. 626, 33 L. 451, 10 S. Ct. 190, Au v. New York, etc., R. Co., 29 Fed. 83, Dwyer v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 52 Fed. 88, Colorado, etc., Min. Co. v. Turck, 54 Fed. 266, 12 U. S. App. 85, Sullivan v. Colby, 71 Fed. 466, 34 U. S. App. 432, Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Randolph, 78 Fed. 760, 47 U. S. App. 260, and Knapp v. Sioux Falls Nat. Bank, 5 Dak. 396, 40 N. W. 590. Approved in Smith v. United States, 151 U. S. 55, 38 L. 70, 14 S. Ct. 235, holding testimony offered by government had no legitimate tendency to prove murdered man was not an Indian; Sparf v. United States, 156 U. S. 100, 101, 39 L. 360, 361, 15 S. Ct. 292, 293, holding court could not peremptorily order jury to find defendant guilty of offense charged; Rosen v. United States, 161 U. S. 43, 40 L. 610, 16 S. Ct. 439, instructing jury as to principles applicable to the case made by the evidence; Southern Pac. Co. v. Johnson, 69 Fed. 566, 44 U. S. App. 1, holding evidence insufficient to establish negligence; United States v. Kuhl, 85 Fed. 627, refusing to submit case to jury where, upon a finding of guilty, a new trial would be granted; Marshall v. Harney Peak, etc., Mfg. Co., 1 S. Dak. 357, 47 N. W. 292, on application to take case from jury, evidence of opposite party is assumed to be true.

117 U. S. 419–430, 29 L. 930, LITTLEFIELD v. IMPROVEMENT FUND TRUSTEES.

States.— Ownership of certain Florida improvement bonds awarded to the trustees, pp. 420–430.

Cited in Union Trust Co. v. Southern Nav. Co., 130 U. S. 567, 32 L. 1043, 9 S. Ct. 607, arguendo.

117 U. S. 430–433, 29 L. 962, STONE v. SOUTH CAROLINA.

Removal.— State court is not bound to surrender jurisdiction until case for removal is made out, p. 432.

Reaffirmed in Burlington, etc., Ry. v. Dunn, 122 U. S. 516, 30 L. 1160, 7 S. Ct. 1264, Springer v. Howes, 69 Fed. 850, Southern Ry. v. Hudgins, 107 Ga. 337, 33 S. E. 443, Duncan v. St. Louis, etc., R. R., 49 La. Ann. 1702, 22 So. 924, Craven v. Turner, 82 Me. 336, 19 Atl. 865, and Baird v. Richmond, etc., R. R., 113 N. C. 608, 18 S. E. 700. Approved in Carson v. Hyatt, 118 U. S. 287, 30 L. 169, 6 S. Ct. 1054, holding question was one of fact to be determined by Circuit Court; Crehore v. Ohio, etc., Ry., 131 U. S. 243, 244, 33 L. 145, 9 S. Ct. 693, holding fatal defect in allegation of diverse citizenship cannot be corrected in Circuit Court; Winnemans v. Edington, 27 Fed. 326, if State court does not grant or refuse an order for removal of cause, no amendments to petition will be allowed; Smith v. Chicago, etc., Ry., 30 Fed. 723, denying motion to remand; Shedd v. Fuller, 36 Fed. 609, remanding cause where petition and bond was filed with clerk; Freeman v. Butler, 39 Fed. 3, holding Federal court did not obtain jurisdiction; Brown v. Murray, etc., Co., 43 Fed. 615, omission to ask State court to act on petition is no ground for remanding; Williams v. Massachusetts Ben. Assn., 47 Fed. 534, petitioning judge in vacation will not effect removal; Tod v. Cleveland, etc., Ry., 65 Fed. 148, 22 U. S. App. 707, holding petition for removal on account of local prejudice must show that more than $2,000 is involved; Monroe v. Williamson, 81 Fed. 984, 985, 986, 987, where petition showed a cause removable, jurisdiction of State court ceased; Dexter v. Sayward, 84 Fed. 299, holding Circuit Court cannot declare judgment of Circuit Court of Appeals void in a collateral action, though record fails to show facts necessary to warrant removal; Knott v. McGilvray, 124 Cal. 131, 56 Pac. 790, holding petition must disclose the right to remove the suit; Chambers v. Illinois, etc., R. R., 104 Iowa, 239, 73 N. W. 598, State court cannot dismiss cause, after filing of proper petition for removal; Roberts v. Chicago, etc., Ry., 48 Minn. 529, 531, 51 N. W. 479, 480, defendant filing petition for removal should direct attention of court to same; Stuart v. Bank of Staplehurst, 57 Neb. 576, 78 N. W. 299, State court should suspend action pending motion to remand in Circuit Court; Hickman v. Missouri, etc., Ry., 151 Mo. 653, 52 S. W. 353, where motion to remove is overruled, defendant cannot delay by protesting against jurisdiction; Winslow v. Collins, 110 N. C. 121, 14 S. E. 513, upon filing of bond and petition, jurisdiction of State court ceases; Larson v. Cox, 39 Kan. 632, 18 Pac. 893, Lawson v. Richmond, etc., R. R., 112 N. C. 400, 17 S. E. 173, and Howard v. Southern Ry., 122 N. C. 952, 29 S. E. 780, holding filing of petition does not, ipso facto, dissolve State court's jurisdiction; State v. Barnes, 5 N. Dak. 357, 65 N. W. 691, State court's jurisdiction not divested by petition filed too late; Miller v. Sunde, 1 N. Dak. 3, 44 N. W. 302, under omnibus bill, filing of request in open court destroys State court's jurisdiction; Koshland v. National Ins. Co., 31 Or. 208, 49 Pac. 846, holding State court can decide on sufficiency of petition; Marshall v. Holmes, 141 U. S. 595, 35 L. 872, 12 S. Ct. 63, Wills v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 65 Fed. 532, Mecke v. Valley Town Mineral Co., 89 Fed. 211, Stix v. Keith, 90 Ala. 124, 7 So. 424, and North America, etc., Trust Co. v. Colonial, etc., Mtge. Co., 3 S. Dak. 594, 54 N. W. 661 (see dissenting opinion in 3 S. Dak. 606, 607, 54 N. W. 666), holding filing of petition and bond arrests jurisdiction of State court; Railway Cos. v. Hendricks, 88 Tenn. 714, 13 S. W. 697, mere filing of proper petition does not deprive State court of its jurisdiction; Texas, etc., Ry. v. Bloon, 85 Tex. 284, 20 S. W. 135, holding that petition for removal should be presented to State court; Guarantee Co. v. National Bank, 95 Va. 486, 28 S. E. 911, holding insufficient petition stating that petitioner is an alien corporation and its co-defendant a citizen of another State; Pullman's, etc., Car Co. v. Washburn, 66 Fed. 795, and Lake Street, etc., R. Co. v. Farmers, etc., Trust Co., 77 Fed. 773, 46 U. S. App. 630, arguendo.

Removal.— Issues of fact on removal petition are for Circuit Court; sufficiency of record to effect removal decided adversely by State court is reviewable by Supreme Court, p. 432.

Reaffirmed in Burlington, etc., Ry. v. Dunn, 122 U. S. 515, 30 L. 1160, 7 S. Ct. 1263, Missouri, etc., Ry. v. Fitzgerald, 160 U. S. 582, 40 L. 542, 16 S. Ct. 396, Steiner v. Mathewson Co., 77 Ga. 659, State v. Barnes, 5 N. Dak. 357, 65 N. W. 691, Western Union Tel. Co. v. Griffith, 104 Ga. 57, 30 S. E. 420, and Craven v. Turner, 82 Me. 387, 19 Atl. 865. Approved in Carson v. Hyatt, 118 U. S. 287, 30 L. 169, 6 S. Ct. 1054, holding question was one of fact to be determined by Circuit Court; Walker v. Oneil, 38 Fed. 375, holding decision of State court as right to removal is not conclusive; Amy v. Manning, 144 Mass. 154, 10 N. E. 739, holding that petition was filed too late, Howard v. Southern Ry., 122 N. C. 954, 29 S. E. 781, holding filing of petition does not, ipso facto, dissolve State court's jurisdiction; Talbott v. Planter Oil Co., 12 Tex. Civ. App. 50, 33 S. W. 746, refusal to order removal will not be reviewed where Federal court remanded case; Northern Pac. R. Co. v. McMullen, 86 Wis. 507, 56 N. W. 631, decision of Circuit Court that case is removable is conclusive; dissenting opinion in North America, etc., Trust Co. v. Colonial, etc., Mtge. Co., 3 S. Dak. 604, 54 N. W. 665, majority holding filing of petition and bond arrests jurisdiction of State court.

Removal.— Suit between a State and citizens is not removable on ground of citizenship, p. 433.

Reaffirmed in Postal, etc., Cable Co. v. Alabama, 155 U. S. 487, 39 L. 233, 15 S. Ct. 194, Grinnell v. Johnson, 28 Fed. 4, Ferguson v. Ross, 38 Fed. 162, 3 L. R. A. 323, and n., Texas v. Day, etc., Cattle Co., 49 Fed. 597, Indiana v. Tolleston Club, 53 Fed. 19, Indiana v. Alleghany Oil Co., 85 Fed. 872, Arkansas v. Kansas, etc., Coal Co., 96 Fed. 355, Hickman v. Missouri, etc., Ry., 151 Mo. 656, 52 S. W. 354, State v. Adams, 9 Ohio C. C. 24, and State v. Port Royal, etc., Ry., 45 S. C. 434, 23 S. E. 366. Approved in Carson v. Dunham, 121 U. S. 426, 30 L. 993, 7 S. Ct. 1032, holding petition may be amended in Circuit Court; Mathis v. Southern Ry., 53 S. C. 258, 31 S. E. 244, arguendo.

Distinguished in South Carolina v. Port Royal, etc., Ry., 56 Fed. 334, where case involved a Federal question.

Removal cannot be had of suit for money received by partners, unless all defendants can unite in petition, p. 433.

117 U. S. 434–481, 29 L. 963, UNION TRUST CO. v. ILLINOIS MIDLAND CO.

Railroad receiver's certificates, issued for necessary repairs, have priority over bonded debt, p. 454.

Reaffirmed in McIlhenny v. Binz, 80 Tex. 15, 26 Am. St. Rep. 721, 13 S. W. 661. Approved in Union Trust Co. v. Morrison, 125 U. S.

612, 31 L. 831, 8 S. Ct. 1010, holding claimant could pursue earnings which had been appropriated to the purchase of property; Kneeland v. Luce, 141 U. S. 509, 35 L. 836, 12 S. Ct. 38, holding issue of certificates to pay sub-contractors was proper; Fidelity, etc., Safe-Deposit Co. v. Roanoke Iron Co., 68 Fed. 624, holding equity can make receiver's certificates a paramount lien only if they are for necessaries; Jones v. Central Trust Co., 73 Fed. 573, 48 U. S. App. 224, discharging out of the property obligations incurred by third persons to preserve it; California, etc., Trust Co. v. Yakima Inv. Co., 82 Fed. 544, treating claims for services in constructing canal as cost of original construction; New York, etc., Indemnity Co. v. Tacoma, etc., Motor Co., 83 Fed. 367, 48 U. S. App. 673, giving claim for cable priority; Vilas v. Page, 106 N. Y. 452, 13 N. E. 746, upholding order authorising the creation of debts for rolling-stock; Fidelity, etc., Deposit Co. v. Shenandoah R. R., 33 W. Va. 788, 11 S. E. 68, arguendo. See 54 Am. St. Rep. 403, 422, note.

Distinguished in Farmers, etc., Trust Co. v. Grape Creek Coal Co., 50 Fed. 482, 16 L. R. A. 604, and n., holding receiver could not issue certificates in order to operate coal mine; Felton v. Cincinnati, 95 Fed. 342, holding court not authorized to charge to lessor bridge built by receiver.

Railroads.— Court's power to order necessary repairs by receiver is not dependent on consent or notice, p. 455.

Reaffirmed in Karn v. Rorer Iron Co., 86 Va. 759, 11 S. E. 433. Approved in McIlhenny v. Binz, 80 Tex. 18, 26 Am. St. Rep. 726, 13 S. W. 663, holding court time limit could not preclude court from adjusting priority of claims.

Railroads.— Purchasers of receiver's certificates, issued without prior notice, take subject to court's final action, which is equivalent to prior notice, p. 456.

Approved in Virginia, etc., Coal Co. v. Central R. R., 170 U. S. 365, 42 L. 1072, 18 S. Ct. 661, holding party furnishing necessary supplies entitled to a priority; Mercantile Trust Co. v. Kanawha, etc., Ry., 50 Fed. 876, 877, lien of receiver's certificates is not affected by fact that he misappropriates the funds; Mercantile Trust Co. v. Kanawha, etc., Ry., 58 Fed. 17, 16 U. S. App. 37, holding validity of security of certificates may be prejudicially affected; Gordon v. Newman, 62 Fed. 689, 23 U. S. App. 660, holding enforcement of decree could not be restrained by holders of receiver's certificates claiming priority; Laughlin v. United States, etc., Stock Co., 64 Fed. 26, holders of receiver's certificates, issued to creditors for ordinary debts, were entitled to no priority; Raht v. Attrill, 106 N. Y. 434, 60 Am. Rep. 460, 13 N. E. 284, holding debts created for money used in improvements do not displace lien of mortgagees. See 71 Am. St. Rep. 380, note.

Distinguished in Third Street, etc., Ry. v. Lewis, 79 Fed. 198, 48 U. S. App. 278, holding lien of mortgage was not subordinated to lien of receiver's certificates.

Railroads.— Bill by general creditor and majority stockholders, praying receiver, etc., enables equity to administer, p. 459.

Approved in Sage v. Memphis, etc., R. R., 125 U. S. 375, 31 L. 698, 8 S. Ct. 891, holding bill sufficient to justify equity in appointing a receiver; Brown v. Lake Superior Iron Co., 134 U. S. 534, 33 L. 1024, 10 S. Ct. 605, refusing relief because of laches; Joy v. St. Louis, 138 U. S. 47, 34 L. 858, 11 S. Ct. 257, rights of public in respect to railroads should be fostered by courts; Ames v. Union Pac. Ry., 74 Fed. 345, charging operating expenses anterior to appointment of receiver upon the property; Moore v. Southern, etc., Timber Co., 83 Fed. 400, holding bill gave court jurisdiction.

Railroad receiver's certificates to pay tax liens are entitled to priority, p. 461.

Approved in Central Trust Co. v. New York, etc., R. R., 110 N. Y. 258, 18 N. E. 96, 1 L. R. A. 264, holding claim of State for payment of tax a paramount one; Wise v. Wise Co., 153 N. Y. 510, 47 N. E. 769, holding attachment cannot be displaced by subsequent claim for taxes. See 54 Am. St. Rep. 421, note.

Railroads.— Purchasers of certificates from receiver are not bound to see to application of proceeds, p. 461.

Railroads.— Holders of receiver's certificates, buying at allowed discount, are entitled to face value, p. 462.

Railroads.— Receiver's certificates, going to replace income spent for betterments, have no priority, p. 462.

Reaffirmed in Virginia, etc., Coal Co. v. Central R. R., 170 U. S. 370, 42 L. 1073, 18 S. Ct. 663. Cited in 54 Am. St. Rep. 418, note.

Railroads.— Want of trustees' consent through negligence, held not to prevent prior lien of receiver's certificates, p. 463.

Distinguished in Central Transp. Co. v. Pullman's Car Co., 139 U. S. 56, 35 L. 67, 11 S. Ct. 487, where contract was unlawful.

Railroads.— Operating expenses, payable primarily out of income, may be chargeable against corpus, after notice, p. 465.

Reaffirmed in Mercantile Trust Co. v. Kanawha, etc., Ry., 58 Fed. 15, 16 U. S. App. 37, and Thornton v. Highland, etc., R. R., 94 Ala. 357, 10 So. 443. Approved in St. Louis, etc., R. R. v. Cleveland, etc., Ry., 125 U. S. 673, 31 L. 837, 8 S. Ct. 1017, holding claimant had no equitable right to priority of payment; Morgan's Co. v. Texas, etc., Ry., 137 U. S. 198, 34 L. 634, 11 S. Ct. 69, mere fact that money was loaned to keep railroad going, does not give priority; Quincy, etc., R. R. v. Humphreys, 145 U. S. 103, 36 L. 639, 12 S. Ct. 794, holding no equities existed which called upon court to divert proceeds of sale; Farmers, etc., Trust Co. v. Vicksburg, etc., R. Co., 33 Fed. 783, charging current expenses on income, in preference to mortgage; Thomas v. Peoria, etc., Ry., 36 Fed. 818, where current receipts are expended for improvements, a claim of rent may be charged on corpus; Farmers, etc., Trust Co. v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co., 53 Fed. 189, authority to give priority is not limited to cases where there has been a diversion of income; Bosworth v. Terminal R. Assn., 80 Fed. 971, 53 U. S. App. 305, holding receiver had no right to appeal from decree awarding preference to claim for supplies; New York, etc., Indemnity Co. v. Tacoma, etc., Motor Co., 83 Fed. 369, 48 U. S. App. 677, giving claim for cable priority; Anderson v. Condict, 93 Fed. 353, charging claim for personal injuries on corpus; International Trust Co. v. Townsend, etc., Contr. Co., 95 Fed. 861, holding court could not displace lien on corpus in favor of supply creditors; Bosworth v. Terminal, etc., Assn., 174 U. S. 185, 19 S. Ct. 626, arguendo. See 54 Am. St. Rep. 431, note.

Railroads.— Wages six months prior to receivership, held entitled to priority, p. 464.

Reaffirmed in Drennen v. Mercantile Trust, etc., Co., 115 Ala. 606, 67 Am. St. Rep. 77, 23 So. 166, 39 L. R. A. 625, Rutherford v. Pennsylvania, etc., R. R., 178 Pa. St. 43, 35 Atl. 927, and Litzenberger v. Jarvis Co., 8 Utah, 19, 28 Pac. 872. Approved in Seventh Nat. Bank v. Shenandoah Iron Co., 35 Fed. 438, holding liens of laborers of iron manufacturing company not entitled to priority; Thomas v. Peoria, etc., Ry., 36 Fed. 819, 820, refusing to charge claims accruing more than six months before receivership; American, etc., Trust Co. v. East, etc., R. Co., 46 Fed. 108, holding claim for original construction not entitled to priority; Finance Co. v. Charleston, etc., R. Co., 62 Fed. 208, 8 U. S. App. 547, paying running expenses out of corpus; St. Louis Trust Co. v. Riley, 70 Fed. 35, 37, 36 U. S. App. 100, 30 L. R. A. 458, 459, refusing to allow claim for personal injuries suffered prior to appointment of receiver; Wood v. New York, etc., R. Co., 70 Fed. 743, paying claim for coupling links procured prior to appointment of receiver; Ames v. Union Pac. Ry., 74 Fed. 345, charging operating expenses, anterior to appointment of receiver, on property; Cleveland, etc., Ry. v. Knickerbocker Trust Co., 86 Fed. 77, allowing claim, though more than six months had elapsed between doing of work and appointment of receiver; Raht v. Attrill, 106 N. Y. 436, 60 Am. Rep. 462, 13 N. E. 286, that company was owing debts for labor created no equity for their payment. See 54 Am. St. Rep. 409, note.

Railroads.— Order appointing receiver, held not to exclude priority of labor claims, p. 465.

Cited in 54 Am. St. Rep. 404, note.

Railroads.— Decree apportioning receivership indebtedness of three roads in proportion to length, upheld, p. 468.

Approved in Compton v. Jesup, 68 Fed. 327, 31 U. S. App. 486, it is public policy to treat a railroad as an entirety; Farmers' Loan Co. v. Oregon Pac. R. R., 31 Or. 246, 65 Am. St. Rep. 824, 48 Pac. 707, 38 L. R. A. 426, holding railroad mortgagee not liable for debts incurred by receiver. See 54 Am. St. Rep. 404, note.

Estoppel.— Executed sale of insolvent road to another cannot be questioned by its bondholders long acquiescing in administration under one receiver, p. 468.

Approved in Brown v. Lake Superior Iron Co., 134 U. S. 536, 33 L. 1025, 10 S. Ct. 606, good faith and early assertion of rights are essential on part of defendant in equity; Central Trans. Co. v. Pullman's Car Co., 139 U. S. 56, 35 L. 67, 11 S. Ct. 487, where contract was unlawful; Pullman's Car Co. v. Central Transp. Co., 139 U. S. 63, 35 L. 69, 11 S. Ct. 489, and St. Louis R. R. v. Terre Haute R. R., 145 U. S. 409, 36 L. 754, 12 S. Ct. 958, both refusing to set aside ultra vires lease acquiesced in many years; Central Trust Co. v. Marietta, etc., R. R., 75 Fed. 216, 41 U. S. App. 369 (see dissenting opinion in S. C., 75 Fed. 202, 41 U. S. App. 339), holding company was bound by the order; Farmers, etc., Trust Co. v. Centralia, etc., R. Co., 96 Fed. 643, holding stockholders could attack certificates. See 70 Am. St. Rep. 166, note.

Distinguished in Denison, etc., Ry. v. Ranney, etc., Mercantile Co., — Ind. Ter. —, 53 S. W. 509.

Railroad bonds surrendered in exchange for others, held cancelled and not on footing with unsurrendered ones, p. 474.

Approved in First Nat. Bank v. Radford Trust Co., 80 Fed. 578, 47 U. S. App. 692, holding there was an election to accept new bonds, and they were not entitled to security of old bonds.

Distinguished in Mowry v. Farmers, etc., Trust Co., 76 Fed. 45, 46 U. S. App. 164, holding bonds deposited under the agreement were not extinguished.

Railroad foreclosure decree providing sale separately then en masse, held valid, p. 474.

Affirmed in Low v. Blackford, 87 Fed. 402, ordering property to be sold as an entirety.

Railroads.— Claims for rent of track, stores supplied, and labor, are entitled to priority, p. 476.

Railroads.— Large amounts borrowed by receiver, without court order, are not prior claims, p. 477.

Approved in Chicago, etc., Vault Co. v. McNulta, 153 U. S. 562, 38 L. 822, 14 S. Ct. 918, holding receiver had no authority to make a lease, for a term, of general offices.

Railroads.— Claims for rent; extraordinary depreciation of rolling-stock and right of way are not prior, p. 480.

Approved in Farmers, etc., Trust Co. v. Chicago, etc., Ry., 42 Fed. 11, holding petitioner not entitled to payment of rental out of corpus of estate; New York, etc., R. Co. v. New York, etc., R. Co., 58 Fed. 281, rentals accruing prior to receivership are entitled to no priority.

Railroads.— There should be no priority between receiver's certificates for necessaries, etc., except those for taxes, p. 481.

Costs in this case were not allowed for or against either party, p. 481.

Approved in Trinidad, etc., Paving Co. v. Robinson, 52 Fed. 349, in actions at law, Federal courts must tax costs against losing party, except in special cases.

Miscellaneous.— Cited generally in St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Terre Haute, etc., R. Co., 33 Fed. 447.

117 U. S. 482-490, 29 L. 979, FERGUSON v. ARTHUR.

Customs duties.— Henry's calcined magnesia was dutiable as proprietary medicine, not a commodity, p. 488.

Approved in In re Eisner, 54 Fed. 672, 673, holding Johann Hoff malt extract dutiable as a proprietary medicine.

Distinguished in United States v. Eisner, etc., Co., 59 Fed. 355, 20 U. S. App. 243, holding fluid compound sold as "malt extract," dutiable as such.

117 U. S. 490-504, 29 L. 984, DINGLEY v. OLER.

Contract to return ice the next year authorizes return at any time therein, p. 501.

Contract to return ice any time during season, gives no right of action upon refusal of specific demand, p. 502.

Contracts.— Query, whether refusal of performance not yet due, is actionable as present breach, p. 503.

Cited in Clark v. National, etc., Casualty Co., 67 Fed. 225, holding that there was no breach of entire contract; Horst v. Rœhm, 84 Fed. 569, Marks v. Van Eeghen, 85 Fed. 854, 57 U. S. App. 151, and Rœhm v. Horst, 91 Fed. 348, 62 U. S. App. 526, where notice of refusal to perform is given, party may sue at once; Pierce v. Tennessee, etc., R. R., 173 U. S. 12, 19 S. Ct. 339, arguendo.

Contracts.— Refusal of performance, to justify suit, must be unequivocal, and so treated, p. 503.

Reaffirmed in Sullivan v. McMillan, 26 Fla. 580, 8 So. 457, and Kilgore v. Baptist Education Assn., 90 Tex. 142, 143, 37 S. W. 600, 601. Approved in Cleveland Rolling-Mill v. Rhodes, 121 U. S. 264, 30 L. 923, 7 S. Ct. 886, holding buyer might have refused to accept iron shipped; Foss, etc., Brewing Co. v. Bullock, 59 Fed. 88, 16 U.

S. App. 311, where seller refuses to acquiesce in cancellation of sale, his right of action accrues at time of delivery; Edward Hines Lumber Co. v. Alley, 73 Fed. 607, 43 U. S. App. 169, holding defendants' refusal to take lumber was a breach of contract; Jeffrey Mfg. Co. v. Central, etc., Iron Co., 93 Fed. 412, party accepting goods, after delay, waived stipulation as to time; Lake Shore, etc., Ry. v. Richards, 152 Ill. 95, 38 N. E. 782, 30 L. R. A. 57, and n., it is sufficient if a clear intention to be no longer bound is evinced; Wilkinson v. Blount Mfg. Co., 169 Mass. 380, 47 N. E. 1022, holding that a waiver was not shown; Vittum v. Estey, 67 Vt. 161, 31 Atl. 145, holding refusal was not absolute; Lee v. Mutual, etc., Life Assn., 97 Va. 163, 33 S. E. 557, notice that policy will be declared forfeited if assessment is not paid, is not an absolute repudiation; Stanford v. McGill, 6 N. Dak. 564, 72 N. W. 949, 38 L. R. A. 770, arguendo.

117 U. S. 504–508, 29 L. 988, TURPIN v. BURGESS.

Internal revenue.— Act taxing tobacco intended for export, was constitutional, p. 505.

Cited in 27 Am. St. Rep. 564, note.

Internal revenue.— Tax on goods still in factory, though intended for export, is not export tax, p. 507.

Approved in Myers v. Baltimore County, 83 Md. 392, 55 Am. St. Rep. 354, 35 Atl. 146, 34 L. R. A. 312, holding property bought for exportation liable to taxation. See 62 Am. St. Rep. 474, and 27 Am. St. Rep. 552, notes.

117 U. S. 508–514, 29 L. 982, MAHOMET v. QUACKENBUSH.

Statute with but one general object germane to the title, satisfies constitutional requirement, p. 511.

Reaffirmed in Carter County v. Sinton, 120 U. S. 523, 30 L. 702, 7 S. Ct. 653, Illinois v. Illinois, etc., R. Co., 33 Fed. 766, Hotchkiss v. Marion, 12 Mont. 226, 29 Pac. 824, and Bosang v. Building Assn., 96 Va. 123, 30 S. E. 441. Approved in Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Jefferson County, 29 Fed. 307, upholding act authorizing railroad to extend its road, and empowering county to subscribe to stock; State v. Becker, 3 S. Dak. 43, 51 N. W. 1023, a law may include the employment of many measures for its enforcement. See 64 Am. St. Rep. 104, note.

117 U. S. 514–516, 29 L. 990, BRUCE v. MANCHESTER, ETC., R. R.

Appeals.— Matter in dispute means that directly involved in cause, not collateral effect in others, p. 515.

Reaffirmed in New England Mtge. Co. v. Gay, 145 U. S. 131, 36

L. 649, 12 S. Ct. 817. Approved in Gibson v. Shufeldt, 122 U. S. 29, 30 L. 1084, 7 S. Ct. 1067, Vicksburg, etc., R. R. v. Smith, 135 U. S. 200, 34 L. 96, 10 S. Ct. 730, and The Sydney, 139 U. S. 336, 35 L. 178, 11 S. Ct. 621, holding court with jurisdiction; Ex parte Sweeney, 126 Ind. 589, 27 N. E. 129, cross-complaint making real controversy can supply jurisdictional amount.

117 U. S. 516-518, 29 L. 994, EX PARTE FONDA.

Courts.— Federal court will not release on habeas corpus in advance of final action in State court, p. 518.

Reaffirmed in Pepke v. Cronan, 155 U. S. 101, 39 L. 85, 15 S. Ct. 34, In re Huse, 79 Fed. 307, 48 U. S. App. 322, In re Alexander, 84 Fed. 633, and Nesbit v. Hert, 91 Fed. 125. Approved in In re Duncan, 139 U. S. 454, 35 L. 222, 11 S. Ct. 575, refusing to interfere pending appeal; Cook v. Hart, 146 U. S. 194, 36 L. 940, 13 S. Ct. 43, in absence of special circumstances, prisoner should be compelled to seek review by writ of error; New York v. Eno, 155 U. S. 95, 39 L. 83, 15 S. Ct. 32, declining writ where it did not appear that case was urgent; Whitten v. Tomlinson, 160 U. S. 242, 40 L. 412, 16 S. Ct. 302, and Tinsley v. Anderson, 171 U. S. 105, 18 S. Ct. 807, dismissing writ issued before trial; Markuson v. Boucher, 175 U. S. 186, 20 S. Ct. 77, holding State judgments in criminal cases should not be reviewed on habeas corpus; Ex parte Kieffer, 40 Fed. 400, issuing habeas corpus, writ of appeal being an inadequate protection; In re Welch, 57 Fed. 578, holding question whether acts charged constituted the statutory crime, could not be raised on habeas corpus; United States v. M'Aleese, 93 Fed. 658, refusing relief where prisoner had not exhausted his remedy in State court; In re Bradley, 96 Fed. 970, refusing to discharge prisoner on ground that offense was committed at soldiers' home; dissenting opinion in Brown v. Walker, 161 U. S. 626, 40 L. 831, 16 S. Ct. 662, arguendo.

117 U. S. 519-536, 29 L. 934, NEW YORK, ETC., INS. CO. v. FLETCHER.

Corporations.— New York insurance company, doing business in Missouri, is subject to its laws, p. 519.

Reaffirmed in Wall v. Equitable Life Ins. Co., 32 Fed. 276. Approved in Mutual, etc., Ins. Co. v. Robison, 54 Fed. 585, holding law of State where application is made, and policy is delivered and premium paid. See 77 Am. Dec. 724, and 99 Am. Dec. 671, notes.

Insurance contract, where both parties are deceived by false answers written by agent, should be cancelled, p. 529.

Reaffirmed in McKay v. New York Life Ins. Co., 124 Cal. 273, 56 Pac. 1113. Approved in McDonald v. Metropolitan, etc., Co., 63 N. H. 6, 73 Am. St. Rep. 550, 38 Atl. 501, allowing assured to recover payments, on cancellation; Maier v. Fidelity, etc., L. Assn., 78 Fed. 571, 47 U. S. App. 322, holding company not estopped to deny validity of policy; United States Life Ins. Co. v. Smith, 92 Fed. 509, insurance company need not tender back premiums to enable it to defend, because of misrepresentation in application; McCarty v. New York Life Ins. Co., 74 Minn. 534, 77 N. W. 427, holding fraudulent representations constituted a ground for rescission; Sladden v. New York Life Ins. Co., 86 Fed. 106, and Mailhoit v. Metropolitan, etc., Ins. Co., 87 Me. 382, 47 Am. St. Rep. 341, 32 Atl. 992, arguendo. See 77 Am. Dec. 728, and 9 Am. St. Rep. 229, 233, notes.

Distinguished in Shelby v. Mutual Life Ins. Co., 67 Fed. 492, holding insurer could not defeat recovery, unless he had rescinded and tendered premium; State Ins. Co. v. Gray, 44 Kan. 735, 25 Pac. 199, where applicant was old and feeble.

Insurer can limit its agents' authority; and insured must read application and limitations there stated, p. 530.

Reaffirmed in Mensing v. American Ins. Co., 36 Mo. App. 607. Approved in Mutual, etc., Life Ins. Co. v. Robison, 58 Fed. 730, 19 U. S. App. 266, 22 L. R. A. 331, estopping insurer to dispute truth of answer, which agent construed; Maier v. Fidelity, etc., Life Assn., 78 Fed. 571, 47 U. S. App. 322, holding company not estopped to deny validity of policy; Hubbard v. Mutual, etc., Life Assn., 80 Fed. 685, parol evidence is not admissible to dispute agreement as to agency; Glover v. National Fire Ins. Co., 85 Fed. 131, 42 U. S. App. 728, holding company estopped to rely on misdescription of property, application being prepared by its agent; Brown v. United States Casualty Co., 88 Fed. 41, holding company bound only by stipulations in its own substituted policy; United States Life Ins. Co. v. Smith, 92 Fed. 507, 508, that local agent of company advised the answer, did not bind company; Wheaton v. North British, etc., Ins. Co., 76 Cal. 418, 9 Am. St. Rep. 217, 18 Pac. 760, where agent prepares statement, any misrepresentation not known to assured will not avoid policy; Sun Fire Office v. Wich, 6 Colo. App. 113, 39 Pac. 591, assured is not relieved from consequences of a false statement, because he was ignorant of contents of application; Globe, etc., Ins. Co. v. Duffy, 76 Md. 301, 25 Atl. 228, if assured had means of discovering falsehood of agent, he cannot recover; Baker v. Ohio, etc., Ins. Co., 70 Mich. 206, 207, 14 Am. St. Rep. 489, 490, 38 N. W. 219, 220, holding application signed by agent, without knowledge of assured, is not binding on her; Robinson v. Jarvis, 25 Mo. App. 425, 427, holding party is presumed to have read written instrument, and is bound by its terms; Frœhly v. North, etc., Ins. Co., 32 Mo. App. 311, holding policy was void in its inception; Greenwood v. New York Life Ins. Co., 27 Mo. App. 412, and Wolf v. Dwelling-House Ins. Co., 75 Mo. App. 339, 340, holding knowledge of agent was not a waiver, his authority being limited; Johnson v. Dakota, etc., Ins. Co., 1 N. Dak. 181, 45 N. W. 804, holding that policy never attached; Pelzer Mfg. Co. v. Sun Fire Office, 36 S. C. 270, 15 S. E. 583, holding that local agent may waive limitations; Fitzmaurice v. Mutual Life Ins. Co., 84 Tex. 65, 19 S. W. 302, holding binding effect of statements in application not avoided by fact that insured was unacquainted with them; King v. Cox, 63 Ark. 211, 37 S. W. 879, and Mutual Fire Ins. Co. v. Ward, 95 Va. 239, 28 S. E. 211, holding company estopped by agent's knowledge of other insurance; Georgia, etc., Ins. Co. v. Goode, 95 Va. 758, 30 S. E. 369, holding forfeiture imposed on account of incumbrance was waived; Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Baker, 10 Tex. Civ. App. 520, 31 S. W. 1073, arguendo. See 9 Am. St. Rep. 229, note.

Distinguished in Continental Ins. Co. v. Chamberlain, 132 U. S. 309, 33 L. 343, 10 S. Ct. 88, holding provision on back of policy that agent could waive none of its terms, did not relieve company; Sawyer v. Equitable, etc., Ins. Co., 42 Fed. 33, 34, holding company, where agent inserted false statement as to income; Mutual, etc., Ins. Co. v. Robison, 54 Fed. 594, 595, holding insurance company estopped to avoid the policy; Standard, etc., Ins. Co. v. Fraser, 76 Fed. 707, 44 U. S. App. 694, statement in policy that agent could not waive its provisions did not protect company; Phœnix Ins. Co. v. Warttemberg, 79 Fed. 247, 248, 249, 48 U. S. App. 347, 349, 351, holding company, though agent inserted statement that there was no incumbrance; Royal Neighbors of America v. Boman, 177 Ill. 31, 69 Am. St. Rep. 203, 52 N. E. 265, holding false answers inserted by agent do not avoid the policy; Marston v. Kennebec, etc., Ins. Co., 89 Me. 277, 278, 56 Am. St. Rep. 420, 421, 36 Atl. 392, 393, estopping company from controverting statements written by its agent; Equitable Life Ins. Co. v. Hazlewood, 75 Tex. 346, 16 Am. St. Rep. 899, 12 S. W. 623, 7 L. R. A. 221, and n., holding warranty did not warrant that the examiner should correctly reduce the answers; New York Life Ins. Co. v. Russell, 77 Fed. 102, 108, 40 U. S. App. 530, arguendo.

Insurance.— Retention of policy, with annexed copy of application, is approval of statements therein, p. 534.

Approved in Assurance Society v. Reutlinger, 58 Ark. 544, 25 S. W. 840, holder could not keep policy without approving action of the agent. See 9 Am. St. Rep. 229, note.

117 U. S. 536-554, 29 L. 954, YALE, ETC., MFG. CO. v. SARGENT.

Patents.— Sargent patent for improvement in locks, contained patentable novelty, p. 547.

Approved in Nat., etc., Register Co. v. American, etc., Register Co., 53 Fed. 372, 3 U. S. App. 340, and S. F. Heath Cycle Co. v. Hay, 67 Fed. 249, so long as a new and useful result is produced, it does not matter whether action of elements is simultaneous or successive; Pomace Co. v. Ferguson, 119 U. S. 338, 30 L. 408, 7 S. Ct. 234, arguendo.

Patents.—The lock, Cole No. 2, infringes Sargent patent, p. 548.

Patentee may recover from infringer, loss, through reduction in price, from infringer's competition, p. 552.

Reaffirmed in Creamer v. Bowers, 35 Fed. 208. Approved in Busch v. Graff, 133 U. S. 705, 33 L. 791, 10 S. Ct. 381, holding plaintiff must furnish data as to what extent reduction in price was due to defendant's act; Towle v. Park, 48 Fed. 793, apply rule in computing damages for sale of patent medicine; Tatum v. Gregory, 51 Fed. 447, calculating damages on basis of entire machine; Holmes v. Truman, 67 Fed. 545, 29 U. S. App. 572, allowing for entire loss.

Patentee alone can sue infringer, though he have a partner in the manufacture of the invention, p. 552.

Patents.—On suit for infringement of reissue, costs were equally divided, where judgment only on one claim thereof, p. 554.

Approved in Kittle v. Hall, 30 Fed. 240, allowing patentee to recover on valid claims, though he filed no disclaimer.

117 U. S. 554-559, 29 L. 952, YALE, ETC., MFG. CO. v. GREENLEAF.

Patent must be limited to claim, and cannot be enlarged by other parts of specifications, p. 559.

Approved in Johnson Co. v. Pacific, etc., Mills Co., 47 Fed. 589, and H. W. Johns Mfg. Co. v. Robertson, 60 Fed. 906, limiting improvement by reference to specifications; Westinghouse v. Edison, etc., Light Co., 63 Fed. 592, 28 U. S. App. 1, matters incidentally referred to cannot be read into the specifications.

Patent.—Idea of changing mechanical device, obvious to unskilled mechanic, is not patentable, p. 559.

Reaffirmed in Gardner v. Herz, 118 U. S. 192, 30 L. 163, 6 S. Ct. 1063. Approved in Pomace Holder Co. v. Ferguson, 119 U. S. 338, 30 L. 408, 7 S. Ct. 384, holding void, patent for improvement in cheese-formers for cider presses; Hendy v. Miners' Iron Works, 127 U. S. 375, 32 L. 209, 8 S. Ct. 1278, holding there was no patentable combination; Hill v. Wooster, 132 U. S. 701, 33 L. 506, 10 S. Ct. 231, dismissing bill, because claims were not patentable; United States, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Independent, etc., Brushing Co., 24 Blatchf. 410, 31 Fed. 79, holding patent for improvement in bungs, wanting in patentable novelty; Cluett v. Claflin, 24 Blatchf. 416, 30 Fed. 924, holding void, patent for improved shirt-bosoms; Consolidated, etc., Jar Co. v. Bellaire Stamping Co., 28 Fed. 94, holding void, patent for improved mode of preventing corrosion of metallic caps; Root v. Sontag, 47 Fed. 313, holding bill demurrable for want of novelty in invention; Chuse v. Ide, 89 Fed. 498, 60 U. S. App. 646, holding void, improvement in lubricating devices.

Patents.— First claim of Rosner improvement in permutation locks, was void for anticipation, p. 559.

117 U. S. 559-566, 29 L. 994, DIMOCK v. REVERE COPPER CO.

Courts.— State court's decision that bankruptcy discharge barred an action, is reviewable in Supreme Court, p. 564.

Judgment.— Defense, neglected by defendant at trial, cannot be set up against judgment, p. 566.

Reaffirmed in Nat. Bank v. Wallis, 59 N. J. L. 48, 34 Atl. 984, and Mather v. Cincinnati, etc., Tunnel Co., 8 Ohio C. C. 289. Approved in Scott v. Ellery, 142 U. S. 384, 35 L. 1051, 7 S. Ct. 982, after discharge in bankruptcy, right to take deficiency decree was lost; United States v. Wallace, 46 Fed. 571, holding party, by appearing, waived irregularities as to his arrest; Compton v. Jesup, 68 Fed. 286, 296, 31 U. S. App. 486, holding trustees could not object to a separate redemption of the Ohio division; Board of Commissioners v. Platt, 79 Fed. 572, 49 U. S. App. 223, holding judgment is an estoppel as to every matter which might have been offered; Holt County v. Nat. Life Ins. Co., 80 Fed. 689, 49 U. S. App. 382, issuing mandamus to levy tax, is conclusive on question as to whether levy was in excess of statutory power; Turner v. Hamilton, 88 Fed. 468, defendant neglecting to plead usury, cannot set it up in action on judgment; Sullivan v. Rabb, 86 Ala. 440, 5 So. 749, holding bankruptcy proceedings affect dissolution of attachment; Tuttle v. Scott, 119 Cal. 589, 51 Pac. 850, vacating judgment by default, to let in defense of discharge in insolvency; Lackey v. Steere, 121 Ill. 603, 605, 2 Am. St. Rep. 138, 139, 13 N. E. 520, 521, setting aside satisfaction of judgment had no effect on surety not a party; Whyte v. McGovern, 51 N. J. L. 357, 359, 17 Atl. 958, holding debtor filing petition in bankruptcy, may allow suit to proceed to judgment, without forfeiting his right; McDonald v. Davis, 105 N. Y. 513, 12 N. E. 41, that defendant failed to avail himself of a stay of proceedings, does not merge the debt in the judgment; Shaw v. Broadbent, 129 N. Y. 122, 29 N. E. 240, holding effect of judgment could not be nullified by posthumous production of record, which might have defeated claim if presented on trial; Zumbro v. Stump, 38 W. Va. 332, 18 S. E. 446, holding discharge in bankruptcy may be set up in State court to stay proceedings; dissenting opinion in St. Louis, etc., Ry. v. Jackson, 95 Fed. 571, maintaining that question of existence of lien could not be considered. See 2 Am. St. Rep. 140, and 23 Am. St. Rep. 112, notes.

Distinguished in Boynton v. Ball, 121 U. S. 463, 30 L. 985, 7 S. Ct. 982, holding discharge in bankruptcy may be set up in State court to stay execution, although defendant, before judgment, did not ask for a stay of proceedings; Second Nat. Bank v. Townsend, 114 Ind. 535, 17 N. E. 116, where question was as to right of creditor to share in distribution of trust fund in hands of assignee.

117 U. S. 567-582, 29 L. 940, HOBBS v. McLEAN.

Partners advancing all money, and doing all work, are entitled to be repaid before third partner's creditors, p. 573.

United States.— Agreement to pay into partnership expected government claim, does not violate R. S., §§ 3477, 3737, p. 574.

Approved in Freedman's Saving Co. v. Shepherd, 127 U. S. 505, 32 L. 168, 8 S. Ct. 1256, upholding transfer of lease of real estate from government; Burck v. Taylor, 152 U. S. 646, 649, 38 L. 583, 584, 14 S. Ct. 701 (see dissenting opinion in 152 U. S. 669, 38 L. 591, 14 S. Ct. 709), holding party could not, without consent of State, transfer his contract; Ball v. Halsell, 161 U. S. 79, 40 L. 624, 16 S. Ct. 556, holding contract would not support an action by attorney for fee, where Congress had made no appropriation; Milliken v. Barrow, 65 Fed. 894, upholding assignment of contingent profits which party hopes to make.

United States.— Claim against United States is the right to demand money, p. 575.

Approved in Milliken v. Barrow, 65 Fed. 894, upholding assignment of contingent profits which party hopes to make; United States v. Ferguson, 78 Fed. 105, 45 U. S. App. 457, holding order by prisoner to inspector, to pay it to a third person, was not an assignment of a claim against United States; Dulaney v. Scudder, 94 Fed. 10, holding there was no claim against the United States; Manning v. Leighton, 65 Vt. 94, 26 Atl. 260, 24 L. R. A. 690, and n., holding that they were claims against the United States.

United States.— R. S., §§ 3477, 3737, prohibiting assignment of government claims, were for its protection, p. 576.

Reaffirmed in Price v. Forrest, 54 N. J. Eq. 687, 35 Atl. 1082. Approved in Price v. Forrest, 173 U. S. 423, 19 S. Ct. 438, holding case was not within the prohibition of the statute; Dulaney v. Scudder, 94 Fed. 9, the government may elect to recognize the assignment; Jernegan v. Osborn, 155 Mass. 210, 211, 29 N. E. 521, 522, query, whether claim for loss sustained in rescuing seamen is a claim against the United States; Forrest v. Price, 52 N. J. Eq. 28, 29 Atl. 220, upholding assignment of claim, established in obedience to an order of chancery; York v. Conde, 147 N. Y. 492, 42 N. E. 195, after United States has paid claimant, assignee may enforce his right.

Contract, if open to lawful and unlawful construction, former must be adopted, p. 576.

Reaffirmed in United States v. Central Pac. R. R., 118 U. S. 241, 30 L. 175, 6 S. Ct. 1041, Wiggins Ferry Co. v. Chicago, etc., Ry., 128 Mo. 245, 27 S. W. 571, and Watters v. McGuigan, 72 Wis. 157, 39 N. W. 383. Approved in Seamans v. Knapp, etc., Co., 89 Wis. 182, 46 Am. St. Rep. 829, 61 N. W. 760, 27 L. R. A. 365, and dissenting opinion in Jones v. Williams, 139 Mo. 85, 40 S. W. 367, 37 L. R. A. 705, construing different contracts; Gaines v. Molen, 30 Fed. 29, holding there was no illegality of consideration.

United States.— Partner's promise to pay, out of receipts from government claim, does not bar promisee's rights to enforce payment after collection, p. 577.

Limitations, statute of, does not run against agreement to pay out of proceeds of recovery in suit, until recovery had, p. 578.

Witnesses.— R. S., § 858, prohibiting party testifying in action against estate, does not mean against deceased's assignee, p. 579.

Approved in Farmers' Bank v. Gould, 42 W. Va. 136, 24 S. E. 548, in suit by creditor, to set aside deed for fraud, grantee may testify, though grantor be dead.

Statutes.— Courts have no power to supply omitted words in statute, p. 579.

Reaffirmed in Grace v. Collector of Customs, 79 Fed. 318, 48 U. S. App. 231, and State v. Simon, 20 Or. 373, 26 Pac. 173.

Estoppel.— Partner denying his interest in recovery, except as creditor, is not estopped from asserting subsequent title, p. 580.

Distinguished in Foote v. Godwin, 42 La. Ann. 521, 7 So. 845, holding plaintiff's testimony alone would not sustain claim, where he had previously testified that he had no interest.

Trusts.— Unsuccessful litigant for trust fund is not entitled to expenses out of fund, p. 582.

Approved in Boston, etc., Trust Co. v. Adrian, etc., Water Works, 47 Fed. 10, refusing further allowance to trustee for services; Jacksonville, etc., Ry. v. American Const. Co., 57 Fed. 70, 13 U. S. App. 377, permitting appeal from decree allowing attorney's fees; Bound v. South Carolina Ry., 59 Fed. 512, charging counsel fees upon the proceeds to be appropriated to the payment of the respective mortgages; Central Trust Co. v. Condon, 67 Fed. 111, 31 U. S. App. 387, allowing plaintiffs, in creditor's bill, for counsel fees; Barrow v. Milliken, 74 Fed. 615, 41 U. S. App. 332, holding sugar-planter could pledge the bounty to become payable, before his claims have been allowed; Burden, etc., Refining Co. v. Ferris, etc., Mfg. Co., 87 Fed. 812, allowing solicitors out of general fund for work done previous to appointment of receiver; Fidelity, etc., Deposit Co. v. Roanoke Iron Co., 91 Fed. 21, holding brokers not entitled to deduct any sum for expenses in defending their title; Davis v. Bay State League, 158 Mass. 434, 33 N. E. 591, allowing reimbursement to one bringing suit for benefit of all with a common interest.

117 U. S. 582-591, 29 L. 991, BURNES v. SCOTT.

Evidence to show promissory note, not such, but a mere memorandum, is inadmissible, p. 585.

Reaffirmed in Wilson v. Wilson, 26 Or. 261, 38 Pac. 189. Approved in Michels v. Olmstead, 157 U. S. 201, 39 L. 672, 15 S. Ct. 581, holding plaintiff estopped to object that evidence was admissible at law only; Seymour v. Malcolm M'Donald Lumber Co., 58 Fed. 961, 16 U. S. App. 245, rejecting evidence of fraud in procuring an acceptance; Union Nat. Bank v. German Ins. Co., 71 Fed. 476, 34 U. S. App. 397, parol negotiations, leading up to a contract of insurance, are merged; Leonard v. Miner, 120 Cal. 406, 52 Pac 656, rejecting parol evidence of limitation of liability; Godkin v Monahan, 83 Fed. 119, 53 U. S. App. 613, and Champion, etc., Min Co. v. Bird, 7 Colo. App. 526, 44 Pac. 765, rejecting evidence introduced to vary terms of note; McIntosh, etc., Co. v. Rice, — Colo. App. —, 58 Pac. 363, rejecting parol testimony as to history of written agreement; King v. Kilbridge, 58 Conn. 117, 19 Atl. 520, holding there could be no implication contrary to the writing; White, etc., Mach. Co. v. Feeley, 72 Conn. 185, 44 Atl. 37, admitting evidence relating to condition upon which contract was signed; Phelps v. Abbott, — Mich. —, 72 N. W. 4, rejecting parol evidence of agreement of reduction to be made if animal for which note was given should prove barren; Catlin v. Harris, 7 Wash. 546, 35 Pac. 386, parol evidence is inadmissible to show note does not represent the amount due; Pearce v. Strickler, 9 N. Mex. 477, 54 Pac. 751, rejecting ex parte statement, made before execution of note; dissenting opinion in Harman v. Harman, 70 Fed. 936, 18 U. S. App. 723, majority admitting parol evidence to show entire contract.

Distinguished in Burke v. Dulaney, 153 U. S. 232, 233, 38 L. 700, 14 S. Ct. 817, admitting parol evidence of agreement as to when note should become operative.

Equity.— Evidence of equitable defense to note, e. g., partnership settlement, inadmissible on plea at law, p. 587.

Reaffirmed in Wilson v. Wilson, 26 Or. 260, 38 Pac. 188. Approved in Union Bank v. Crine, 33 Fed. 811, and Seymour v. Malcolm M'Donald Lumber Co., 58 Fed. 962, 16 U. S. App. 245, holding court of law could not take cognizance of equitable defense.

Champertous contract cannot be set up in bar of cause of action to which it relates, p. 589.

Reaffirmed in Missouri, etc., Ry. v. Smith, 60 Ark. 237, 29 S. W. 753, Wehmhoff, etc. v. Rutherford, 98 Ky. 97, 32 S. W. 290, Euneau v. Rieger, 105 Mo. 682, 16 S. W. 860, Woods v. Walsh, 7 N. Dak. 385, 75 N. W. 770, and Croco v. Oregon, etc., R. Co., 18 Utah, 324, 54 Pac. 988, 44 L. R. A. 289. Approved in Peck v. Heurich, 167 U. S. 632, 42 L. 305, 17 S. Ct. 930, holding deed would not sustain an action by grantees to recover part of lands from third persons;

Byrne v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co., 55 Fed. 47, champertous agreement between attorney suing as administrator, may be pleaded as a defense; Ross v. Ft. Wayne, 64 Fed. 1007, 24 U. S. App. 506, one who, having an interest in subject-matter, buys up interest of plaintiff, is not guilty of champerty; The Clara A. McIntyre, 94 Fed. 557, holding there could be no recovery on claim founded on champertous contract.

Distinguished in Keiper v. Miller, 68 Fed. 630, dismissing bill founded on champertous agreement.

117 U. S. 591-600, 29 L. 997. NEW YORK, ETC., INS. CO. v. ARMSTRONG.

Insurance, payable to legal representatives, if assured died before its maturity, is assignable, except for speculation, p. 597.

Reaffirmed in Croswell v. Conn. Indemnity Assn., 51 S. C. 108, 28 S. E. 202, Fitzpatrick v. Hartford, etc., Ins. Co., 56 Conn. 133, 7 Am. St. Rep. 295, 13 Atl. 677. Approved in Amick v. Butler, 111 Ind. 582, 60 Am. Rep. 725, 12 N. E. 520, holding creditor has insurable interest in life of debtor; Carpenter v. Knapp, 101 Iowa, 728, 70 N. W. 767, 38 L. R. A. 133, holding beneficiary has no assignable interest while assured is living; Hays v. Lapeyre, 48 La. Ann. 755, 19 So. 824, 35 L. R. A. 652, and n. (see dissenting opinion in 48 La. Ann. 757, 19 So. 825, 35 L. R. A. 653, and n.), holding policy was assignable; Robinson v. Hurst, 78 Md. 71, 44 Am. St. Rep. 272, 26 Atl. 959, 20 L. R. A. 764, holding life insurance could be assigned to creditor; Ewing v. Shannahan, 113 Mo. 194, 20 S. W. 1067, construing "legal representatives" to mean heirs of donor; Roller v. Moore, 86 Va. 517, 10 S. E. 243, 6 L. R. A. 139, and n., holding that assignment stood as security for advances made; Heusner v. Mut. Life Ins. Co., 47 Mo. App. 343, holding invalid, assignment of policy for speculative purposes.

Distinguished in Union, etc., Ins. Co. v. Woods, 11 Ind. App. 343, 37 N. E. 182, holding wife had contingent interest during life of husband.

Insurance.— Evidence is admissible that assignee of policy feloniously caused assured's death, p. 598.

Approved in Ritter v. Mutual L. Ins. Co., 169 U. S. 156, 42 L. 699, 18 S. Ct. 306, affirming 70 Fed. 958, 28 U. S. App. 612, 42 L. R. A. 586, holding representatives of person killing himself, could not recover the insurance; Holdom v. Ancient Order, 159 Ill. 622, 50 Am. St. Rep. 183, 43 N. E. 773, 31 L. R. A. 69, killing of insured by insane beneficiary, does not defeat right of recovery; Murphy v. Red, 64 Miss. 619, 1 So. 763, allowing assignee, having no insurable interest in assured, to recover on policy; State v. Hope, 100 Mo. 359, 13 S. W. 493, 8 L. R. A. 613, and n., upholding statute permitting verdict of jury in criminal cause to be received in voluntary absence of accused; Shellenberger v. Ransom, 31 Neb. 72, 28 Am. St. Rep. 507, 47 N. W. 703, 10 L. R. A. 813, holding heir, murdering decedent, did not take estate; Shellenberger v. Ransom, 41 Neb. 637, 639, 645, 646, 59 N. W. 937, 939, 940, 25 L. R. A. 571, 574, 576, and n., holding heir murdering decedent inherited estate; Riggs v. Palmer, 115 N. Y. 512, 12 Am. St. Rep. 823, 22 N. E. 190, 5 L. R. A. 847, and n., depriving beneficiary, murdering testator, of his rights under the will; Carpenter's Estate v. Carpenter's Appeal, 170 Pa. St. 211, 50 Am. St. Rep. 769, 32 Atl. 638, 29 L. R. A. 149, holding parricide has right to inherit his father's estate; Roller v. Moore, 86 Va. 519, 10 S. E. 243, 6 L. R. A. 140, and n., holding that assignment stood as security for advances made. See 58 Am. Rep. 856, note.

Insurance.— It may be shown that assignee, at same time, fraudulently procured other insurance on deceased, p. 600.

Reaffirmed in Whitmore v. Supreme Lodge, 100 Mo. 48, 13 S. W. 497. Approved in Fifth Nat. Bank v. New York, etc., Ry., 24 Blatchf. 91, 28 Fed. 232, admitting evidence of damage accruing after commencement of action; Penn. Mut., etc., Ins. Co. v. Merchants, etc., Trust Co., 72 Fed. 423, 37 U. S. App. 692, 38 L. R. A. 59, and n., admitting evidence of false statements made in other applications; Gardner v. Meeker, 169 Ill. 44, 48 N. E. 308, admitting evidence of similar acts for three months after the transaction; Cox Shoe Co. v. Adams, 105 Iowa, 413, 75 N. W. 319, knowledge of dealer that false ratings were given him by commercial agencies was admissible to show fraudulent intent; Wilkinson v. Dodd, 42 N. J. Eq. 248, 7 Atl. 334, holding charges showing unlawful management of institution prior to time of act, were pertinent; Continental Ins. Co. v. Pennsylvania Ins. Co., 51 Fed. 888, 1 U. S. App. 201, Mudsill Min. Co. v. Watrous, 61 Fed. 180, 22 U. S. App. 12, Harrison v. Hawley, 7 Tex. Civ. App. 312, 26 S. W. 766, and Piedmont Bank v. Hatcher, 94 Va. 231, 26 S. E. 506, admitting evidence of other like frauds; New York Life Ins. Co. v. Davis, 96 Va. 739, 741, 32 S. E. 475, 476, 44 L. R. A. 306, limiting assignee's recovery to amount advanced; dissenting opinions in United States v. Budd, 144 U. S. 170, 36 L. 389, 12 S. Ct. 580, majority upholding transfer of timber lands; Hannig v. Muller, 82 Wis. 242, 52 N. W. 100, arguendo.

117 U. S. 601-602, 29 L. 805, EXPRESS CASES.

Appeal.— Supreme Court's decree, modified in accordance with counsel's stipulations, p. 602.

Not cited.

117 U. S. 602-611, 29 L. 1000, ALABAMA v. MONTAGUE.

Railroad mortgage of enumerated and "all other property" held, ejusdem generis, not to include certain town lots, p. 611.

Approved in Tishomingo Inst. v. Allen, 76 Miss. 132, 23 So. 959, holding intent was to assign all property of every kind; Wilson v. Beckwith, 117 Mo. 78, 22 S. W. 643, holding lien did not include railroad lands, since they were not appurtenant to road. See 66 Am. St. Rep. 60, note.

117 U. S. 611-612, 29 L. 1003, ALABAMA v. MONTAGUE.

Adjudged on authority of Alabama v. Montague, supra, q. v.

117 U. S. 612-615, 29 L. 1006, STEWART v. VIRGINIA.

Removal.— Virginia, proceeding to establish State coupons as tender, is not suit arising under Federal law, p. 614.

Approved in Rosenbaum v. Board of Supervisors, 11 Sawy. 623, 28 Fed. 225, holding suit for mandamus not removable; McCullough v. Virginia, 172 U. S. 106, 19 S. Ct. 135, arguendo.

117 U. S. 615-617, 29 L. 1007, CAMPBELL v. DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Contracts.— One taking place of contractor performing work, and accepting allowance for extras, is bound thereby, p. 617.

Not cited.

117 U. S. 617-621, 29 L. 1004, LONG v. BULLARD.

Bankruptcy.— Setting aside of homestead does not discharge liens thereon, before bankruptcy, p. 621.

Courts.— State court's decision, as to lien on homestead, is not reviewable in Supreme Court, p. 621.

Bankruptcy of debtor does not affect lien of secured creditor who does not prove debt, p. 621.

Approved in Broach v. Powell, 79 Ga. 82, 3 S. E. 765, that mortgage is subject to be administered in bankruptcy will not defeat right of foreclosure.

117 U. S. 621-633, 29 L. 946, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA v. McELLIGOTT.

District of Columbia.— Query, whether it is liable for injury from road supervisor's negligence, p. 628.

See note under next syllabus.

Master and servant.— Query, whether county road supervisor and laborer are co-servants, p. 628.

Approved in District of Columbia v. Woodbury, 136 U. S. 457, 34 L. 475, 10 S. Ct. 993, holding District of Columbia liable for injuries due to defective streets; Sullivan v. City, 10 Mont. 144, 25 Pac. 96, following territorial decisions as to municipal liability.

Negligence.— After instruction that supervisor's negligence was risk laborer assumed, it is error to instruct what would relieve supervisor of imputation of negligence, p. 630.

Approved in Herman v. Campbell, 56 Fed. 1014, 12 U. S. App. 530, holding subsequent submission of case to jury was reversible error.

Master and servant.— Laborer threatened by cave-in, must use due care, irrespective of warning to overseer, p. 633.

Approved in Kane v. Northern, etc., Ry., 128 U. S. 94, 95, 32 L. 341, 9 S. Ct. 17, negligence of brakeman, after notice of defective step, is for jury; Delaware, etc., R. R. v. Converse, 139 U. S. 475, 35 L. 216, 11 S. Ct. 572, holding that question of contributory negligence was properly submitted to jury; New Jersey, etc., R. Co. v. Young, 49 Fed. 725, 1 U. S. App. 96, remaining in employ after knowledge of defect, is not conclusive of negligence; Haas v. Balch, 56 Fed. 987, 12 U. S. App. 534, holding evidence of contributory negligence was not sufficient to warrant court in directing a verdict for defendant; Detroit, etc., Oil Co. v. Grable, 94 Fed. 79, holding engineer assumed risk of bolts breaking pipe; Victor Coal Co. v. Muir, 20 Colo. 332, 46 Am. St. Rep. 302, 38 Pac. 382, 26 L. R. A. 439, holding master not liable if servant knew of defects; Davis v. Graham, 2 Colo. App. 215, 29 Pac. 1009, Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Midgett, 1 Kan. App. 142, 40 Pac. 996, and Illinois Steel Co. v. Mann, 170 Ill. 206, 62 Am. St. Rep. 372, 48 N. E. 418, 40 L. R. A. 789, and n., if, after lapse of reasonable time, master does not supply defects, servant assumes risk; Watson v. Kansas, etc., Coal Co., 52 Mo. App. 372, holding servant does not assume risk unless he has knowledge of the conditions; Rogers v. Leyden, 127 Ind. 57, 26 N. E. 212, holding servant continuing in employ, after increase of danger, assumes the risk; Roux v. Blodgett, etc., Lumber Co., 85 Mich. 526, 24 Am St. Rep. 108, 48 N. W. 1094, 13 L. R. A. 731, and n., where assurances are made, servant, by continuing in employment, does not assume risk; Cerrillos, etc., R. Co. v. Deserant, 9 N. Mex. 59, 49 Pac. 810, holding company not chargeable with negligence in not providing a safer place to work; Lutz v. Atlantic, etc., R. Co., 6 N. Mex. 505, 30 Pac. 915, 16 L. R. A. 826, and n. (see dissenting opinion in 6 N. Mex. 520, 30 Pac. 926, 16 L. R. A. 831, and n.), holding failure to furnish proper caboose did not cause injury; Allen v. Logan, 10 Utah, 287, 37 Pac. 498, holding employer not liable, for caving bank; McKelvey v. Chesapeake, etc., Ry., 35 W. Va. 513, 14 S. E. 266, holding instruction bad because it contained no element of a promise to repair; Knight v. Cooper, 36 W. Va. 234, 14 S. E. 1000, holding servant, with knowledge of danger, must use diligence in protecting himself; Woodell v. West Virginia Imp. Co., 38 W. Va. 45, 17 S. E. 394, discussing cases involving doctrine of risk of employment.

Distinguished in Gerity v. Haley, 29 W. Va. 107, 11 S. E. 904, arguendo.

117 U. S. 634-648, 29 L. 1007, CONNECTICUT, ETC., INS. CO. v. SCAMMON.

Mortgagee receiving insurance policy as collateral for mortgagor's joint debt, must apply proceeds thereto, p. 646.

Mortgagee must either apply proceeds of insurance on property, to restoring property after fire, or to debt, p. 646.

Not cited.

117 U. S. 648-657, 29 L. 1021, GIVEN v. WRIGHT.

Taxation.— Long acquiescence in taxation, raises presumption of surrender of exemption, p. 655.

Approved in McCullough v. Virginia, 172 U. S. 119, 19 S. Ct. 140, holding owner of coupons had right to tender same for taxes; Stevens County v. St. Paul, etc., Ry., 36 Minn. 471, 31 N. W. 944, holding exemption from taxation passed with lands to which it was appendant; Wau-pe-man-qua v. Aldrich, 28 Fed. 499, and Board of Commissioners v. Simons, 129 Ind. 197, 28 N. E. 421, 13 L. R. A. 514, and n., holding lands not liable to taxation; West Hartford v. Board of Water Commissioners, 68 Conn. 334, 36 Atl. 790, holding long-continued usage had defined duties of water board; Dow v. Northern R. R., 67 N. H. 49, 36 Atl. 535, arguendo.

Courts.— State decision, justifying impairment of contract, under general law, is reviewable by Supreme Court, p. 656.

Reaffirmed in McCullough v. Virginia, 172 U. S. 119, 19 S. Ct. 140. Cited in 15 Am. St. Rep. 216, note.

117 U. S. 657-665, 29 L. 1026, DAVIESS COUNTY v. DICKINSON.

Municipal bonds, issued by County Court, in excess of authorized amount recommended by commissioners, held void, p. 663.

Reaffirmed in Francis v. Howard Co., 50 Fed. 56. Approved in Brenham v. German, etc., Bank, 144 U. S. 188, 36 L. 396, 12 S. Ct. 565, denying recovery on negotiable bonds, issued without authority; Weber v. Spokane Nat. Bank, 64 Fed. 211, 29 U. S. App. 97 (reversing S. C., 50 Fed. 737), holding debt contracted by national bank, in violation of statute, is valid; Lake County v. Standley, 24 Colo. 10, 49 Pac. 26, holding issue of bonds upon an indivisible contract, void as to whole issue; Laporte v. Gamewell, etc., Tel. Co., 146 Ind. 476, 58 Am. St. Rep. 366, 45 N. E. 591, 35 L. R. A. 690, holding debt for current expenses cannot be made beyond the constitutional limit; Commissioners v. Call, 123 N. C. 326, 31 S. E. 487, 44 L. R. A. 253, holding legislation authorizing the creation of county indebtedness must conform to constitutional requirements; Municipal Security Co. v. Baker County, 33 Or. 353, 54 Pac. 178, holding payment of unlawful indebtedness, not an estoppel; dissenting opinion in Edin-

[illegible] S. Dak. 607, 48 N. W. 136, [illegible] were void.

[illegible] County, 150 U. S. 188, 37 L. [illegible] not surrender part, and [illegible]

[illegible] showing overissue and in- [illegible] judge thereon, p. 664.

[illegible] S. 150, 32 L. 82, 8 S. Ct. 1106, [illegible] give no further effect to valid- [illegible] v. Lyon County, 44 Fed. 343, [illegible] of agent; Mercer County v. [illegible] 632, 43 U. S. App. 21, holding [illegible] that road had not actually been [illegible] Co. v. White, — Ky. —, 49 S. W. [illegible] of service of summons upon corpora- [illegible] County, 1 S. Dak. 227, 46 N. W. 176, [illegible] unauthorized officers, do not bind county; [illegible] 202, 49 N. W. 12, that auditor has [illegible] is no ground for refusing mandamus; [illegible] S. Dak. 427, 57 N. W. 70, holding school- [illegible] impeached, because unauthorized. See 51 [illegible]

[illegible] v. Santa Cruz, 89 Fed. 633, holding city [illegible] in bonds.

[illegible] to authorized amount, were valid, and only [illegible] p. 664.

[illegible] Francis v. Howard County, 50 Fed. 62, 64, Catron [illegible] County, 106 Mo. 668, 17 S. W. 579, and Citizens' Bank [illegible] 460, 14 S. W. 1007. Approved in Hopper v. Cov- [illegible] 151, 30 L. 192, 6 S. Ct. 1026, holding declaration [illegible] what purpose bond was made, is demurrable; Mer- [illegible] 138 U. S. 682, 34 L. 1073, 11 S. Ct. 445, holding [illegible] stopped to set up lack of authority; Chicago v. Mc- [illegible] 415, 52 N. E. 985, enforcing divisible contract as to [illegible] in excess of limit; The School Town of Winamac v. [illegible] Ind. 239, 50 N. E. 84, holding bond of contractor not void [illegible] holding contract created a debt in excess of limit; Crogster [illegible] County, 99 Wis. 11, 74 N. W. 638, upholding bonds not [illegible] of constitutional limitation. See 44 Am. St. Rep. 243, and [illegible] Rep. 856, notes.

[illegible] guished in Hedges v. Dixon Co., 150 U. S. 188, 37 L. 1047, [illegible] 73, holders of bonds could not offer to surrender part and [illegible] residue; Hedges v. Dixon Co., 37 Fed. 306, where contract [illegible] divisible and void in toto.

[illegible] cipality held not to have ratified an illegal overissue of [illegible] by payment of interest thereon, p. 665.

mmissioners v. Union Bank, 96 Fed.
helby County, 118 U. S. 452, 30 L. 189, ould be no ratification of invalid suber Oak Bank, 121 U. S. 136, 30 L. 929, ving on vote as giving rights against n Twp. v. Cummins, 142 U. S. 376, 35 void, bonds issued in excess of conater-Works Co. v. Westerly, 80 Fed. ratification of supposed contract by ssioners, 119 N. C. 230, 25 S. E. 970, ssioners v. Payne, 123 N. C. 489, 31
f interest from year to year, does not ected after term, except for clerical is as to facts, p. 678.

unty Court, 9 Colo. App. 47, 47 Pac.
s v. District of Columbia, 174 U. S.
rror did not render verdict a nullity;
526, court could not correct error in
, on motion; Christ v. Schell, 31 ng aside verdict not complete, when mship Co. v. Texas, etc., Ry., 32 Fed. substantially modify judgment; In re
Bankrupt Court could not summarily and set aside sale; Easton v. Houston, rehearing on intervention could not be United States v. Wallace, 46 Fed. 570, etermine whether judgment rendered
d; Klever v. Seawall, 65 Fed. 378, 22 vacate judgment after term, for error tport Sav. Bank, 68 Fed. 403, 37 U. S. nent suffered by mistake; Van Doren
d. 271, holding amendment to declara-r final judgment; Hockaday v. Jones, ding judgment rendered without ser-equent term.
Bowie, 148 U. S. 255, 37 L. 440, 13 S.
: aside verdict was not a final judg-
, 141 U. S. 419, 35 L. 776, 12 S. Ct. 11, riginal judgment.

ns on general law, since founding of : binding there, p. 678.

ot same power over its judgment at en rendered, p. 672.

Judgment at law, erroneously obtained, is properly relievable in equity, p. 675.

Approved in Knox County v. Harshman, 133 U. S. 154, 33 L. 588, 10 S. Ct. 238, dismissing bill to restrain process of execution upon judgment; Young v. Sigler, 48 Fed. 184, granting relief against judgment obtained in State court by fraud; Pelzer Mfg. Co. v. Hamburg, etc., Ins. Co., 62 Fed. 4, holding mistake in verdict could only be corrected in equity; Hamburg, etc., Ins. Co. v. Pelzer Mfg. Co., 76 Fed. 481, 42 U. S. App. 123, correcting mistake in announcing verdict; Perry v. Johnston, 95 Fed. 325, and Handley v. Jackson, 31 Or. 555, 65 Am. St. Rep. 841, 50 Pac. 916, enjoining the execution of an unconscionable judgment; State v. Superior Court, 8 Wash. 593, 36 Pac. 443, refusing to vacate judgment on ground of fraud. See 54 Am. St. Rep. 220, note.

117 U. S. 679-683, 29 L. 1024, JACKSON v. LAWRENCE.

Mortgages.— Absolute deed to secure debt, held a mortgage, and purchaser under power of sale gets good title, p. 683

Cited in Martin v. Pond, 30 Fed. 17, arguendo.

117 U. S. 683-689, 29 L. 1019, ZEIGLER v. HOPKINS.

Municipalities.— Owner of lands sold for taxes for street opening, may show petition for street opening not signed by required number of owners, p. 687.

Reaffirmed in Ogden v. Armstrong, 168 U. S. 236, 42 L. 451, 18 S. Ct. 102. Approved in Bradley v. Fallbrook Irr. Dist., 68 Fed. 961, 964, holding invalid, statute of California providing for assessments for forming irrigation districts; Watkins v. Griffith, 59 Ark. 357, 27 S. W. 238, and Roswell v. Dominice, — N. Mex. —, 58 Pac. 343, holding that petition by owners was a prerequisite to special assessment; Harmon v. Omaha, 53 Neb. 168, 73 N. W. 673, holding that void special taxes cannot be enforced; Armstrong v. Ogden, 12 Utah, 492, 43 Pac. 120, decision of city council that objections by owners of a sufficient number of feet were not filed, may be attacked in action to enjoin assessment.

Distinguished in Scotten v. Detroit, 106 Mich. 570, 64 N. W. 581, estopping landowner, since there had been a judicial determination.

Appellate court, after finding below that value in dispute is $6,000, will disregard affidavits contra, p. 689.

Approved in Talkington v. Dumbleton, 123 U. S. 746, 31 L. 314, 8 S. Ct. 336, refusing to consider affidavits tending to contradict finding of court in respect to value; Red River Cattle Co. v. Needham, 137 U. S. 634, 635, 34 L. 800, 11 S. Ct. 209, refusing to allow affidavits as to value to be filed; Davie v. Heyward, 33 Fed. 94, holding question of jurisdictional amount must be left to Supreme Court.

Distinguished in Wilson v. Blair, 119 U. S. 388, 30 L. 442, 7 S. Ct. 230, where record below was silent as to value of matter in dispute.

117 U. S. 689-696, 29 L. 1017, CANTRELL v. WALLICK.

Patents may issue for invention and improvement, and can only be used together by consent; infringer of both cannot set up first as excuse for infringing second, p. 694.

Approved in Hardwick v. Masland, 71 Fed. 889, presumption of patentable difference does not arise from grant of subsequent patent.

Patents.— Devices are same if performing substantially same function in substantially the same way, p. 695.

Approved in Mann's, etc., Car Co. v. Monarch, etc., Car Co., 34 Fed. 134, holding patent for signal apparatus in sleeping-cars, void for want of novelty; Thompson v. American, etc., Note Co., 35 Fed. 204, holding machine for forming staple-seams infringed; Harmon v. Struthers, 43 Fed. 448, mere reduction in size of gear is not invention, though efficiency is increased; Pacific, etc., Ry. v. Butte City, etc., Ry., 52 Fed. 866, mere introduction of link into brake connection did not avoid infringement; Sayre v. Scott, 55 Fed. 973, 3 U. S. App. 643, holding device merely changing shape of cutting edge, an infringement; Westinghouse v. New York Air-Brake Co., 59 Fed. 598, merely subdividing elements will not avoid infringement; Beach v. American, etc., Mach. Co., 63 Fed. 606, that part of one machine accomplishes more than correspondent part of other, is immaterial; Western Electric Co. v. Home Tel. Co., 85 Fed. 658, holding switch-board patent infringed; King v. Anderson, 90 Fed. 504, holding substitution of materials was invention; Holloway v. Dow, 54 Fed. 514, and Travers v. American Cordage Co., 64 Fed. 774, arguendo.

Patents.— Burden is on infringer to establish prior use and want of novelty as defense, p. 695.

Reaffirmed in Anderson v. Monroe, 55 Fed. 397, Pacific, etc., Ry. v. Butte County, etc., Ry., 55 Fed. 764, Richardson v. Campbell, 72 Fed. 526, Dodge v. Post, 76 Fed. 809, Bowers v. Pacific, etc., Reclamation Co., 81 Fed. 571, and Bowers v. San Francisco Bridge Co., 91 Fed. 409. Approved in The Barbed-Wire Patent, 143 U. S. 285, 36 L. 159, 12 S. Ct. 447, holding proof sustaining an unpatented device, set up as a complete anticipation, must be beyond a reasonable doubt; Cary v. Lovell Mfg. Co., 31 Fed. 347, sustaining Cary patent for spiral springs; Hat, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Davis, etc., Mach. Co., 32 Fed. 404, holding that facts raised a presumption of validity; American Bell Tel. Co. v. American, etc., Tel. Co., 35 Fed. 739, 1 L. R. A. 62, treating experiment as having been abandoned; Putnam v. Keystone, etc., Stopper Co., 38 Fed. 236, granting pre-

[illegible] injunction; Harmon v. Strothers, [illegible] Fed. [illegible], overruling defense of prior use; United States, etc., Lighting Co. v. Edison Lamp Co., 51 Fed. 28, holding evidence of prior invention insufficient to overcome presumption; Francis v. Kirkpatrick Co., 52 Fed. 837, overruling defense of anticipation; Singer Mfg. Co. v. Brill, 54 Fed. [illegible], 7 U. S. App. 601, holding finding of infringement by jury not reviewable; Harper Co. v. Wilgus, 56 Fed. 588, 15 U. S. App. 148, refusing to consider objection to verdict, because evidence showed patent was anticipated; Barnes etc., Sprinkler Co. v. Walworth Mfg. Co., [illegible] Fed. 607, 18 U. S. App. 338, upholding defense that patented device was anticipated by a prior patent; Electric [illegible] v. Edison, etc., Light Co., [illegible] Fed. 837, 18 U. S. App. 637, [illegible] has been sustained, right [illegible] only by a new defense, [illegible] trial; Mast v. Iowa, [illegible] subsequently abandoned, [illegible] Bridge Co. v. Keat- [illegible] verdict of jury upon [illegible] Co. v. Peters Cartridge [illegible] on question of priority [illegible] evidence; American, etc., [illegible] Fed. 993, where claimant [illegible] foreign country prior to his [illegible] is on him; Morgan v. Dan- [illegible] Ct. 773, and Earl v. Southern [illegible] prior adjudication, sustaining [illegible] man, 79 Fed. 323, and Consoli- [illegible] Co., 79 Fed. 798, both con- [illegible]; Hobie v. Smith, 27 Fed. 659, [illegible] etc., Electrical Co., 54 Fed. 679, [illegible] and Hanifen v. E. H. Godshalk [illegible], all holding prior use not proved; [illegible], Kinnear & Co. v. Capital, etc., [illegible] Wilkins, etc., Fastener Co. v. Webb, [illegible] patent is prima facie evidence of its

[illegible] v. UNITED STATES.

[illegible] are advisory merely, not obligatory; [illegible] Supreme Court, p. 702.

[illegible] 148 U. S. 224, 37 L. 430, 13 S. Ct. 578, [illegible] decision of Court of Claims on part of [illegible] Min. Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 456, [illegible] decree rendered by Court of Claims was bind- [illegible] Co. v. Attorney-General, 124 U. S. 590 (see [illegible] arguendo.

Distinguished in Interstate Commerce Commission v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 483, 484, 38 L. 1059, 14 S. Ct. 1135, holding commission could not be invested with power to compel obedience to its orders by fine or imprisonment.

Courts.— Congress cannot enlarge Supreme Court's appellate powers, or authorize non-judicial opinion by it, p. 702.

Reaffirmed in In re Pacific Ry. Commrs., 12 Sawy. 587, 32 Fed. 259. Approved in United States v. Old Settlers, 148 U. S. 466, 37 L. 524, 13 S. Ct. 666, holding Congress had not authorized courts to go behind treaty of 1846, with Cherokee Nation; Styles v. Tyler, 64 Conn. 453, 30 Atl. 172, arguendo.

Courts.— Congress having omitted to transfer records of territorial court, Supreme Court will not bring up record and proceed to judgment, p. 704.

Reaffirmed in Pendleton v. Cowling, 11 Mont. 48, 27 Pac. 388.

Constitutionality of law is judicial question to be decided by the courts, p. 705.

Reaffirmed in State v. Cunningham, 83 Wis. 137, 35 Am. St. Rep. 45, 53 N. W. 53, 17 L. R. A. 166.

The Citations in the foregoing annotations include all from the following Reports and all preceding them in each State or series:

U. S.	175	Mo. App.	79
Law. Ed.	42	Mont.	22
Fed. Rep.	96	Neb.	56
U. S. Ap. (excepting 59)	63	Nev.	23
		N. H.	67
Ala.	119	N. J. Eq.	57
Ariz.	1	N. J. L.	62
Ark.	65	N. M.	8
Cal.	125	N. Y.	160
Colo.	25	N. C.	123
Colo. Ap.	12	N. D.	8
Conn.	71	Ohio	60
Dak.	6	Or.	33
Del. Pennewill	1	Pa.	192
Fla.	39	R. I.	19
Ga.	107	S. C.	54
Ida.	2	S. D.	10
Ill.	181	Tenn.	102
Ind.	152	Tex.	92
Ind. Ap.	22	Tex. Civ.	19
Iowa	107	Tex. Cr.	38
Kans.	60	Utah	18
Kans. Ap.	7	Vt.	70
Ky.	101	Va.	96
La. Ann.	51	Wash.	20
Md.	89	W. Va.	45
Me.	92	Wis.	102
Mass.	173	Wyo.	6
Mich.	117	Am. Dec.	100
Minn.	73	Am. Rep.	60
Miss.	76	Am. St. Rep.	71
Mo.	150	L. R. A.	45

with duplicate references to the Reporter System and later cases, including

Sup. Ct.	19	N. E.	53
Atl.	43	N. W.	80
Pac.	58	S. E.	33
So.	25	S. W.	53

APPENDIX.

Cases disposed of at October Term, 1885, in which no opinions were delivered.

No. 6. HEWITT v. MCOUAT. Dismissed, pursuant to 19th Rule.

7. SAVAGE v. BURNS. Dismissed, pursuant to 19th Rule.

10. EDWARDS v. FARRELL. Affirmed, per stipulation.

11. PAYNE, &c. v. MOORE, &c. Dismissed by appellants.

15. ASBILL v. WHITMORE. Dismissed per stipulation.

20. WISDOM v. SHELBY COUNTY. Dismissed per stipulation.

51. PUTNAM v. HUTCHINSON. Dismissed per stipulation.

54. PUTNAM v. HUTCHINSON. Dismissed per stipulation.

63 PAULSEN v. RAILWAY CO. Affirmed.

352. BACHMAN v. RAILWAY CO. Affirmed.

90. MCCLURE v. UNITED STATES. Dismissed by appellant.

137. MCKAY v. LEHMAN. Dismissed by stipulation.

139. CURTIN v. PEOPLE. Dismissed by plaintiff in error.

146. BLUE RIDGE v. HYDE. Dismissed by plaintiff in error.

153. NEELY v. CALDWELL. Dismissed by plaintiff in error.

171. MORELEY v. KIMBERLY. Dismissed, pursuant to 28th Rule.

181. THOMAS v. LANSING. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

191. BANK v. DUDLEY. Dismissed per stipulation.

289. RAILROAD COMPANY v. COMMISSIONERS, &c. Dismissed by plaintiff in error.

294. CAMPBELL v. OSWEGO TOWNSHIP. Dismissed by plaintiff in error.

537, 538. WILSON v. COMMISSIONERS, &c. Dismissed by plaintiff in error.

623. KIRKPATRICK v. BAKER. Dismissed per stipulation.

663. MINING COMPANY v. MINING COMPANY. Dismissed per stipulation.

682. ELDER v. ULMAN. Dismissed per stipulation.

898. PAUL v. CULLUM. Dismissed by appellant.

1055. UNITED STATES v. "THE PURRISIMA," &c. Dismissed by appellant.

1056. UNITED STATES v. MURGA. Dismissed by appellant.

-

GENERAL INDEX

TO THE

FOUR VOLUMES CONTAINED IN THIS BOOK.

114, 115, 116, 117.

ACCORD AND SATISFACTION.

SEE CONTRACTS, 12.

Certain attorneys were employed by the State of Texas to recover certain bonds and coupons, or the proceeds thereof, their compensation to be a percentage of the amount recovered. Agents subsequently appointed for the same purpose are not liable upon a promise made to the attorneys to withhold the amount recovered until the attorneys should be paid, said attorneys having, before the money was paid over, entered into a compromise and released the State.

Morris v. Giddings, 403

ACTIONS.

SEE APPEAL AND ERROR, 72.
BONDS, 5, 7.
CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 29, 66.
CONTRACTS, 10, 11.
DEBIT.
INTERNAL REVENUE, 2.
JURISDICTION, 11.
NEGLIGENCE, 5.
PARTNERSHIP, 5, 6.
PENALTIES, 2.
REMOVAL OF CAUSES, passim.
REPLEVIN, 1.
SALES, 4.
SET-OFF, 2.

1. Detinue lies for personal property, distrained by the defendant for delinquent taxes, in payment of which the plaintiff had duly tendered coupons cut from bonds issued by the State of Virginia under the Funding Act of March 30, 1871.

Poindexter v. Greenhow, 135

2. Where, by an Act of Congress, the Secretary of the Treasury is required to pay a certain claim against the United States, and no discretion in the premises is vested in him, the claimant is entitled to payment, and no suit lies to recover back the amount when paid on the ground of mistake, unless Congress abrogates the law under which payment was made.

United States v. Price, 541

ADMIRALTY.

SEE JURISDICTION, 5-8.
PRACTICE, 10, 11.

1. Where, in cases of collision, it appears that signals were exchanged as required by Rule 2 of the Board of Supervising Inspectors of Steam Vessels, and the question of distance between the vessels at the time of such exchange of signals is not raised in the court below, it will be presumed to have been at the proper distance, as nothing appears to the contrary.

Steamboat Charles Morgan v. Kouns, 316

2. Under the operation of Admiralty Rule 24, the Circuit Court may, in its discretion, permit an amendment of the libel, so as to include a claim for damages growing out of the original cause of action and litigated in the court below, but rejected because not specified in the pleadings.

Idem, 316

3. The finding of the board of local inspectors, in proceedings instituted under sec. 4450, R. S., and the documents connected therewith, are inadmissible evidence.

Idem, 316

4. In a charter party, which describes the ship by name and as "of the burthen of 1,100 tons, or thereabouts, registered measurement," and by which the owner agrees to receive on board, and the charterer engages to provide, "a full and complete cargo, say about 11,500 quarters of wheat in bulk," the statement of her registered tonnage is not a warranty or condition precedent.

Watts v. Camors, 406

5. The clause in a charter party, by which the parties mutually bind themselves, the ship and freight, and the merchandise to be laden on board, "in the penal sum of estimated amount of freight," to the performance of their agreements, is not a stipulation for liquidated damages, but a penalty to secure the payment of the amount of damage that either party may actually suffer from any breach of the contract; and is to be so treated in a court of admiralty of the United States.

Idem, 406

6. Under a charter party which allowed fifteen lay days for loading, the owner of the ship tendered her to the charterers, they immediately refused to accept her, and thirty-six days afterward he obtained another cargo; but negotiations were pending between the parties for half of that time, and the owner sustained substantial damage in a certain amount by the failure of the charterers to comply with their contract. The Circuit Court found these facts, and entered a decree against the charterers for that amount. Held, no error in law, for which the charterers could have the decree reversed in this court.

Idem, 406

AGENCY.

SEE PRINCIPAL AND AGENT.

ALIENS.

SEE JURISDICTION, 6, 8, 9.

APPEAL AND ERROR.

SEE ADMIRALTY, 6.
CONFEDERATE NOTES, 2.
COSTS, passim.
FOREIGN COINS, 3.
JUDGMENTS AND DECREES, 6.
JURISDICTION, passim.
NEW TRIAL.
PRACTICE, 3.
PROHIBITION, 1, 2, 6.
REMOVAL OF CAUSES, 33.

1. Affidavits presented to the master, or the court below, as grounds of application to reopen the proofs, cannot be considered by this court on appeal.

Thomson v. Wooster, 105

2. A judgment is final for purposes of a writ of error to this court, which terminates the litigation between the parties on the merits of the case, the court below having only to execute its judgment in case of affirmance.

Mower v. Fletcher, 117

3. Under the Utah Code of Criminal Procedure of 1878, a judgment upon a verdict of guilty of murder, the record of which states that the court charged the jury, and does not contain the charge in writing, nor show that with the defendant's consent it was given orally, is erroneous, and must be reversed on appeal.
Hopt v. Utah, 183
4. A general exception to a charge, not directing attention to particular portions objected to, raises no question for review by this court.
Burton v. West Jersey Ferry Co., 215
5. No bond is required in cases by or against insolvent national banks when brought to this court by direction of the Comptroller of the Currency.
Pacific Nat. Bk. v. Mixter, 221
6. Where the record shows that the Comptroller directed a writ of error, a mistake in name is no ground for dismissal.
Idem, 221
7. A motion in arrest has no more effect than a motion for a new trial, and cannot be reviewed on a writ of error.
Canal & Cl. St. R. R. Co. v. Hart, 226
8. Questions not raised on the trial before the jury, and saved by a bill of exceptions, cannot be considered by this court on a writ of error.
Idem, 226
9. An objection cannot be raised here which has been waived in the court below.
Richmond Mining Co. v. Ross, 273
10. The decision of a state court as to what constitutes the commencement of a suit in that court is not reviewable here.
Idem, 273
11. The giving of an appeal bond is not essential to the taking of an appeal though it is essential to its prosecution.
Dodge v. Knowles, 144
12. The judicial allowance of an appeal in open court at the term in which the decree has been rendered is sufficient notice of the taking of an appeal.
Idem, 144
13. The citation is for the purpose of notice. When omitted, a motion to dismiss will not be granted until an opportunity to give the notice has been given.
Idem, 144
14. An order of this court served upon the appellee, to appear and argue the cause if he sees fit, is itself the legal equivalent of a citation.
Idem, 144
15. An objection not raised in the court below is waived.
Union Pac. R. Co. v. Myers, 319
16. An appeal from a decree adjudging certain sums to various appellees will be dismissed as to any appellee in whose favor the decree is for less than $5,000.
Stewart v. Dunham, 329
17. A motion for a commission to take depositions de bene esse, pending an appeal, is denied, there being a remedy under sec. 866, R. S.
Richter v. Jerome, 345
18. This court cannot review the weight of the evidence, and can look into it only to see whether there was error in not directing a verdict for the plaintiff on the question of variance, or because there was no evidence to sustain the verdict.
Lancaster v. Collins, 373
19. The question as to which party shall make the closing argument to the jury is one of practice, and is not the subject of a bill of exceptions or of a writ of error.
Idem, 373
20. No judgment should be reversed in a court of error when it is clear that the error could not have prejudiced, and did not prejudice, the rights of the party against whom the ruling was made.
Idem, 373
21. Where suit is brought against heirs to enforce their liability for the payment of a note on which their ancestor was bound, and they plead neither counterclaim nor set-off, and ask no affirmative relief, and separate judgments are rendered against each for his proportionate share, this court has jurisdiction in error only over those judgments which exceed $5,000.
Henderson v. Wadsworth, 377
22. Upon appeal from a decree against all of the defendants jointly, after the death of one of the appellants the appeal may proceed at the suit of the survivors.
Moses v. Wooster, 391
23. A motion to dismiss will be granted where it appears on the face of the opinion, when it forms a part of the record, that the decision by the su[illegible] court did not involve a federal question.
Jacks v. Helena, 3[illegible]
24. In the absence of any assignment of errors, [illegible] counsel for plaintiff in error having withdrawn [illegible] appearance, the judgment will be affirmed.
Boston Gold Mining Co. v. Eagle C. & S. Mining Co., 3[illegible]
25. Upon a motion to dismiss before printing [illegible] record, the motion papers must so present the ca[illegible] as to make a reference to the transcript unnec[illegible]sary.
Waterville v. Van Slyke, 4[illegible]
26. Neither an injunction nor a decree dissolvi[illegible] an injunction is reversed or nullified by an appe[illegible] or writ of error before the cause is heard in t[illegible] court.
Leonard v. Ozark Land Co., 4[illegible]
27. This doctrine applies to an injunction co[illegible]tained in a decree appealed from, without reference to whether such an injunction was in perpetuati[illegible] of an order to the same effect, or was then for t[illegible] first time granted.
Idem, 44[illegible]
28. Under equity, Rule 93, the judge who allow[illegible] the appeal may give special notice that the injunc[illegible]tion is to continue in force pending the appeal.
Idem, 44[illegible]
29. The jurisdiction of this court in an action up[illegible] on a money demand, is governed by the value of the actual matter in dispute, as shown by the whole record, and not alone by the damages claimed in the prayer for judgment.
Bowman v. Chicago & N. R. Co., 50[illegible]
30. In a controversy between the trustee in a railroad mortgage and certain creditors claiming superior liens, it is held that the demand of each creditor is separate and distinct, and that the jurisdiction of this court does not extend to the creditors whose several decrees do not exceed $5,000.
Hassall v. Wilcox, 504
31. The trustee represents all of the bondholders; this appeal is therefore their appeal and is to be treated as such.
Idem, 504
32. Where it does not appear from the record that a federal question was actually presented or in any way relied on before final judgment below, this court is without jurisdiction.
Simmerman v. Nebraska, 535
33. This court acts on the case as made to the court below when the judgment was rendered, and cannot incorporate into the record new matter appearing on the petition for rehearing.
Idem, 535
34. A stipulation by the parties and the finding of the court thereon, will be construed, on appeal, with reference to existing laws affecting the subject matter.
Utah & N. R. Co v. Fisher, 542
35. A citation is one of the necessary elements of an appeal taken after the term, and if it is not issued and served before the term to which it is made returnable then the appeal becomes inoperative.
Hewitt v. Filbert, 581
36. An appeal from the Court of Claims brings up for review the decisions of that court upon questions of law arising in the course of the trial, or in the application of the law to the facts as finally found by it.
Union Pac. R. Co. v. United States, 584
37. An appeal under sec. 5261, R. S., is subject to the general rules regulating appeals from the Court of Claims.
Idem, 584
38. Certain special findings which were requested in the court below were properly refused, as they related to mere incidental facts amounting only to evidence which had performed its office when the facts were found.
Idem, 584
39. When it appears that there is no longer an existing cause of action between the parties to a writ of error, pending in this court, it will be dismissed.
San Mateo County v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 589
40. An objection to the service of a citation of a writ of error to a state court in another State by the marshal of a district therein, can only be taken advantage of by a motion to dismiss made promptly, on appearance limited to that specific purpose.
Renaud v. Abbott, 629
41. The substitution, by the state court, of the plaintiff in error upon the death of the plaintiff after judgment, was a question which that court had the exclusive right to determine.

Idem, 629
42. Upon a writ of error to the highest court of a State, this court takes judicial notice of the law of another State only where, by the local law, that court takes judicial notice of it.
Idem, 629
43. Where the record does not contain more, this court must take the findings of the trial court as adopted by the court below, and determine the case on their sufficiency, considered in connection with the pleadings to support the judgment.
O'Reilly v. Campbell, 669
44. It is a general rule that an objection to want of proof of a fact, which might be met at once, must be taken at the trial or it will be considered as waived, except as to matters going to the jurisdiction.
Idem, 669
45. Findings of fact are not construed with the strictness of special pleadings.
Idem, 669
46. Where it appears upon examination of affidavits and counter-affidavits, filed in this court, that the value of the property in dispute is less than $5,000 the writ of error will be dismissed.
Wells v. Wilkins, 671
47. Where it does not appear, either from the record or by affidavits, that the value of the matter in dispute exceeds $5,000 the writ of error will be dismissed.
Johnson v. Wilkins, 671
48. Where, upon a writ of error to a state court, a federal question is raised here, and it is possible that its decision was necessarily involved in the judgment below, a motion to dismiss will not be sustained, although it may not appear affirmatively on the face of the record that such question was raised below.
Eureka L. & Y. Can. Co. v. Superior Court, 671
49. Upon a second appeal from the Court of Claims the findings of fact at the first trial and the original petition, an amended petition having been substituted therefor, form no part of the record.
Union Pac. R. Co. v. United States, 677
50. Cases advanced under sec. 3, Rule 32, are to be submitted on printed briefs or arguments after service of notice and brief or argument.
Fletcher v. Hamlet, 679
51. Upon a writ of error to reverse a judgment of forfeiture for violation of the internal revenue laws, questions arising on certain demurrers and the question as to the jurisdiction of the Circuit Court, are subject to review, though no bill of exceptions appears in the record.
Coffey v. United States, 681
52. A general verdict upon an information under the revenue laws for forfeiture of goods only, will be upheld if but one of several counts is good.
Idem, 681
53. Upon a writ of error to reverse a judgment of forfeiture for a violation of the internal revenue laws, questions involving the sufficiency of the information and the regularity of the proceedings, which were not formally raised in the court below, and are not presented by bill of exceptions, cannot be considered by this court.
Coffey v. United States, 684
54. The claimant, having by answer denied the allegations of the first count of the information, cannot, on the record so presented, be heard to say that he did not know the charge made and could not defend against it.
Idem, 684
55. One good count in an information will uphold the judgment after a general verdict.
Idem, 684
56. Upon a writ of error to a state court if the record shows on its face that a federal question was not necessarily involved, and does not show that one was raised, this court will not go out of it to the opinion or elsewhere, to ascertain whether one was in fact decided.
Otis v. Oregon Steamship Co., 719
57. Upon a writ of error to review a judgment entered upon a special finding of facts, the trial in the court below having been without a jury, in the absence of a bill of exceptions this court can only consider such special finding, and will ignore a stipulation between the parties after the trial that certain other facts were shown by proof at the trial.
Chicago Tyre and S. W. Co. v. Spalding, 720
58. Cases in which the execution of the revenue laws of a State have been enjoined or stayed, will only be advanced on motion of the State or those claiming under it, and then it must appear that the operations of the government of the State will be embarrassed by delay.
Kentucky Central R. R. Co. v. Bourbon County, 725
59. Whatever has been decided by this court on one writ of error cannot be re-examined on a subsequent writ of error in the same case.
Chaffin v. Taylor, 727
60. Every question of law presented was covered by the former judgment of this court, 114 U. S. 309; and it was error for the state court in proceedings under the mandate to permit the filing of a rejoinder setting up matters of law which had been already finally adjudged by this court in the same case.
Idem, 727
61. Where a plea to the jurisdiction was filed by a defendant and overruled in the Circuit Court and no error was assigned and the point was not referred to on the argument in this court, leave is granted by the court, of its own motion, to counsel to file arguments on the question by a day named.
Pa. R. R. Co. v. St. Louis, etc., R. R. Co., 696
62. A trial by an impartial jury being all that a party can demand the allowance of a challenge for cause, even if the cause was insufficient, is no ground of complaint where a competent and unbiased jury was finally selected.
Northern Pac. R. R. Co. v. Herbert, 755
63. It is for the party asserting error to show it. Where a party was entitled to peremptory challenge it will not be assumed that a juror was rejected on a challenge for cause.
Idem, 755
64. When a case is brought here from a Circuit Court for review, in which the matter in controversy is less than $5,000, it will be dismissed, although accompanied by a certificate of division of opinion by the judges holding the court, unless that certificate presents a case proper for the consideration of this court and not a proposition of mixed law and fact.
Waterville v. Van Slyke, 772
65. While such a statement must accompany the certificate as to show that the question of law is applicable to the case, the point on which the judges differed must be a distinct question of law clearly stated.
Idem, 772
66. If more than one material question of distinct law occurs on which the judges sitting differ, these questions may be embraced in the certificate, but where it is apparent that the whole case is presented to this court for decision, with all its propositions of law and fact, it will not be entertained.
Idem, 772
67. There is nothing in sec. 763, R. S., which requires that appeals from the District Court in cases of habeas corpus shall be to the next term of the Circuit Court. On the contrary the subject is otherwise regulated by sec. 765, R. S.
Roberts v. Reilly, 544
68. An objection that the hearing of the appeal by the court below was at chambers and not in open court cannot be made here for the first time.
Idem, 544
69. An appeal will not be entertained from a decree of an inferior court in exact accordance with the mandate of this court upon a previous appeal.
Mackall v. Richards, 558
70. Where an appeal was taken for the sole purpose of correcting a certain error, it is proper to construe the mandate as in effect nothing more than an order for such correction, leaving the remainder of the decree to stand.
Idem, 558
71. Where, since the original decree, the rights of the parties have so changed as to make it improper to carry the decree into execution, relief can only be had through some form of original proceeding.
Idem, 558
72. The decree in this case, although rendered at general term, was still the decree of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Idem, 558
73. Under the rules regulating appeals from the Court of Claims the evidence cannot be brought up, and the special Act under which this case was brought does not take it out of the operation of the rules.
McClure v. United States, 572
74. A cause will not be remanded to the Court of Claims for further findings where the findings desired would simply bring before this court the com-

3. Under the Utah Code of Criminal Procedure of 1878, a judgment upon a verdict of guilty of murder, the record of which states that the court charged the jury, and does not contain the charge in writing, nor show that with the defendant's consent it was given orally, is erroneous, and must be reversed on appeal.
Hopt v. Utah, 183
4. A general exception to a charge, not directing attention to particular portions objected to, raises no question for review by this court.
Burton v. West Jersey Ferry Co., 215
5. No bond is required in cases by or against insolvent national banks when brought to this court by direction of the Comptroller of the Currency.
Pacific Nat. Bk. v. Mixter, 221
6. Where the record shows that the Comptroller directed a writ of error, a mistake in name is no ground for dismissal.
Idem, 221
7. A motion in arrest has no more effect than a motion for a new trial, and cannot be reviewed on a writ of error.
Canal & Cl. St. R. R. Co. v. Hart, 226
8. Questions not raised on the trial before the jury, and saved by a bill of exceptions, cannot be considered by this court on a writ of error.
Idem, 226
9. An objection cannot be raised here which has been waived in the court below.
Richmond Mining Co. v. Rose, 273
10. The decision of a state court as to what constitutes the commencement of a suit in that court is not reviewable here.
Idem, 273
11. The giving of an appeal bond is not essential to the taking of an appeal though it is essential to its prosecution.
Dodge v. Knowles, 144
12. The judicial allowance of an appeal in open court at the term in which the decree has been rendered is sufficient notice of the taking of an appeal.
Idem, 144
13. The citation is for the purpose of notice. When omitted, a motion to dismiss will not be granted until an opportunity to give the notice has been given.
Idem, 144
14. An order of this court served upon the appellee, to appear and argue the cause if he sees fit, is itself the legal equivalent of a citation.
Idem, 144
15. An objection not raised in the court below is waived.
Union Pac. R. Co. v. Myers, 319
16. An appeal from a decree adjudging certain sums to various appellees will be dismissed as to any appellee in whose favor the decree is for less than $5,000.
Stewart v. Dunham, 329
17. A motion for a commission to take depositions de bene esse, pending an appeal, is denied, there being a remedy under sec. 866, R. S.
Richter v. Jerome, 345
18. This court cannot review the weight of the evidence, and can look into it only to see whether there was error in not directing a verdict for the plaintiff on the question of variance, or because there was no evidence to sustain the verdict.
Lancaster v. Collins, 373
19. The question as to which party shall make the closing argument to the jury is one of practice, and is not the subject of a bill of exceptions or of a writ of error.
Idem. 373
20. No judgment should be reversed in a court of error when it is clear that the error could not have prejudiced, and did not prejudice, the rights of the party against whom the ruling was made.
Idem, 373
21. Where suit is brought against heirs to enforce their liability for the payment of a note on which their ancestor was bound, and they plead neither counterclaim nor set-off, and ask no affirmative relief, and separate judgments are rendered against each for his proportionate share, this court has jurisdiction in error only over those judgments which exceed $5,000.
Henderson v. Wadsworth, 377
22. Upon appeal from a decree against all of the defendants jointly, after the death of one of the appellants the appeal may proceed at the suit of the survivors.
Moses v. Wooster, 391
23. A motion to dismiss will be granted where it appears on the face of the opinion, when it forms a part of the record, that the decision by the state court did not involve a federal question.
Jacks v. Helena, 392
24. In the absence of any assignment of errors, the counsel for plaintiff in error having withdrawn his appearance, the judgment will be affirmed.
Boston Gold Mining Co. v. Eagle C. & S. Mining Co., 392
25. Upon a motion to dismiss before printing the record, the motion papers must so present the case as to make a reference to the transcript unnecessary.
Waterville v. Van Slyke, 406
26. Neither an injunction nor a decree dissolving an injunction is reversed or nullified by an appeal or writ of error before the cause is heard in this court.
Leonard v. Ozark Land Co., 445
27. This doctrine applies to an injunction contained in a decree appealed from, without reference to whether such an injunction was in perpetuation of an order to the same effect, or was then for the first time granted.
Idem, 445
28. Under equity, Rule 93, the judge who allows the appeal may give special notice that the injunction is to continue in force pending the appeal.
Idem, 445
29. The jurisdiction of this court in an action upon a money demand, is governed by the value of the actual matter in dispute, as shown by the whole record, and not alone by the damages claimed in the prayer for judgment.
Bowman v. Chicago & N. R. Co., 502
30. In a controversy between the trustee in a railroad mortgage and certain creditors claiming superior liens, it is held that the demand of each creditor is separate and distinct, and that the jurisdiction of this court does not extend to the creditors whose several decrees do not exceed $5,000.
Hassall v. Wilcox, 504
31. The trustee represents all of the bondholders; this appeal is therefore their appeal and is to be treated as such.
Idem, 504
32. Where it does not appear from the record that a federal question was actually presented or in any way relied on before final judgment below, this court is without jurisdiction.
Simmerman v. Nebraska, 535
33. This court acts on the case as made to the court below when the judgment was rendered, and cannot incorporate into the record new matter appearing on the petition for rehearing.
Idem, 535
34. A stipulation by the parties and the finding of the court thereon, will be construed, on appeal, with reference to existing laws affecting the subject matter.
Utah & N. R. Co v. Fisher, 542
35. A citation is one of the necessary elements of an appeal taken after the term, and if it is not issued and served before the term to which it is made returnable then the appeal becomes inoperative.
Hewitt v. Filbert, 581
36. An appeal from the Court of Claims brings up for review the decisions of that court upon questions of law arising in the course of the trial, or in the application of the law to the facts as finally found by it.
Union Pac. R. Co. v. United States, 584
37. An appeal under sec. 5261, R. S., is subject to the general rules regulating appeals from the Court of Claims.
Idem, 584
38. Certain special findings which were requested in the court below were properly refused, as they related to mere incidental facts amounting only to evidence which had performed its office when the facts were found.
Idem, 584
39. When it appears that there is no longer an existing cause of action between the parties to a writ of error, pending in this court, it will be dismissed.
San Mateo County v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 589
40. An objection to the service of a citation of a writ of error to a state court in another State by the marshal of a district therein, can only be taken advantage of by a motion to dismiss made promptly, on appearance limited to that specific purpose.
Renaud v. Abbott, 629
41. The substitution, by the state court, of the plaintiff in error upon the death of the plaintiff after judgment, was a question which that court had the exclusive right to determine.

Idem, 629

42. Upon a writ of error to the highest court of a State, this court takes judicial notice of the law of another State only where, by the local law, that court takes judicial notice of it.
Idem, 629

43. Where the record does not contain more, this court must take the findings of the trial court as adopted by the court below, and determine the case on their sufficiency, considered in connection with the pleadings to support the judgment.
O'Reilly v. Campbell, 669

44. It is a general rule that an objection to want of proof of a fact, which might be met at once, must be taken at the trial or it will be considered as waived, except as to matters going to the jurisdiction.
Idem, 669

45. Findings of fact are not construed with the strictness of special pleadings.
Idem, 669

46. Where it appears upon examination of affidavits and counter-affidavits, filed in this court, that the value of the property in dispute is less than $5,000 the writ of error will be dismissed.
Wells v. Wilkins, 671

47. Where it does not appear, either from the record or by affidavits, that the value of the matter in dispute exceeds $5,000 the writ of error will be dismissed.
Johnson v. Wilkins, 671

48. Where, upon a writ of error to a state court, a federal question is raised here, and it is possible that its decision was necessarily involved in the judgment below, a motion to dismiss will not be sustained, although it may not appear affirmatively on the face of the record that such question was raised below.
Eureka L. & Y. Can. Co. v. Superior Court, 671

49. Upon a second appeal from the Court of Claims the findings of fact at the first trial and the original petition, an amended petition having been substituted therefor, form no part of the record.
Union Pac. R. Co. v. United States, 677

50. Cases advanced under sec. 3, Rule 32, are to be submitted on printed briefs or arguments after service of notice and brief or argument.
Fletcher v. Hamlet, 679

51. Upon a writ of error to reverse a judgment of forfeiture for violation of the internal revenue laws, questions arising on certain demurrers and the question as to the jurisdiction of the Circuit Court, are subject to review, though no bill of exceptions appears in the record.
Coffey v. United States, 681

52. A general verdict upon an information under the revenue laws for forfeiture of goods only, will be upheld if but one of several counts is good.
Idem, 681

53. Upon a writ of error to reverse a judgment of forfeiture for a violation of the internal revenue laws, questions involving the sufficiency of the information and the regularity of the proceedings, which were not formally raised in the court below, and are not presented by bill of exceptions, cannot be considered by this court.
Coffey v. United States, 684

54. The claimant, having by answer denied the allegations of the first count of the information, cannot, on the record so presented, be heard to say that he did not know the charge made and could not defend against it.
Idem, 684

55. One good count in an information will uphold the judgment after a general verdict.
Idem, 684

56. Upon a writ of error to a state court if the record shows on its face that a federal question was not necessarily involved, and does not show that one was raised, this court will not go out of it to the opinion or elsewhere, to ascertain whether one was in fact decided.
Otis v. Oregon Steamship Co., 719

57. Upon a writ of error to review a judgment entered upon a special finding of facts, the trial in the court below having been without a jury, in the absence of a bill of exceptions this court can only consider such special finding, and will ignore a stipulation between the parties after the trial that certain other facts were shown by proof at the trial.
Chicago Tyre and S. W. Co. v. Spalding, 720

58. Cases in which the execution of the revenue laws of a State have been enjoined or stayed, will only be advanced on motion of the State or those claiming under it, and then it must appear that the operations of the government of the State will be embarrassed by delay.
Kentucky Central R. R. Co. v. Bourbon County, 725

59. Whatever has been decided by this court on one writ of error cannot be re-examined on a subsequent writ of error in the same case.
Chaffin v. Taylor, 727

60. Every question of law presented was covered by the former judgment of this court, 114 U. S. 309; and it was error for the state court in proceedings under the mandate to permit the filing of a rejoinder setting up matters of law which had been already finally adjudged by this court in the same case.
Idem, 727

61. Where a plea to the jurisdiction was filed by a defendant and overruled in the Circuit Court and no error was assigned and the point was not referred to on the argument in this court, leave is granted by the court, of its own motion, to counsel to file arguments on the question by a day named.
Pa. R. R. Co. v. St. Louis, etc., R. R. Co., 696

62. A trial by an impartial jury being all that a party can demand the allowance of a challenge for cause, even if the cause was insufficient, is no ground of complaint where a competent and unbiased jury was finally selected.
Northern Pac. R. R. Co. v. Herbert, 755

63. It is for the party asserting error to show it. Where a party was entitled to peremptory challenge it will not be assumed that a juror was rejected on a challenge for cause.
Idem, 755

64. When a case is brought here from a Circuit Court for review, in which the matter in controversy is less than $5,000, it will be dismissed, although accompanied by a certificate of division of opinion by the judges holding the court, unless that certificate presents a case proper for the consideration of this court and not a proposition of mixed law and fact.
Waterville v. Van Slyke, 772

65. While such a statement must accompany the certificate as to show that the question of law is applicable to the case, the point on which the judges differed must be a distinct question of law clearly stated.
Idem, 772

66. If more than one material question of distinct law occurs on which the judges sitting differ, these questions may be embraced in the certificate, but where it is apparent that the whole case is presented to this court for decision, with all its propositions of law and fact, it will not be entertained.
Idem, 772

67. There is nothing in sec. 763, R. S., which requires that appeals from the District Court in cases of habeas corpus shall be to the next term of the Circuit Court. On the contrary the subject is otherwise regulated by sec. 765, R. S.
Roberts v. Reilly, 544

68. An objection that the hearing of the appeal by the court below was at chambers and not in open court cannot be made here for the first time.
Idem, 544

69. An appeal will not be entertained from a decree of an inferior court in exact accordance with the mandate of this court upon a previous appeal.
Mackall v. Richards, 558

70. Where an appeal was taken for the sole purpose of correcting a certain error, it is proper to construe the mandate as in effect nothing more than an order for such correction, leaving the remainder of the decree to stand.
Idem, 558

71. Where, since the original decree, the rights of the parties have so changed as to make it improper to carry the decree into execution, relief can only be had through some form of original proceeding.
Idem, 558

72. The decree in this case, although rendered at general term, was still the decree of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Idem, 558

73. Under the rules regulating appeals from the Court of Claims the evidence cannot be brought up, and the special Act under which this case was brought does not take it out of the operation of the rules.
McClure v. United States, 572

74. A cause will not be remanded to the Court of Claims for further findings where the findings desired would simply bring before this court the comparative weight as evidence of the facts found on both sides.

McClure v. United States, 572
75. It is not for this court to decide that the jury brought in a wrong verdict under a correct charge where there was some evidence to support the verdict.
Chicago & N. W. R. R. Co. v. Ohle, 837
76. The rule that what was decided on a first appeal is not open to reconsideration in the same case on a second appeal, upon similar facts, does not apply to expressions of opinion on matters the disposition of which was not necessary to the decision.
Barney v. Winona & St. P. R. R. Co., 858
77. A motion to increase supersedeas bond overruled.
Harwood v. Dickerhoff, 887
78. A judgment of reversal, accompanied by an order remanding the cause for a new trial, is not a final judgment for the purposes of a writ of error to this court.
Johnson v. Keith, 888
79. Where the trial below is by the court without a jury, a general finding prevents all inquiry by this court into the special facts and conclusions of law on which it rests.
Boardman v. Toffey, 898
80. An offer by the defendant in error, for the purpose of saving costs, made out of court cannot be considered. Such an offer should be made in open court upon due notice to the other side.
New Providence v. Halsey, 904
81. An exception to a ruling of the trial court sustaining a motion for a nonsuit is within sec. 279 of the Montana Code.
Kleinschmidt v. McAndrews, 905
82. The bill of exceptions presented is held not to be limited to the exception taken to the entry of the final judgment, but to embrace matters occurring previously, and the testimony and agreed statement of facts on which the motion for a nonsuit was based.
Idem, 905
83. Section 408, Montana Statutes, limiting the time within which appeals may be taken, does not apply to a decision granting a motion for a nonsuit.
Idem, 905
84. Upon the facts recited in the bill of exceptions the delivery of possession under the bill of sale is held to have been immediate within the meaning of sec. 15 of the statute of Montana relating to conveyances and contracts.
Idem, 905
85. Distinct decrees against distinct parties on distinct causes of action, or on a single cause of action in which there are distinct liabilities, cannot be joined to give this court jurisdiction on appeal.
Ex parte Phœnix Ins. Co. of London, 923
86. It was not improper for the court below to permit a certificate of the evidence adduced on the trial of an issue sent to the law side of the court, with the charge to the jury, to be filed and made part of the record at the succeeding term after that at which the decree was entered.
Kerr v. South Park Comrs., 924
87. This court refuses to disregard the verdict recited in the decree, although it is alleged that a prior verdict was not properly set aside, on the ground that the Chancellor, in framing the decree, confirmed the action of the circuit judge in setting aside the first verdict.
Idem, 924
88. In an action involving the title to certain bonds the Supreme Court on a complicated state of facts affirms the judgment of the Circuit Court.
Littlefield v. Bloxham, 930
89. The matter in dispute, on which the jurisdiction of this court depends, is the matter directly in dispute in the particular cause in which the judgment or decree sought to be reviewed was rendered, not including its collateral effect in a subsequent action between the same or other parties.
Bruce v. Manchester & K. R. R. Co., 990
90. Where a suit is brought to recover the interest on bonds only, the amount of the interest determines the jurisdiction irrespective of the value of the principal of the bonds.
Idem, 990
91. This court refuses to dismiss on a motion of a third party based on a charge that the suit is collusive, and affidavits to the effect that the amount involved is less than $5,000, the court below having found as a fact that the premises exceed $5,000 in value.
Zeigler v. Hopkins, 1019
92. Where it is charged that the obligation of a contract has been impaired by a state law, and the state courts justify such impairment by the application of some general rule of law to the facts of the case, the Supreme Court of the United States has jurisdiction to review that decision.
State ex rel. Green v. Wright, 1021

ARMY.

SEE HABEAS CORPUS, 19.
OFFICERS.

ASSIGNMENT.

SEE BANKRUPTCY, 1.
INSURANCE, 12-15.
JURISDICTION, 1, 32.

Though an assignment of a mere right to file a bill for fraud committed upon the assignor is void, a conveyance of property is not void because the grantee may have to bring suit to enforce his right to the property conveyed.
Traer v. Clews, 467

ATTACHMENT.

SEE BANKRUPTCY, 1.
CORPORATIONS, 4.
GARNISHMENT.
LANDS, 35.

1. Under the law of Louisiana the effect of a cession of property by an insolvent is to dissolve all attachments which have not matured into judgments.
Tua v. Carriere, 855
2. A cession by surviving partners carries their own undivided interests, and if it purports to carry the interest of a deceased partner and the court accepts the surrender, the validity of the cession cannot be attacked collaterally in attachment proceedings.
Idem, 855
3. Property in the possession of one court is not liable to seizure on process from another.
Idem, 855

BANKRUPTCY.

SEE JURISDICTION, 10, 12, 14, 19, 20, 34, 38.
MORTGAGES, 3.
PARTNERSHIP, 8.

1. Where a proceeding in bankruptcy was commenced prior to the levy of an attachment, issued by a state court of Michigan, on land of the debtor, the assignment made subsequently related back and vested title in the assignee.
Chapman v. Brewer, 83
2. The assignee in possession could maintain a suit in equity in the United States Circuit Court to remove the cloud on his title and under section 720, R. S., the court could enjoin a sale under the levy and a further levy.
Idem, 83
3. The District Court having had jurisdiction of the subject matter, the adjudication is conclusive of the fact decreed and cannot be attacked collaterally in a suit by the assignee against one claiming an adverse interest.
Idem, 83
4. The creditor of a bankrupt surrendered one of two securities claimed by the assignee as being unlawfully in his possession. A suit of the assignee to recover the other resulted in favor of the defendant. In a suit by the creditor to recover the proceeds of the security surrendered, it is held that the action is barred by the two years' limitation under sec. 2, Act of March 2, 1867, and sec. 5057, R. S.
Doe v. Hyde, 142
5. The term "fraud," in the clause defining the debts from which a bankrupt is not relieved by a discharge under the Bankrupt Act, means positive fraud or fraud in fact, involving moral turpitude or intentional wrong, not implied fraud, which may exist without bad faith.
Strang v. Bradner, 248
6. A claim against a bankrupt for damages on account of fraud or deceit practiced by him, is not discharged by proceedings in bankruptcy; even where it was proved against his estate, and a dividend thereon received on account.
Idem, 248
7. One who has been adjudicated a bankrupt may purchase property surrendered by him prior to his actual discharge.
Traer v. Clews, 467

8. A lawful composition under sec. 17 of the Act of June 22, 1874, and its performance, has the same effect as a discharge in bankruptcy.
Liebke v. Thomas, 744
9. The holder and owner of an accommodation note is the party to be dealt with in composition proceedings. The accommodation maker is not entitled to notice of such proceedings involving the payee and indorser for the accommodation of whom the note was made.
Idem, 744
10. A state insolvent law is valid though enacted while a national Bankrupt Act is in force, and on the repeal of the latter it becomes operative.
Tua v. Carriere, 855
11. The insolvent law of Louisiana was enacted prior to the enactment of the Bankruptcy Act of 1867, by Congress.
Idem, 855
12. As, under the statute, a discharge releases the bankrupt only from debts which were or might have been proved, and debts secured by mortgage or pledge can only be proved for the balance remaining due after deducting the value of the security, unless all claim on the security is released, where a creditor neither proved his claim nor released his lien the security was preserved notwithstanding the bankruptcy of his debtor.
Long v. Bullard, 1004

BANKS.

SEE APPEAL AND ERROR, 5, 6.
DEBTOR AND CREDITOR, 2.
EVIDENCE, 2-5, 8, 9.
JURISDICTION, 10.

1. Where a depositor sends his pass-book to the bank to be written up, it is his duty upon its return, either in person or by duly authorized agent, within a reasonable time, to examine the account and vouchers returned and give to the bank timely notice of any objections thereto. If he fail so to do, he may be estopped from questioning the conclusiveness of the account.
Leather Manuf'rs Nat. Bk. v. Morgan, 811
2. If the examination is made by an agent, it must be done in good faith and with ordinary diligence, and where such agent himself commits forgeries which mislead the bank and injure the depositor, the latter is not protected in the absence of, at least, reasonable diligence in supervising the conduct of the agent.
Idem, 811
3. In the case presented it was error to direct a verdict for the plaintiffs, as the questions whether the depositor is estopped, whether the bank exercised due caution before paying the altered checks, and whether a certain check was indorsed in blank or for deposit, are for the jury.
Idem, 811

BIGAMY.

SEE POLYGAMY, passim.
UTAH, 7.

BILLS, NOTES AND CHECKS.

SEE APPEAL AND ERROR, 21.
BANKRUPTCY, 9.
BANKS, 3.
BONDS, passim.
EVIDENCE, 29.
JURISDICTION, 1.
MORTGAGES, 1, 5, 8.
PARTNERSHIP, 3.
TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES, 5.

A foreign bill of exchange dated March 4, payable in London 60 days after sight, accepted without date, "due 21st May," was protested on the 21st of May. In a suit against the drawer the date of acceptance was not shown. Held, that the bill was prematurely protested, it not appearing that days of grace were allowed.
Bell v. First Nat. Bk. of Chicago, 409

BONDS.

SEE ACTIONS.
APPEAL AND ERROR, 11, 20.
CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 34.
INJUNCTIONS, 1, 2.
JURISDICTION, 11, 12, 32, 33.
LICENSE, passim.
RAILROADS, 6-8, 24.
STATE LAWS AND DECISIONS, 6.

1. Railroad bonds issued January 1, 1872, by the City of Holly Springs, Mississippi, held to be void for want of power to issue them, notwithstanding any recitals on their face, or any acts in pais, claimed to operate by way of estoppel.
Hayes v. Holly Springs, 81
2. The Act of the Legislature of Mississippi of March 16, 1872, relied on as a validating Act, held not to be sufficient for that purpose under the Constitution of the State.
Idem, 81
3. Upon the consolidation of four railroad companies, the consolidated company agreed to protect the various bonds of the old companies according to their true effect and meaning. Two years afterwards, the consolidated company, to secure its own bonds payable at a later date than the old ones, executed a mortgage of all its property to trustees, which recited that it had been deemed for the interest of the corporation as well as for the interest of all the various classes of existing bonds, that the whole of them should be consolidated into one mortgage debt upon equitable principles; and provided that a sufficient amount of the new bonds should be retained "to retire, in such manner and upon such terms as the directors may from time to time prescribe," an equal amount of the old bonds. Six years later, the consolidated company made another mortgage to secure other bonds, for nonpayment of which it was afterwards foreclosed by sale of the whole property. Held, that the company was not subject to any lien in favor of bonds of one of the old companies, issued after the passage of the statutes authorizing the consolidation, unsecured by any mortgage or lien before the consolidation, and the holders of which had not exchanged or offered to exchange them for bonds of the consolidated company before the proceedings for foreclosure.
Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Ham, 235
4. Where the Constitution of a State provides that no city, etc., "shall be allowed to become indebted in any manner or for any purpose" beyond a certain per centum of its taxable property, the prohibition is as effectual against the implied as the express promise, and is as binding in equity as at law.
Litchfield v. Ballou, 132
5. The holders of bonds issued in excess of the constitutional limit and agents of the city are particeps criminis in the act of violating the constitutional prohibition, and equity will no more raise a resulting trust in favor of the holders than the law will raise an implied assumpsit for money had and received.
Idem, 132
6. The purchasers of bonds, issued in excess of the constitutional limit, have no lien upon public works upon which the purchase money is alleged to have been expended if other funds have also been expended upon such works.
Idem, 132
7. Where the complainant seeks to recover the money he let the municipality have, he must clearly identify it, or the fund, or other property which represents it.
Idem, 132
8. A decree which does not attempt to restore the specific money of the complainant, but which is for a sum equal in amount to the bonds and interest, being a decree to pay as on an implied contract, cannot be sustained.
Idem, 132
9. The statutory lien with which the State of Tennessee was invested, upon the issue of its bonds to railroad companies under its internal improvement laws, was created solely for the security of the State, and the holders of the bonds are not entitled to its benefit.
Stevens v. Memphis & C. R. R. Co., 281
10. Purchasers of securities of municipalities having only a special power to issue them for a particular purpose, must see that the conditions prescribed for the exercise of the power existed.
Merch. Exch. Nat. Bk. v. Bergen Co., 430
11. In the absence of recitals showing compliance with the provisions of the statutory authority, the obligor is not estopped from denying the fact of such compliance.
Idem, 430
12. Purchasers of municipal securities must take the risk of the genuineness of official signatures.
Idem, 430
13. In an original suit at law in this court by the State of Alabama against the controlling officers and stockholders of the Alabama and Chattanooga Railroad Company, certain bonds of which had been indorsed by the State, to recover losses alleged to have resulted from the fraud of the defendants it is held that the liability of the defendants is statutory only; that they are not liable in this action for the alleged fraud in obtaining the indorsement of the State; that the other allegations of fraud fail to show that the losses of the State resulted from such fraud; and that the obligation of the company to use the bonds to build and equip its road was satisfied if the road was actually built, completed and equipped at a cost of more than the amount of the bonds.

Alabama v. Burr, 435

14. The Port of Mobile, which is composed of substantially the same community, includes within its limits substantially the same taxable property, holds substantially the same public property, and is organized for the same general purposes, as the City of Mobile, is the legal successor of said city, and liable for its debts.
Mobile v. Watson, 620

15. All Acts passed since the issue by the City of Mobile of the bonds in question, the purpose or effect of which is to take from said city or its successor, power to levy taxes and pay said bonds, are invalid, and mandamus lies to compel the proper officers of the Port of Mobile to levy the necessary taxes and pay the judgment of the plaintiff.
Idem, 620

16. Purchasers of certain bonds issued by a municipality of New Jersey under a statute of that State had the right to rely on the decision of the commissioners as conclusive as to the amount that could be issued under the statute.
New Providence v. Halsey, 904

17. Under the Act of the Legislature of Kentucky of February 27, 1867, the County Court of the County of Daviess acquired no authority to issue bonds for stock of the Owensboro & Russellville Railroad Company for a greater amount than $250,000, and all bonds issued in excess of that amount are invalid, even in the hands of a purchaser for value, before maturity and without notice of the excessive issue.
Daviess Co. v. Dickinson, 1026

18. The county is not estopped to deny the validity of a particular bond by a certificate on the back thereof by the county judge to the effect that it was duly authorized.
Idem, 1026

19. The payment of interest on all of the bonds does not amount to a ratification of those issued beyond the lawful limit.
Idem, 1026

20. It seems that the bonds first delivered, up to the amount authorized without regard to classification, are valid.
Idem, 1026

CARRIERS.

SEE INSURANCE, 4.
RAILROADS, passim.

1. In the absence of some special statute, there is no law, or usage having the force of law, which requires railroad companies to furnish express facilities to all express companies which may demand them.
Memphis & L. R. R. R. Co. v. Southern Exp. Co., 791

2. Though railroad companies are not common carriers of express carriers, it seems that it is their duty to furnish the general public with reasonable express facilities.
Idem, 791

3. It seems that the service rendered by a carrier in transporting a local passenger between two points is not in law identical with that rendered in transporting a through passenger between the same points.
Union Pac. R. Co. v. United States, 920

CHAMPERTY.

A champertous contract cannot be set up in bar of a recovery on the cause of action to which it relates.
Burnes v. Scott, 991

COMMERCE.

SEE CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 3-12, 36-38.

COMMISSION MERCHANT.

Where the cancellation of contracts, made by a commission merchant on the Chicago Board of Trade for his principal, was shown, and uncontradicted evidence that the substitution of other contracts, as permitted by the rules of said board, if any, existed only in the mental operation of the commission merchant, it was proper to instruct the jury that no valid substitution had been shown.
Higgins v. McCrea, 764

CONFEDERATE NOTES.

1. Contracts made in the insurgent States, during the late civil war, between residents of those States, with reference to confederate notes as a standard of value, and not designed to aid the insurrectionary government, may be enforced in the national courts; and the value of the contracts is to be determined by the value of the confederate notes in lawful money of the United States at the time when and place where such contracts were made.
Effinger v. Kenney, 495

2. The Statute of Virginia of February 28, 1867, impairs the obligation of contracts. In a suit to enforce a lien for unpaid purchase money of real estate sold during the war, a decision under said statute that the plaintiff was entitled to recover the value of the land at the time of the sale instead of the value of the confederate notes with reference to which the sale was made, was erroneous.
Idem, 495

3. The question whether a bond was executed with reference to confederate notes is one of fact for the state court, and not a federal question of law for this court.
Kenney v. Effinger, 498

4. Payment in confederate currency, made to a coexecutor, in Virginia, in 1862, of a debt contracted there in 1860, such payment having been made and accepted in good faith, discharged the debt.
Glasgow v. López, 901

CONSTITUTIONAL LAW.

SEE APPEAL AND ERROR, 94.
BANKRUPTCY, 10.
BONDS, 2, 4-6, 15.
CONFEDERATE NOTES, 2.
CRIMINAL LAW, 2.
JUDGMENTS AND DECREES, 3, 4.
LICENSE, 2.
LIMITATIONS, 9.
RAILROADS, passim.
STATES.
STATUTES, 2-5.
TAXES, passim.
TERRITORIES, 3.

1. A crime punishable by imprisonment for a term of years at hard labor is an infamous crime within the provision of the Fifth Amendment of the Constitution.
Ex parte Wilson, 89

2. The provision of Rev. Stat. sec. 1022, authorizing certain offenses to be prosecuted either by indictment or by information, does not preclude the prosecution by information of such other offenses as may be so prosecuted consistently with the Constitution and laws of the United States.
Idem, 89

3. Commerce among the States consists of intercourse and traffic between their citizens, and includes the transportation of persons and property, and the navigation of public waters for that purpose, as well as the purchase, sale and exchange of commodities.
Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 158

4. The power to regulate interstate and foreign commerce, vested in Congress, is the power to prescribe the rules by which it shall be governed, that is the conditions upon which it shall be conducted; to determine when it shall be free and when subject to duties or other exactions.
Idem, 158

5. With reference to the subjects of commerce which are local and limited in their nature or sphere of operation, the States may prescribe regulations until Congress intervenes and assumes control.
Idem, 158
Brown v. Houston, 257

6. When the subjects of commerce are national in character and require uniformity of regulation, affecting alike all of the States, the power of Congress is exclusive.
Idem, 158
Idem, 257

7. The commerce with foreign nations and between the States, which consists in the transportation of persons and property between them, is a subject of national character, and requires uniformity of regulation. Congress alone can deal with such transportation, and its nonaction is a declaration that it shall remain free from burdens imposed by state legislation.

Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 158

8. Freedom of transportation implies exemption from charges other than such as are imposed by way of compensation for the use of the property employed, or for facilities afforded for its use, or as ordinary taxes upon the value of the property within the jurisdiction of the State.

Idem, 158

9. Receiving and landing passengers and freight is incident to their transportation. All restraints by exactions in the form of taxes upon such transportation, or upon acts necessary to its completion, are invasions of the exclusive power of Congress.

Idem, 158

10. The only state interference with the landing and receiving of passengers and freight, which is permissible, is confined to such measures as will prevent confusion among the vessels, and collision between them, insure their safety and convenience and facilitate the discharge or receipt of their passengers and freight.

Idem, 158

11. A ferry is a means, and a necessary means, of commercial intercourse between States bordering on dividing waters, and it must, therefore, be conducted without the imposition by the States of taxes or other burdens upon the commerce between them.

Idem, 158

12. The capital stock of the Gloucester Ferry Company, a New Jersey corporation engaged in the transportation of persons and property between Gloucester in that State and Philadelphia in Pennsylvania, is not subject to taxation by the State of Pennsylvania.

Idem, 158

13. A state law authorizing a debtor to procure the obligations of his creditor and use them as a set-off for his own debt, is not liable to impeachment as devesting vested rights or impairing the obligation of contracts.

Amy v. Taxing Dist. of Shelby Co., 172

14. The Acts of March 23, 1868, of the Legislature of Tennessee, providing for the refunding of the indebtedness of the extinct municipality of Memphis in the bonds of the Taxing District of Shelby County, and the collection and application of back taxes, violated no right of the plaintiffs nor any contract of theirs.

Idem, 172

15. By the terms of the Virginia Funding Act of March 30, 1871, and the issue of bonds and coupons in virtue of the same, a contract was made between every coupon holder and the State, the right of the coupon holder, under which, was to have his coupons received for taxes when offered. Any Act of the State which forbids the receipt of these coupons for taxes is a violation of the contract, and void as against coupon holders.

Poindexter v. Greenhow, 185

16. A lawful tender of payment of taxes is equivalent to actual payment and deprives the collecting officer of all authority for further action, and makes every subsequent step illegal and void.

Idem, 185

17. The coupons in question are not "bills of credit," in the sense of the Constitution, which forbids the States to "emit bills of credit."

Idem, 185

18. An action brought by a taxpayer, who has duly tendered coupons which are a lawful tender in payment of his taxes, against the person who, under color of office as tax collector, and acting in the enforcement of a void law, having refused such tender, proceeds by seizure and sale of the property of the plaintiff to enforce the collection of such taxes is an action against him personally as a wrong doer, and not against the State, within the meaning of the Eleventh Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Idem, 185

19. As the State is a political corporate body, which can act only through agents and command only by laws, in order to complete his defense, the collector must produce a valid law of the State, which constitutes his commission as its agent, and a warrant for his act.

Idem, 185

20. The Act of the General Assembly of Virginia of January 23, 1882, forbidding the receipt of coupons issued under the Act of March 30, 1871, impairs the obligation of contracts, and is annulled by the Constitution of the United States.

Idem, 185

21. The Constitution of the United States and its own contract are the law of Virginia, and that law made it the duty of the defendant to receive the coupons tendered and declared every step thereafter taken to enforce the tax to be without warrant of law. This strips the defendant of his official character, and convicts him of a personal violation of the plaintiff's rights for which he must personally answer.

Idem, 185

22. A statute may be perfectly valid in its general and proper application; and yet be held to be void in particular applications of its provisions.

Idem, 185

23. In cases of detinue the action is purely defensive on the part of the plaintiff. Its object is merely to resist an attempted wrong and to restore the status in quo as it was when the right to be vindicated was invaded.

Idem, 185

24. The suit authorized by the General Assembly of Virginia of January 26, 1882, against the collector of taxes, for refusing to accept a tender of coupons, to recover back the amount paid under protest, is no remedy at all for the breach of the contract of the State.

Idem, 185

25. The revenue system of a State must yield to the contract which the State has lawfully made, and the obligation of which, by the Constitution, it is forbidden to impair.

Idem, 185

26. The right to pay in coupons cannot be treated as a mere right of set-off, which, when given by the general law, is part of the remedy merely, and therefore subject to modification or repeal, because the law which gave it is also a contract, and therefore cannot be changed without mutual consent.

Idem, 185

27. The Acts of the General Assembly of Virginia of January 26, 1882, and the Amendatory Act of March 13, 1884, are unconstitutional and void, because they impair the obligation of the contract of the State with the coupon holder under the Act of March 30, 1871, and that being the main object of the two Acts, the vice that invalidates them pervades them throughout, and in all their provisions.

Idem, 185

28. The statute of New Jersey of March 8, 1871, providing for the drainage of any tract of low or marshy land within the State, does not deprive owners of their property without due process of law, nor deny to them the equal protection of the laws, within the meaning of the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States.

Wurts v. Hoagland, 229

29. A statute giving the State a new remedy for an existing right to unpaid taxes is not retroactive under the Constitution of Ohio.

Sturges v. Carter, 240

30. What amounts to a substantial compliance with sec. 2782, R. S. of Ohio, requiring the auditor to notify the taxpayer of his intention to increase the amount of his property returned for taxation.

Idem, 240

31. The legislative power of Congress is exclusive over lands within a State purchased with her consent by the United States for a constitutional purpose.

Ft. Leavenworth R. Co. v. Lowe, 264

32. Where the United States acquires lands within a State in any other way than by purchase with her consent, forts, arsenals or other public buildings erected thereon for the use of the general government, as instrumentalities for the execution of its powers, will be free from any such interference and jurisdiction of the State as would destroy or impair their effective use for the purposes designed. But, when not used as such instrumentalities, the legislative power of the State over the places acquired remains.

Idem, 264

33. The cession of lands by a State to the United States may be upon conditions not inconsistent with their free and effective use for the purposes intended.

Idem, 264

34. After the admission of the State of Kansas, the United States retained only the rights of an ordinary proprietor in the Fort Leavenworth Military Reservation; except as an instrument for the execution of the powers of the general government, that part of the tract which was actually used as a fort or military post, was beyond such control of the State, by taxation or otherwise, as would defeat its use for those purposes. The clause of the Act of the Legislature of Kansas of February 22, 1875, to cede jurisdiction over said Reservation to the United States, saving to the State "the right to tax railroad, bridge and other corporations, their franchises and property, on said Reservation," is valid.

Ft. Leavenworth R. Co. v. Lowe, 264

35. The Act of Congress purporting to cede to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the Fort Leavenworth Military Reservation is a valid cession within the requirements of the Constitution.

C., R. I. & P. R. Co. v. McGlinn, 270

36. It is a general rule of public law, recognized and acted upon by the United States, that upon the transfer of political jurisdiction and legislative power over any territory, municipal laws continue in force until abrogated by the new government or sovereign. This principle applies to a cession to the United States by a State of legislative power over a particular tract for a special purpose of the general government.

Idem, 270

37. The term "imports" does not refer to articles carried from one State into another, but, only to articles imported from foreign countries into the United States.

Brown v. Houston, 257

38. A duty on exports must either be a duty levied on goods as a condition, or by reason of their exportation, or, at least a direct tax or duty on goods which are intended for exportation.

Idem, 257

39. Coal, sent by the owners in Pennsylvania to their agents in New Orleans to be there sold for their account, becomes a part of the general mass of property of Louisiana upon its arrival, and is subject to taxation in common with all other property and in precisely the same manner. The fact that some of it is subsequently sold for exportation does not alter the case.

Idem, 257

40. "Due process of law" as applied to the levy and collection of taxes, does not imply or require the right to such notice and hearing as are considered essential to the validity of the proceedings and judgments of judicial tribunals.

Cincinnati, etc. R. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 414

41. The mode of valuing property for taxation under the Act of the Legislature of Kentucky of April 3, 1878, is due process of law.

Idem, 414

42. Whenever by the laws of a State, or by state authority, a tax assessment, servitude, or other burden is imposed upon property for the public use, and provision is made for confirming or contesting the charge thus imposed in the ordinary courts of justice, the judgment in such proceedings does not deprive the owner of his property without due process of law.

Idem, 414

43. Under the Constitution of Kentucky there is nothing to forbid the classification of property for purposes of taxation and the valuation of different classes by different methods.

Idem, 414

44. Railroad property, owing to its inherent nature, may form a separate class for purposes of valuation and taxation. If the mode of valuation is due process of law, its difference in some details from the mode of valuing other descriptions and classes of property does not operate as a denial of the equal protection of the laws.

Idem, 414

45. A statute of Missouri, which requires railroad corporations in the State to erect and maintain fences, and provides for the recovery of double the amount of all damages to stock occasioned by failure to construct or maintain such fences, does not deprive a company which is compelled to pay such damages, of property without due process of law; nor does it deny to the company the equal protection of the laws.

Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Humes, 463

46. An action against a common carrier to recover damages for a refusal to transport beer into the State of Iowa, on the ground that such transportation is forbidden by a statute of that State, is not an action brought on account of a deprivation of a right, privilege or immunity secured by the Constitution within the meaning of sec. 699, R. S., which gives the court jurisdiction without regard to the sum or value in dispute.

Bowman v. Chicago & N. W. R. R. Co., 502

47. The legislative grant to the Louisville Gas Company, for the term of twenty years, of "the exclusive privilege of erecting and establishing gas works in the City of Louisville, and of vending coal gas lights and supplying the city and citizens with gas by means of public works," constituted a contract within the meaning of the National Constitution, and was not forbidden by the Bill of Rights of Kentucky, the services which the company undertook to perform being public services, affecting the interests and rights of the public generally.

Louisville Gas Co. v. Citizens Gas L. Co., 510

48. The Act passed by the Legislature of Kentucky in 1869, granting exclusive privileges to the Louisville Gas Company, "plainly expressed" within the meaning of the Act of 1856, an intent that the charter of the company should not be subject to amendment or repeal at the will of the Legislature without the concurrence of the city council and the company's directors.

Idem, 510

49. A company subsequently incorporated is not entitled to an injunction restraining the Louisville Gas Company from claiming and exercising the exclusive privileges granted by its charter.

Idem, 510

50. The New Orleans Gaslight Company, has, by its charter, the exclusive privilege of supplying gas to the city and people of New Orleans, by means of pipes, mains, and conduits laid at its own cost in the streets and other public ways of that city.

New Orleans Gas Light Co. v. Louisiana Light & Heat Producing and Mfg. Co., 516

51. Before the adoption of the present Constitution of that State the Legislature had authority to grant to a private corporation an exclusive privilege of that character, and such grant constitutes a contract, the obligation of which cannot be impaired by a State law.

Idem, 516

52. The manufacture and distribution of gas is not an ordinary business, in which everyone may engage as of common right, upon terms of equality; but is a franchise relating to matters of which the public may assume control, and, when not forbidden by the organic law of the State, may be granted by the Legislature, as a means of accomplishing public objects, to whomsoever, and upon what terms it pleases.

Idem, 516

53. The grant of the exclusive privilege in question is none the less a contract, because the manufacture and distribution of gas, when not subjected to proper supervision, may work injury to the public; for such a grant does not restrict the power of the State to establish and enforce regulations not inconsistent with the essential right given to the company by its charter.

Idem, 516

54. The constitutional prohibition upon state laws, impairing the obligation of contracts, does not restrict the power of the State to protect the public health, the public morals, or the public safety, as the one or the other may be involved in the execution of such contracts.

Idem, 516

55. The provision in the present Constitution of Louisiana, abrogating the monopoly features of existing corporations, is inoperative in respect to the charter of the New Orleans Gaslight Company.

Idem, 516

56. The charter of the New Orleans Waterworks Company, granting to that corporation the exclusive privilege of supplying New Orleans and its inhabitants with water from the Mississippi River, constitutes a contract within the meaning of the contract clause of the Constitution of the United States.

New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Rivers, 525

57. The clause of the present Constitution of Louisiana abrogating the monopoly feature of existing corporations, is inoperative in respect of the charter of a company, granted before the adoption of that instrument.

Idem, 525

58. An ordinance of the city council of New Orleans authorizing the lessee of the St. Charles Hotel, in that city, to supply that hotel with water by means of pipes and mains laid in the streets, is a violation of the company's contract with the State, and, therefore, void.

Idem, 525

59. A provision of a State Constitution may be invalid as impairing the obligation of contracts.

Fisk v. Police Jury, 587

60. After services have been rendered to a municipality under a law, resolution, or ordinance, which fixes the rate of compensation, there arises an implied contract to pay for the services at that rate, the obligation of which cannot be impaired by the State.

Idem, 587
61. The second amendment to the Constitution is a limitation only upon the power of Congress and the National Government, and not upon the States.
Presser v. Illinois, 615
62. Citizens of the United States have no right to associate together to drill or parade with arms, independent of any Act of Congress or State law, which is within the protection of the first section of the Fourteenth Amendment.
Idem, 615
63. The fifth and sixth sections of article XI of the Military Code of Illinois, which forbid bodies of men to associate together as military organizations, or to drill or parade with arms in cities and towns unless authorized by law, are not in conflict with the Constitution of the United States.
Idem, 615
64. A state law which imposes a specific tax on persons engaged in the business of selling liquors at wholesale, or of soliciting or taking orders for such liquors to be shipped into the State from places out of the State, not having their principal place of business in the State, without imposing a like tax on persons engaged in the like business in reference to liquors manufactured in the State is unconstitutional and void.
Walling v. Michigan, 691
65. A law subsequently passed, imposing a greater tax upon all persons engaged in the business of manufacturing or selling liquors in the State, does not have the effect of divesting the first law of its objectionable character.
Idem, 691
66. The fifth section of the Act of June 22, 1874, authorizing a court of the United States in revenue cases, on motion of the government attorney to require the defendant or claimant to produce in court his private books, invoices and papers, is held to be unconstitutional as applied to suits for penalties, or to establish a forfeiture of the party's goods, as being repugnant to the Fourth and Fifth Amendments.
Boyd v. United States, 746
67. It does not require actual entry upon premises, and search for and seizure of papers to constitute an unreasonable search and seizure within the meaning of the Fourth Amendment; a compulsory production of a party's books and papers, to be used against himself or his property in a criminal or penal proceeding, or for a forfeiture, is within the spirit and meaning of the Amendment.
Idem, 746
68. It is equivalent to a compulsory production of papers, to make the nonproduction of them a confession of the allegations which it is pretended they will prove.
Idem, 746
69. A proceeding to forfeit a person's goods for an offense against the laws, though civil in form, and whether in rem or in personam, is a "criminal case" within the meaning of that part of the Fifth Amendment which declares that no person "shall be compelled, in any criminal case, to be a witness against himself."
Idem, 746
70. The seizure or compulsory production of a man's private papers to be used in such a case is equivalent to compelling him to be a witness against himself.
Idem, 746
71. Both the Fourth and Fifth Constitutional Amendments relate to the personal security of the citizen. They nearly run into and mutually throw light upon each other. When the object of a search and seizure of his private papers is to compel a man to be a witness against himself within the meaning of the Fifth Amendment, it is an "unreasonable search and seizure" within the Fourth Amendment.
Idem, 746
72. Constitutional provisions for the security of person and property should be liberally construed.
Idem, 746
73. Section 6 of the Act passed by the Legislature of Tennessee, March 16, 1877, imposing a license or privilege tax on sleeping cars, is invalid in so far as it affects interstate commerce.
Pickard v. Pullman Southern Car Co., 785
Tennessee v. Same, 791
74. Where a State is not only the real party to the controversy, but the real party against which relief is sought, the nominal defendants being its officers and agents without any personal interest in the subject matter, the suit is substantially within the prohibition of the Eleventh Amendment.
Hagood v. Southern, 805
75. There is a clear distinction between actions to compel the officers of a State, by affirmative official action, to perform an obligation of the State, and actions against defendants, who, while claiming to act as officers of the State, violate and invade the personal and property rights of the plaintiffs, under color of authority, which is unconstitutional and void.
Idem, 805
76. The property of the United States is not subject to state taxation.
Van Brocklin v. Anderson, 845
77. Lands situated in a State, which are acquired by the United States through sales for direct taxes, levied pursuant to Acts of Congress, are not subject to state taxation while so owned by the United States.
Idem, 845
78. Crimes punishable by imprisonment in a state prison, with or without hard labor, are infamous crimes for which persons cannot be held to answer in the Federal Courts otherwise than on presentment or indictment of a grand jury.
Mackin v. United States, 909
79. Art. 3, sec. 23, of the Illinois Constitution of 1848, providing that no private or local law shall embrace more than one subject, and that it shall be expressed in the title is satisfied if the law has but one general object, which is clearly expressed in the title, and the body of the Act is germane to the title.
Mahomet v. Quackenbush, 982
80. The exportation stamp required to be affixed to every package of tobacco intended for exportation, before its removal from the factory is constitutional and valid.
Turpin v. Burgess, 988
81. An excise laid on tobacco, before its removal from the factory, is not a duty on exports within the meaning of the prohibition of the Constitution, though the tobacco be intended for exportation.
Idem, 988

CONTRACTS.

SEE ACCORD AND SATISFACTION.
ADMIRALTY, 4, 5, 6.
APPEAL AND ERROR, 94.
CHAMPERTY.
CONFEDERATE NOTES, passim.
COMMISSION MERCHANT.
CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 13-27, 47-60.
DEBTOR AND CREDITOR, 3.
EVIDENCE, 10.
EQUITY, 6, 9.
FRAUD.
GUARANTY.
INJUNCTIONS, ∞.
JURISDICTION, 11, 12.
RAILROADS, 11, 12, 14-17, 22-25, 28, 29, 31-33.
REPLEVIN, 2.
SALES, 1-3.
SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE.
STATUTES, 5.
STATUTE OF FRAUDS.
USURY, passim.

1. Under a contract made by A. with D. for the purchase of five cargoes of kainit of R., the money being advanced by G. for a commission paid by D., the kainit was consigned to G. or his assigns—the papers being sent to A. with invoices in the shape of bills showing that A. bought the cargoes of G.—and was entered at the custom house by the agent of A. as the property of G. Held, that G. was the owner of the cargoes, and sold and delivered them to A., to be paid for on delivery, free from any claim growing out of the contract of A. with D. or R., for any breach of that contract, as to the time of shipping the cargoes; and that A. was liable to G. for the price of the cargoes, with interest from their delivery.
Phosphate Co. v. Graffin, 221
2. Where a contract for the construction of a railroad provided that the company's engineer should, in all cases, determine questions relating to its execution, his action in the absence of fraud, or such gross mistake as would necessarily imply bad faith, or a failure to exercise an honest judgment, is conclusive upon the parties.
Martinsburg & P. R. R. Co. v. March, 255

3. To annul or modify a contract fairly made, requires the consent of both parties.
Wheeler v. New Bruns. & Canada R. Co., 341
4. In an action upon a contract for the sale of a large quantity of old rails by a railroad company; held, upon a review of the evidence, that a contract existed; that it had not been abandoned or set aside; that the company was not estopped from setting it up, and that it had the right to insist upon its construction and refer its performance to the courts if necessary.
Idem, 341
5. An agreement to accept from 200 to 300 tons is an agreement to accept any number of tons between those limits, the option being with the seller.
Idem, 341
6. An agreement between the members of a "syndicate" formed to purchase the controlling interest in the stock of a mining corporation, that one of them should "control the management of the mine," is necessarily subject to such rules and regulations as the stockholders or directors may adopt for the government of the officers of the company.
Grant v. Parker, 346
7. A bill in equity to restrain a member of the "syndicate" from acting as a stockholder and director in the company in enforcing such regulations, does not lie.
Idem, 346
8. A person, who, by a contract made with him by the quartermaster's department of the army agrees to furnish all the steamboat transportation required by the United States for officers and soldiers between certain places and to certain Indian posts and agencies, is not entitled to claim compensation for Indian supplies, never in the charge of the quartermaster's department for transportation, transported by another person under a contract between him and the Commissioner of Indian Affairs.
Hazlett v. United States, 382
9. Where a contract is made between two firms, dealers in ice, through an offer by the first firm to take from the second a cargo of ice and "return the same to you next year from our houses," which offer was accepted and acted upon, the first firm can comply therewith by a delivery of the ice called for by the contract at any time during the shipping season of the "next year." The first firm is not bound to deliver on demand at any time during such season.
Dingley v. Oler, 984
10. The refusal of a party to perform an executory contract, in order to authorize the other party to commence suit for nonfulfillment, must be distinct, absolute and unequivocal. Where one party has the right at any time during a certain season to deliver goods under a contract, a refusal to comply with a particular demand for an immediate delivery does not authorize the party making the demand to commence suit for breach of the contract.
Idem, 984
11. The refusal of one party to deliver goods under a contract, if not treated as final by the party making the demand, cannot afterwards be treated as a refusal authorizing the commencement of suit.
Idem, 984
12. The plaintiff in error having built a water main for the District of Columbia under authority of the contractors and with the permission of the chief engineer in charge, it is held that he is bound by the terms of the contract and his acceptance of an allowance made by the engineer in full settlement of his claims for extra work.
Campbell v. Dist. of Columbia, 1007

CONVEYANCE.

SEE ASSIGNMENT, passim.
DEED, passim.
HUSBAND AND WIFE, 2.
LANDS, passim.

CORPORATIONS.

SEE BONDS, 3.
CONTRACTS, 6, 7.
EVIDENCE, 2.
MORTGAGES, 2, 3.
PRACTICE, 9.
RAILROADS, passim.
REMOVAL OF CAUSES, 4, 6, 10, 11, 17.
TAXES, 2-4, 7.

1. The rights of a corporation are determined by the law in force when it came into being.
Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Miller, 121
2. There is nothing in the nature of a corporate franchise under the law of Louisiana which forbids its transfer with the other property of the corporation.
N. O. etc. R. R. Co. v. Delamore, 244
3. The National Steam Navigation Company, a corporation formed under an English statute, went into liquidation on August 15, 1867, selling its property to a new corporation organized to continue the same business. The new company is not chargeable with the payment of a judgment recovered against the former company, for damages for loss of life occasioned by a collision with one of the vessels subsequent to its transfer to the new company.
Gray v. Nat. Steamship Co., 389
4. A transfer, for a valuable consideration, of shares in a Massachusetts manufacturing corporation, not recorded as required by a statute of that State, is valid against a subsequent attachment by a creditor having knowledge or notice of the transfer.
Bridgewater Iron Co. v. Liesberger, 557

COSTS.

SEE APPEAL AND ERROR, 81.
FEES.
LANDS, 23.
PATENT-RIGHTS, 21.
RAILROADS, 35.

1. Upon the dismissal of a case for want of jurisdiction, on motion of the defendant, he is entitled to judgment for the costs of the motion.
Bradstreet Co. v. Higgins, 176
2. The right to decide a motion to dismiss for want of jurisdiction implies the right to decide as to costs incident to the motion.
Idem, 176
3. In an original proceeding in this court for a writ of mandamus, the docket fee and disbursements for printing objections in the nature of pleadings, are taxable as costs. Disbursements for printing briefs of counsel cannot be included.
Ex parte Hughes, 281
4. Where each party appeals to the Supreme Court, and each succeeds in reversing an important part of the judgment of the lower court, the costs in the Supreme Court will be divided.
Sioux City & St. P. R. R. Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 923
5. A court will not compel parties to pay for services rendered and expenses incurred in a proceeding adverse to their interest, and carried on for the benefit of others.
Hobbs v. McLean, 940
6. Where a bill alleged infringement of a reissued patent generally, and one claim of the reissue was invalid, but recovery was had for infringement of a valid claim of the reissue, and there had been no unreasonable delay in filing a disclaimer of the invalid claim the Supreme Court reverses the decree of the Circuit Court so far as it awarded costs to the complainant, and orders each party to bear his own costs in the Supreme Court and one half the expense of printing the record.
Yale Lock Mfg. Co. v. Sargent, 954

COURTS.

SEE APPEAL AND ERROR, passim.
ATTACHMENT, 3.
EVIDENCE, 1, 10, 11, 27, 28.
JURISDICTION, passim.
MANDAMUS, 1-3, 6.
PRACTICE, passim.
REMOVAL OF CAUSES, 38, 39.
STATE LAWS AND DECISIONS, 1, 2, 5-8.

COURTS MARTIAL.

SEE JURISDICTION, 17.
PROHIBITION, passim.

CRIMINAL LAW.

SEE APPEAL AND ERROR, 3.
CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 1, 2, 69, 78.
HABEAS CORPUS, passim.
INDICTMENT.
INTERNAL REVENUE, 3-5.
POLYGAMY, passim.

1. The statute requiring the surrender of a fugitive from justice, found in one of the Territories, to the State in which he stands charged with treason, felony, or other crime, embraces every offense known to the laws of the demanding State, including misdemeanors.

Ex parte Reggel, 250
2. Each State has the right to prescribe the forms of pleading and process to be observed in her courts, subject only to those provisions of the national Constitution designed for the protection of life, liberty, and property; consequently, in a case involving the surrender of a fugitive from justice, it may not be objected that the indictment is not framed according to the technical rules of criminal pleading, if it conforms substantially to the laws of the demanding State.
Idem, 250
3. Upon the executive of the State or Territory in which the accused is found, rests the responsibility of determining whether he is a fugitive from the justice of the demanding State. But the Act of Congress does not direct or authorise his surrender, unless it is made to appear that he is, in fact, a fugitive from justice.
Idem, 250
4. If the determination of that fact, upon proof before the executive of the State where the alleged fugitive is found, is subject to judicial review upon habeas corpus, the accused, being in custody under his warrant, which recites the requisition of the demanding State, accompanied by an authentic indictment charging him substantially, as required by her laws, with a specific crime committed within her jurisdiction, should not be discharged, because, in the judgment of the court, the proof showing that he was a fugitive from justice may not be as full as might properly have been required.
Idem, 250
5. The question of the lawfulness of an arrest of a person as a fugitive from justice from another State may be inquired into upon a writ of habeas corpus issued by either a federal or state court.
Roberts v. Reilly, 544
6. Upon demand to the governor of a State for an alleged fugitive from justice, it must appear that he is substantially charged with a crime against the laws of the demanding State, and that he is a fugitive from the justice of said State.
Idem, 544
7. The first question is one of law, which is open upon the face of the papers, to judicial inquiry. The second is one of fact, upon which the governor's decision against the person charged is sufficient to justify remove until the presumption in its favor is overthrown by contrary proof.
Idem, 544
8. The objection that it does not appear from the indictment that the corporation was capable in law of the ownership of the property, which was the subject of an alleged larceny, cannot be raised as a matter of law upon the face of the indictment.
Idem, 544
9. The objection that the circumstances set out show that the act of the accused constituted as crime in the State where he was arrested, as well as in the demanding State, does not affect the question, as the former State may waive its jurisdiction by his surrender.
Idem, 544
10. To be a fugitive from justice in the sense of the Act of Congress, it is not necessary that the party charged should have left the State after indictment found, or for the purpose of avoiding a prosecution anticipated or begun.
Idem, 544

DAMAGES.

SEE CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 45.
JURISDICTION, 11.
PATENT-RIGHTS, 12, 17, 21.
UTAH, 6.

DEBTOR AND CREDITOR.

SEE SALES, 5.
1. A creditor having possession of the property of his debtor as agent, trustee or bailee, cannot, without legal process or the consent of the debtor, dispose of the property and apply the proceeds upon the debt.
Xenia Bk. v. Stewart, 101
2. A bank having in its possession shares of its own stock which belong to one who is indebted to it cannot sell such stock and apply the proceeds to the payment of the debt.
Idem, 101
3. Where a debtor purchased an interest in a stage company intending the purchase for the benefit of his creditor and himself, and so notified the creditor, and the owners, including the creditor, subsequently united in the execution of a paper defining their interests; held, that the contract was executed, that the Statute of Frauds did not apply, and that the creditor was entitled to have the debt applied on the purchase of his interest.
Huntley v. Huntley, 130

DECEIT.

An action to recover damages for a deceit cannot be sustained where it appears that the defendant, by false representations, induced the plaintiff to do something which he would have done anyhow, and by which he sustained no loss.
Ming v. Woolfolk, 740

DEED.

SEE EVIDENCE, 19-24.
LANDS, 1, 35.
1. Parol evidence of the existence of a debt and that an absolute conveyance was intended to secure it and to operate only as a mortgage, must be clear, or the presumption that the instrument is what it purports to be must prevail.
Coyle v. Davis, 583
2. The presumption in favor of the conveyance is strengthened when it appears that there is no considerable disproportion between the price paid and the value of the property.
Idem, 583

DEFINITION.

SEE CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 37, 69.
MINES, 13, 14.
PENSIONS, 1.
STATUTES.
TAXES, 19.

DEPOSITIONS.

SEE APPEAL AND ERROR, 17.

DOMICIL.

SEE INFANTS, passim.
GUARDIAN AND WARD.
Upon the question whether the plaintiff at a certain time changed his residence from Iowa to Illinois, the jury were correctly told that he did not gain a citizenship in Illinois when he went there unless he did in good faith leave Iowa, and, giving up his residence there, go to Illinois, and actually and in good faith take up his permanent residence in that State at that time.
Chicago & N. W. R. R. Co. v. Ohle, 837

DOWER.

SEE PARTIES, 2.

DUTIES.

SEE JURISDICTION, 21, 22.
1. Under sec. 8 of the Act of June 30, 1864, chap. 171 (13 Stat., 210), an article of silk and cotton bought and sold as "spotted or dotted net," but which was a lace, in which silk was the component material of chief value, was a "silk lace," and subject to a duty of 60 per cent.
Drew v. Grinnell, 453
2. Under the finding of facts by the court below certain beet and cabbage seeds are held to be "garden seeds" and subject to a duty of 20 per cent ad valorem, while certain mangel-wurzel and turnip seeds are held to be free from duty.
Ferry v. Livingston, 489
3. Under secs. 2931 and 3011, R. S., the importer must show, in order to recover duties alleged to have been illegally exacted, that he has fully complied with the statutory conditions which attach to the statutory action provided for.
Arnson v. Murphy, 491
4. The conditions imposed by statute cannot, any of them, be regarded as matters a failure to comply with which must be pleaded by the defendant as a statute of limitations.
Idem, 491
5. It seems that the statute does not require any communication of the decisions on the appeals to the claimant; and that they may be introduced in

[illegible]

Brown v. Murphy, [illegible]

4. A certain article of manufacture, not in existence many and manufactured from wood, is held to be "wooden-ware," subject to a duty of 35 per centum ad valorem under act, 1864, § 2, and not within the free list under act, 1862, § 2.

Barnum v. Morris, [illegible]

5. Evidence in these [illegible] to show knowing the imported article and another article, is admissible to show the character of the article in question.

Idem, [illegible]

6. Under the Tariff Act of 1862, wire rope is within Schedule H hereof, act, 1862, § 2, and subject to a duty of 35 per centum ad valorem.

Morris v. Morris, 280

7. The interpretation of words of common speech is matter of law.

Idem, 280

8. The whole tariff revenue system must be regarded in the construction of each schedule, and in determining allowed of existing legislation which of greater application beyond the clear meaning of language.

Sarmiento Mills v. Russell, 354

9. Where the revenue of wool stopped from Europe showed the value to be more than twenty cents per pound, it is held to be subject under the statute to a duty of six cents per pound, and it per centum, although at the time of shipment the market value was less than twenty-cents per pound.

Idem, 354

10. Under the Act of March 2, 1863, repealing former provisions, boxes or coverings of any kind, not of a material or form designed to evade duties thereon, are dutiable and to be used in the form for transportation of the goods to the United States, are not subject to duty.

Barlow v. Robertson, 708

11. The exaction of duty on packing, whether packing goods in cartons or cartons in outer cases or using outer cases, is not warranted by law, such "charges" having been abolished by the Act of 1863.

Idem, 708

14. The addition to the valuation of imported goods of items for boxes, cartons, and for packing is no part of the appraisement, and the remedy of the importer is not to apply for a new appraisement but to protest and appeal.

Idem, 708

15. A protest held sufficient to cover the points relied on by the plaintiffs in error.

Idem, 708

16. Where it appears as a fact from a special finding that certain "steel tire blooms" have passed through an important stage in the process of manufacture, and are, therefore, articles of steel partly manufactured, they are subject to a duty of 45 per cent under Schedule E, sec. 2504, R. S.

Chicago Tire, etc. Co. v. Spalding, 720

17. The decisions of the Collector and the Secretary of the Treasury are conclusive until the contrary is shown in a suit.

Idem, 720

18. "Henry's Calcined Magnesia," being a medicinal preparation, imported in bottles, and recommended to the public as a proprietary medicine, is subject to a duty of 50 per cent ad valorem under sec. 2504, R. S., Schedule M.

Ferguson v. Arthur, 979

EJECTMENT.

See Evidence, 19.
Lands, 15.
Mortgages, 4.
Municipal Corporations.

1. Under the Mississippi Code of 1880, secs. 2608, 2612, a tenant in common who has been ousted by his cotenant may maintain ejectment against him, and recover rents and profits in the same action.

Clay v. Field, 375

2. Under the laws of Pennsylvania a judgment in ejectment is not a bar to a subsequent action.

Gibson v. Lyon, 440

3. A party cannot be permitted to claim under and against the same deed.

Idem, 440

4. If a judicial sale be void, the court having confirmed it upon terms not authorized by law, the purchaser is without title upon which to base an action of ejectment; if it be erroneous merely, [illegible]

Ben, [illegible]

ELECTION.

See Trial, passim.

EQUITY.

See Bankruptcy, 5.
Bonds, 1.
Corporations, 7.
Bonds and Wills, 1, 2.
Jurisdiction, passim.
Jurisdiction, 4.
Lands, 14, 17, 18.
Laches, passim.
Parties-Equity, 2.
Pleading, passim.
Practice, passim.
Railroads, 2, 3.
Taxes, 7, 8.
Trusts and Trustees, passim.

1. A suit in equity will not lie to charge one incorporated company with a judgment recovered against another company.

Gray v. Nat. Bankruptcy Co., [illegible]

2. The levy and collection of taxes for the satisfaction of judgments against counties or towns, is not within the jurisdiction of a court of equity.

Thompson v. Allen County, 472

3. The fact that the remedy at law by mandamus has proved ineffectual, and that no officers can be found to perform the duty of levying and collecting taxes, is no sufficient ground of equity jurisdiction.

Idem, 472

4. The principle is the same where the proper officers of the county or town have levied the tax and no one can be found to accept the office of collector of taxes. This gives no jurisdiction to a court of equity to fill that office or to appoint a receiver to perform its functions.

Idem, 472

5. The inadequacy of the remedy at law, which sometimes justifies the interference of a court of equity, does not consist merely in its failure to produce the money, but that in its nature or character it is not fitted or adapted to the end in view.

Idem, 472

6. The defendant, John F. Pickrell, having made an agreement with a railroad company to construct its road and furnish the iron therefor, and to receive certain bonds in payment, made a contract with the complainants for the iron, payment to be made in said bonds, the contract providing that the bonds should be deposited subject to the order of the parties and the president of the company, who executed a separate contract whereby he agreed to join in such order when the complainants should be entitled to the bonds by the terms of their agreement with Pickrell. Upon a bill based upon the assumption that the railroad company was a party to the contract through Pickrell as its agent, it is held that Pickrell was not the agent of the company; that, to entitle the complainants to have the first contract reformed by substituting the name of the company in place of Pickrell, they must show that it was omitted by mistake or fraud; and that upon the facts the complainants are not entitled to the relief sought.

Baltzer v. Raleigh, etc. R. R. Co., 505

7. Unless the transactions to which charges of fraud or of a breach of trust refer, are such as in their essential nature constitute a fraud or breach of trust, a court of chancery cannot give relief.

Van Weel v. Winston, 384

8. A bill in equity to set aside and restrain the collection of a tax levied upon personal property by a municipal corporation, cannot be maintained solely on the ground of the illegality of the tax by reason of the nonresidence within the limits of the municipality of the person against whom the tax is levied.

Milwaukee v. Kaffer, 612

9. The mere refusal of a party to perform a parol contract for the sale of lands cannot be construed to be such a fraud as will give a court of equity jurisdiction to enforce it.

Dunphy v. Ryan, 703

ERROR.

See Appeal and Error, passim.

ESTOPPEL.

SEE BANKS, 1.
BONDS, 11, 18.
CONTRACTS, 4.
FRAUD, 1.
MORTGAGES, 10, 14.
PLEADINGS, 2.
RAILROADS, 1.

EVIDENCE.

SEE APPEAL AND ERROR, 18, 42, 75.
DUTIES, 5, 7.
INSURANCE, 14, 15.
LANDS, 15.
PRACTICE, 3.
TAXES, 18, 19.
TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES, 3.
WILLS, 1.
WITNESSES, passim.

1. The courts of the United States take judicial notice of the law of the States.
Lamar v. Micou, 94

2. The declarations made by an officer or agent of a corporation, in response to timely inquiries, properly addressed to him and relating to matters under his charge, in respect to which he is authorized in the usual course of business to give information, may be given in evidence against the corporation.
Xenia Bank v. Stewart, 101

3. It is within the scope of the general authority of a cashier to receive offers for the securities of the bank and to state whether or not the bank owned securities which a customer wanted to buy.
Idem, 101

4. A letter written upon the paper of a bank by its cashier and appearing with reasonable certainty to have referred to its business is admissible in evidence against the bank.
Idem, 101

5. Proof of the insolvency of a debtor is no more competent to show nonpayment, than proof of his solvency is competent to show the payment of his debts.
Idem, 101

6. Where the complaint alleged a contract for delivery of iron at one place, and the answer a contract for delivery at a different place, evidence offered by the plaintiff which tended to support the averment of the answer was properly admitted under § 2669 of the Revised Statutes of Wisconsin, the defendants having failed at the trial to prove that they were misled by the variance between the complaint and the proof.
Pope v. Allis, 393

7. Averments made under oath, in a pleading in an action at law, are competent evidence in another suit against the party making them; and the fact that the averments are made on information and belief goes only to their weight.
Idem, 393

8. It will be presumed, at least after the lapse of considerable time, that the officers of a bank have performed their duties in accordance with the custom and course of business of the bank.
Knickerbocker L. Ins. Co. v. Pendleton, 432

9. Evidence of the custom and usage of a bank is competent for the purpose of sustaining and corroborating the conviction and belief of its cashier that a draft was duly presented for payment.
Idem, 432

10. Evidence as to the understanding of the parties to a written contract is inadmissible to vary or contradict its terms, or to affect persons not parties to such contract.
Baltzer v. Raleigh, etc., R. R. Co., 505

11. State courts do not take judicial notice of the laws of other States, the several States being considered in this respect foreign to each other.
Hanley v. Donoghue, 535

12. Although this court, in the exercise of its appellate jurisdiction from the lower courts of the United States, takes judicial notice of the laws of all of the States, upon error to the highest court of a State it takes judicial notice of the laws of that State but not of the laws of other States, such laws being only known to the court below as facts to be proved as such.
Idem, 535

13. Declarations of the vendor of personal property and the agent of the vendee made after the surrender of possession by the vendor to such agent, are inadmissible against the vendee to show the character of the sale when made.
Winchester & P. Mfg. Co. v. Creary, 591

14. Declarations of the vendor after sale are inadmissible against the vendee in support of a charge of combination or conspiracy to defraud creditors, unless the alleged common purpose to defraud is first established by independent evidence, and unless such declarations have such relation to its execution as to constitute a part of the res gestæ.
Idem, 591

15. Where the vendor remains, after surrender of possession, merely as clerk or salesman, he is not in possession within the meaning of the rule allowing, in favor of creditors, proof of the declarations of a vendor of personal property, who is allowed to control, manage and dispose of it after sale.
Idem, 591

16. The surrender of the power to tax will never be presumed, but must be shown by clear and unambiguous language admitting of no other reasonable construction.
Southwestern R. R. Co. v. Wright, 626

17. The limited exemption from taxation contained in the original charter of the Southwestern Railroad Company of Georgia applies only to such parts of its road as were built under that charter.
Idem, 626

18. The admissions or declarations of the vendor of personal property are admissible against the vendee when it appears from independent evidence that they were engaged in a common purpose to defraud the creditors of the former, and the admissions or declarations had such relation to the execution of such purpose as fairly to constitute a part of the res gestæ.
Jones v. Simpson, 742

19. An affidavit filed for the purpose of obtaining an order requiring the plaintiff to give security for costs, was competent evidence against the defendant on the trial of another issue; and the fact that it was sworn to on information and belief affected only its weight and not its competency.
Chicago & N. W. R. R. Co. v. Ohle, 837

20. In an action of ejectment deeds are admissible in evidence when their appearance affords strong evidence of their genuineness and antiquity, and they are free from any badge that would excite suspicion of fraud or forgery.
Applegate v. Lexington & Carter Co. Mining Co., 892

21. The record of a former case is admissible in evidence against persons not parties or privies, to prove the collateral fact of the antiquity of original deeds therein contained and to account for their custody.
Idem, 892

22. The certificate of a recorder indorsed on a deed which is apparently ancient and genuine, is competent and sufficient evidence that it was recorded at the time therein stated.
Idem, 892

23. An ancient deed is admissible in evidence if it appears to be at least thirty years old, is found in proper custody, and either possession under it is shown, or some other corroborative evidence freeing it from all just grounds of suspicion.
Idem, 892

24. A deed sixty-one years old, produced from the custody of the heirs of the grantee, is held to have been rightfully admitted as an ancient document by the court below, without proof by the subscribing witnesses, or possession by the plaintiffs or those under whom they claim.
Fulkerson v. Holmes, 915

25. After a lapse of sixty-one years, the declaration of the grantor deliberately made in an ancient deed, signed, sealed, witnessed, acknowledged and recorded, to the effect that he was the only child and heir of the patentee of the lands in controversy, and that the patentee was dead, was properly admitted as evidence of the facts recited.
Idem, 915

26. The refusal of the court below to instruct the jury upon the question of the forfeiture of the lands in controversy, under the revenue laws of Virginia, was proper, the defendants having completely failed to show a forfeiture.
Idem, 915

27. Upon the trial of an issue involving the value of lands which have been taken for a public park, evidence as to prices paid for lands adjoining the park, or within its immediate vicinity, on sales made after its boundaries had been fixed, is inadmissible.
Kerr v. South Park Comrs., 927

28. A court will take judicial notice of the territorial extent of its jurisdiction.
Hoyt v. Russell, 914

29. The Act of the Legislature of Montana of May

6, 1872, affecting the mode of making proof of the location of mining claims, was not in force in the County of Lewis and Clark, on May 13, 1873, and of this fact the court below should have taken judicial notice.
Hoyt v. Russell, 914
30. Evidence tending to show that a promissory note was not intended by the parties to be a promissory note, is inadmissible in an action at law brought by the holder on such note.
Burnes v. Scott, 991
31. Such evidence is inadmissible in an action at law to show want of consideration where the question of the alleged want of consideration involves the settlement of a partnership, and the matter amounts only to an equitable defense.
Idem, 991

EXPORTS.

SEE CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 38, 80, 81.

FEES.

Under sec. 847, R. S., a commissioner of a Circuit Court, when required to keep a docket of warrants issued and proceedings had thereon, is entitled to the same fees allowed to the clerk under sec. 828, R. S.
United States v. Wallace, 675

FERRIES.

SEE CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 11, 12.
NEGLIGENCE, 2.
REMOVAL OF CAUSES, 21.

FINES.

The mode in which fines and penalties shall be enforced, whether at the suit of a private party, or at the suit of the public, and what disposition shall be made of the amounts collected, are matters of legislative discretion.
Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Humes, 463

FOREIGN COINS.

1. The value of foreign coins, as ascertained by the estimate of the director of the mint and proclaimed by the Secretary of the Treasury, is conclusive upon custom-house officers and importers.
Hadden v. Merritt, 333
2. Alleged errors in the estimate cannot be shown in judicial proceedings to affect the rights of the government or individuals.
Idem, 333
3. As the duty of ascertaining and declaring the value of such coins is an executive function, which requires skill and the exercise of judgment and discretion, errors can only be corrected by an appeal to the department itself.
Idem, 333

FRAUD.

SEE BANKRUPTCY, 5, 6.
BONDS, 13.
CONTRACTS, 2.
EVIDENCE, 13.
EQUITY, 6, 7, 9.
FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCE 1, 2.
INSURANCE, 5, 15.
LANDS, 5.
LIMITATIONS, 8.
PARTNERSHIP, 4.
SALES, 5-10.
TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES, 5.

1. One who seeks to share in the fruits of a contract, cannot complain that it was fraudulently procured.
Bissell v. Foss, 126
2. Where, by the connivance of a clerk in the office of an assistant treasurer of the United States, a person unlawfully obtains from that office money belonging to the United States, and, to replace it, pays to the clerk money which he obtains by fraud from a bank, the clerk having no knowledge of the means by which the latter money was obtained, the United States is not liable to refund the money to the bank.
State Nat. Bk. v. United States, 149

FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCE.

SEE EVIDENCE, 13, 14, 17.

1. The conveyance, by a debtor in failing circumstances, of his property, in trust, to secure certain of his creditors, though void, does not affect the validity of a subsequent sale to such creditors made in good faith, to pay an actual debt.
Stewart v. Dunham, 327
2. The sale, by a debtor in failing circumstances, of his property to certain of his creditors sustained, the evidence of fraud being held insufficient by this court.
Idem, 330

FUGITIVE FROM JUSTICE.

SEE CRIMINAL LAW.

GARNISHMENT.

1. Garnishment proceedings against a street railroad corporation as a debtor to the city, by a judgment creditor of the City of New Orleans, were warranted by sec. 916 of the Revised Statutes, being authorized by laws of Louisiana in force when sec. 916, was enacted.
Canal & Cl. St. R. R. Co. v. Hart, 226
2. The remedies supplementary to judgment, adopted by sec. 916, were those then provided by the laws of Louisiana in regard to judgments in suits of a like nature or class, and not the provisions of the Act of the Legislature of Louisiana, passed March 17, 1870, in regard to judgments against the City of New Orleans.
Idem, 226

GUARANTY.

A guaranty signed by the guarantor without any previous request of the other party, and in his absence, for no consideration moving between them except future advances to be made to the principal debtor, is in legal effect an offer or proposal on the part of the guarantor, which requires an acceptance to complete the contract.
Davis Sewing Mach. Co. v. Richards, 430

GUARDIAN AND WARD.

A guardian, appointed in a State which is not the domicil of the ward, should not, in accounting in the State of his appointment for his investment of the ward's property, be held, unless in obedience to express statute, to a narrower range of securities than is allowed by the law of the State of the ward's domicil.
Lamar v. Micou, 94

HABEAS CORPUS.

SEE APPEAL AND ERROR, 68.
CRIMINAL LAW, 4, 5.
RULES, passim.

1. This court cannot discharge on habeas corpus a person imprisoned under the sentence of a Circuit or District Court in a criminal case, unless the sentence exceeds the jurisdiction of that court, or there is no authority to hold the prisoner under the sentence.
Ex parte Wilson, 39
2. A misrecital of the verdict as upon one count only, in stating the inquiry whether the convict had aught to say, is no ground for discharging him on habeas corpus.
Idem, 39
3. A certified copy of the record of a sentence to imprisonment is sufficient to authorise the detention of the prisoner, without any warrant or mittimus.
Idem, 39
4. In the record of a judgment of a District Court, sentencing a person convicted in one State to imprisonment in another State, the omission to state that there was no suitable prison in the State in which he was convicted and that the Attorney General had designated the prison in the other State, is no ground for discharging the prisoner on habeas corpus.
Idem, 39
5. A person sentenced to imprisonment for an infamous crime, without having been presented or indicted by a grand jury, as required by the Fifth Amendment of the Constitution, is entitled to be discharged on habeas corpus.
Idem, 39
6. The writ of habeas corpus is not a writ of error. Its purpose is to enable the court to inquire whether the petitioner is restrained of his liberty, and, if so, whether such restraint is unlawful.

Wales v. Whitney, 277
7. The Acts of Congress concerning this writ contemplate a proceeding against some person who has the immediate custody of the party detained, with the power to produce the body of such party before the court or judge, that he may be liberated if no sufficient reason is shown for his detention.
Idem, 277
8. Something more than moral restraint is necessary to make a case for habeas corpus. There must be actual confinement or the present means of enforcing it.
Idem, 277
9. A writ of habeas corpus is not removable from a state court into a Circuit Court of the United States under the Act of March 3, 1875, chap. 137, sec. 2.
Kurtz v. Moffit, 458
10. A police officer of a State or a private citizen, has no authority as such without any warrant or military order, to arrest and detain a deserter from the Army of the United States.
Idem, 458
11. The Circuit Court has jurisdiction on habeas corpus to discharge from custody one who is restrained of his liberty in violation of the Constitution, but who, at the time, is held under State process for trial on an indictment charging him with an offense against the laws of the State.
Ex parte Royall, 368
12. Where a person is in custody, under state process, for an alleged offense against the laws of the State, and it is claimed that he is restrained of his liberty in violation of the Constitution of the United States, the Circuit Court has discretion, whether it will discharge him on habeas corpus, in advance of his trial: that discretion, however, to be subordinated to any special circumstances requiring immediate action.
Idem, 368
13. It seems that after the conviction of the accused in the state court, the Circuit Court has still a discretion whether he shall be put to his writ of error, or whether it will proceed by habeas corpus summarily to determine whether he is restrained of his liberty in violation of the Constitution.
Idem, 368
14. If this court has legal power on habeas corpus to discharge the petitioner, who is held under state process for trial on an indictment charging him with an offense against the laws of the State, it should not be exercised in advance of his trial.
Idem, 368
15. If it has legal power on habeas corpus to discharge the petitioner, who has been convicted in a state court of embezzlement of the funds of a national bank, where no reason appears why the Supreme Court of the State may not review the judgment, this court will not act in advance of the orderly course of proceeding for a review of the judgment by writ of error.
Ex parte Fonda, 394

HUSBAND AND WIFE.

1. Neither the liability for provisions supplied at a dwelling house where a husband and wife and their children are living together, nor a promissory note given by the husband, describing himself as trustee for the wife, in payment for such supplies, can be charged in equity upon the wife's separate estate, without clear proof that she contracted the debt in her own behalf, or intended to bind her separate estate for its payment.
Dodge v. Knowles, 144
2. A wife's equitable estate in property held by her husband as trustee, cannot be affected by a conveyance by him, nor can it be made liable for a contract, made by him, to which she was not a party and which she has not sanctioned.
Holgate v. Eaton, 538

IMPORTS.

SEE CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 37.
DUTIES, passim.
INTERNAL REVENUE, 4.

INFORMATION.

SEE APPEAL AND ERROR, 52-55.
CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 78.

INDIANS.

1. The Fort Hill Indian Reservation is subject to the general jurisdiction of the Territory of Idaho as to all matters not interfering with the rights secured to the Indians by treaty.
Utah & N. R. Co. v. Fisher, 542
2. By force of the cession of the land upon which the road and other property of the Utah & Northern Railway Company are situated, it was, so far as necessary for railroad purposes, withdrawn from the Reservation. The taxation of such property by the Territory does not impair the treaty rights of the Indians.
Idem, 542
3. By various treaties the United States have recognized the Cherokee Indians as one people, composing a single tribe or nation.
Cherokee Indians v. United States, 330
4. The Cherokees in North Carolina dissolved their connection with their nation when they refused to accompany the body of it on its removal, and they have since had no separate political organization.
Idem, 330
5. The Cherokees in North Carolina are not entitled to a share of the commuted fund of $214,000, and of the fund created by sales of Cherokee lands west of the Mississippi. Such Indians must be readmitted to citizenship in the Cherokee nation in compliance with its Constitution and laws if they wish to enjoy the benefits of its common property.
Idem, 330

INDICTMENT.

SEE CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 78.
POLYGAMY, 2.
In an indictment for a misdemeanor it is sufficient to charge the offense in the words of the statute unless they fail to cover every element of the offense charged.
Cannon v. United States, 561

INFANTS.

Infants having a domicil in one State, who, after the death of both their parents, take up their residence at the home of their paternal grandmother and next of kin in another State, acquire her domicil.
Lamar v. Micou, 94

INJUNCTIONS.

SEE APPEAL AND ERROR, 26, 27, 28.
CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 49.
CONTRACTS, 7.
EQUITY, 8.
LIMITATIONS, 11.
1. The remedy by injunction to prevent the collection of taxes by distraint upon the property of railroad corporations, after a tender of payment in tax receivable coupons, is sanctioned by repeated decisions of this court, and has become common and unquestioned practice, in similar cases, where exemptions have been claimed in virtue of the Constitution of the United States; the ground of the jurisdiction being that there is no adequate remedy at law.
Allen v. B. & O. R. R. Co., 200
2. The contract right of a coupon holder under the Virginia Act of March 30, 1871, can be exercised only by a taxpayer; and a bill for an injunction to restrain tax collectors from refusing to receive them, will not lie in behalf of a coupon holder who does not allege himself to be also a taxpayer. Such a bill calls for a decree declaring merely an abstract right, and does not show any breach of the contract, or other ground of relief.
Marye v. Parsons, 205
3. Under the statutes of Maryland the tolls and revenues of the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal Company are mortgaged to the State, to secure the repayment of money lent by the State to the company and the payment of dividends and interest on the stock subscribed for by the State; subject to the payment of necessary expenses, and to a mortgage to trustees to secure the payment of certain bonds of the company. At a suit in equity of the State and of such trustees, even before the State has taken possession under its mortgages, a general creditor of the company, who at the time of contracting his debt had notice of the provisions of the statutes and of the mortgages, will be restrained from levying on money deposited by the company in a bank, and needed to meet such necessary expenses.

Brown v. Maryland, 233

INSURANCE.

SEE MORTGAGES, 16.

1. A violation of any of the prohibitions of a policy of insurance by any one permitted by the assured to occupy the premises, is a violation by the assured himself.
Liverpool & L. & G. Ins. Co. v. Gunther, 575

2. A privilege to use gasoline gas, and apparatus for generating it, does not sanction the storage of gasoline, except for actual use in such apparatus.
Idem, 575

3. Upon payment for a total loss of goods insured the insurer is only subrogated to such rights of action as the assured has against third persons, who caused or are responsible for the loss.
Phœnix Ins. Co. v. Erie & W. Trans. Co., 873

4. A stipulation in a bill of lading allowing the carrier the benefit of any insurance procured by the owner, is valid as between the parties, though the loss be occasioned by the negligence of the carrier or his agents, and, in the absence of fraudulent concealment or misrepresentation, the insurer can maintain no action against the carrier upon any terms inconsistent with the stipulation.
Idem, 873

5. Where both the assured and the insurer are deceived by fraudulent acts of an agent in inserting in the application false answers, when the answers made by the assured were truthful, if both parties act bona fide, the policy should be canceled and the premiums returned.
New York L. Ins. Co. v. Fletcher, 934

6. An insurance company can limit the authority of its agents and thus bind all parties dealing with them with knowledge of the limitations. A party insured is presumed to have read his application and to be cognizant of the limitations therein expressed.
Idem, 934

7. An instruction to a jury that the assured was bound by his application if it was not avoided for fraud, and that it was so avoided, and that therefore the representative of the assured could recover was incorrect. If the application was avoided the policy was also avoided.
Idem, 934

8. A retention of a policy of insurance containing a copy of the application by the assured is an approval of such application.
Idem, 934

9. A policy of insurance provided that, after two annual premiums had been paid, the assured should, in case of default in payment of premiums, be entitled to have the policy continued in force for a period of time to be determined in a way provided in the contract, or to receive a paid up policy for the full amount of the premiums paid, but upon this condition, "that unless the policy shall be surrendered and such paid up policy shall be applied for within ninety days after such nonpayment as aforesaid, then this policy shall be void and of no effect." Held; that failure of the assured to surrender the policy and make election within ninety days after default deprived her of the right to have the policy temporarily continued in force as well as of the right to a paid up policy.
Knapp v. Homeopathic Mut. L. Ins. Co., 960

10. Persons cannot be made to assume the relation of partners, as between themselves, when it is their purpose that no partnership shall exist.
London Assur. Co. v. Drennen, 688

11. They may enter into an agreement whereby one of them shall participate in the profits arising from the management of the property involved in a certain business without his becoming a partner with the others, or without his acquiring an interest in the property itself, so as to effect a change of title within the meaning of a clause in an insurance policy providing against a change of title or possession.
Idem, 688

12. An endowment policy of insurance payable to the assured or his assigns at a certain date, or, if he should die before that time, to his legal representatives, is assignable by the assured, where the assignment is not made to cover a mere speculative risk; and the insurance passes to the assignee though the assured dies within the endowment period.
Mut. L. Ins. Co. of N. Y. v. Armstrong, 997

13. Evidence tending to prove that the assignee of such a policy caused the death of the assu[illegible] felonious means, is admissible in an action [illegible] against the company to recover on the polic[illegible]
Idem,

14. Evidence tending to show that the a[illegible] effected insurances upon the life of the assu[illegible] other companies at about the same time, is [illegible] sible in support of the theory of the defense [illegible] in obtaining the insurance in question, it w[illegible] object of the assignee to cheat and defraud t[illegible] fendant company.
Idem,

INTEREST.

SEE APPEAL AND ERROR, 92.
CONTRACTS, 1.
USURY, passim.

INTERNAL REVENUE.

SEE APPEAL AND ERROR, 51, 52, 5[illegible]
CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 66.
JURISDICTION, 25.
PLEADINGS, 9.

1. Upon the sale of manufactured tobacco s[illegible] ated in a bonded warehouse, the broker mak[illegible] such sale cannot be taxed for the revenue stam[illegible] required before removal, unless they were affi[illegible] at the time of the sale.
Jones v. VanBenthuysen, 4[illegible]

2. No suit can be maintained against a collect[illegible] of internal revenue for taxes illegally collected u[illegible] less a claim therefor has been presented to t[illegible] commissioner of internal revenue within the tim[illegible] prescribed by law.
Kings Co. Sav. Inst. v. Blair, 6[illegible]

3. It is not an offense under sec. 12 of the Act [illegible] March 1, 1879, for one merely to have in his poss[illegible] sion a canceled stamp, or a stamp which has bee[illegible] used, or which purports to have been used upon [illegible] package of imported liquors, unless it has been de[illegible] signedly removed by human agency, without de[illegible] facing or destroying it at the time.
United States v. Spiegel, 664

4. In an information under sec. 3257, R. S., the particular means by which the claimant defrauded and attempted to defraud the United States of the tax, need not be set forth nor the particular spirits covered thereby specified.
Coffey v. United States, 681

5. A judgment of acquittal in a criminal prosecution for a violation of the internal revenue laws is conclusive in favor of the defendant as claiman of the property involved in a subsequent suit in rem, when, as against him, the existence of the same act or fact involved in the criminal prosecution is in issue as a cause for the forfeiture of the said property.
Idem, 681

6. A legacy which did not become due until after the repealing Act of July 14, 1870, took effect, is held not to be subject to a legacy tax under the Act of June 30, 1864, as amended by the Act of July 13, 1866.
Sturges v. United States, 920

JUDGMENTS AND DECREES.

SEE APPEAL AND ERROR, 3, 33, 60, 61, 70-73, 79, 89.
BANKRUPTCY, 3.
CORPORATIONS, 3.
EJECTMENT, 2.
EQUITY, 2.
INTERNAL REVENUE, 5.
JURISDICTION, 31.
LANDS, 4, 5, 16, 24.
MANDAMUS, 1, 3.
MORTGAGES, 9.
PLEADINGS, 5.
PRACTICE, passim.
REMOVAL OF CAUSES, 7, 8, 31.
STATE LAWS AND DECISIONS, 4.

1. A decree against a party who has not been heard, and has had no chance to be heard, is not a judicial determination of his rights, and is not entitled to respect in any other court.
Smith v. Woolfolk, 357

2. The fact that a judgment was erroneous and might have been reversed upon a writ of error, does not destroy a sale made under the judgment while remaining in full force and unreversed.
Gibson v. Lyon, 449

3. Where a judgment of a state court in an action against joint defendants, one of whom has not been duly summoned, is by the law of that State valid as to those who are summoned, or who appear, it will sustain an action against such defendants in another State.

Hanley v. Donoghue, 535
4. Under sec. 905, R. S., if a joint judgment recovered in a state court against two, of whom but one was served, is enforceable within that State against him severally, it will sustain an action against him in another State.
Renaud v. Abbott, 629
5. A judgment of an inferior court, dismissing a cause for want of due prosecution, can only be reviewed by this court by writ of error or appeal.
Ex parte Brown, 676
6. Where a defendant had, at the time judgment was rendered against him, a good defense, as a discharge in bankruptcy, and failed to present it to a court which had jurisdiction of his case and of all the defenses he might have made, the judgment is valid and such defense cannot afterwards be set up in an action on the judgment.
Dimock v. Revere Copper Co. 394

JURIES.

SEE APPEAL AND ERROR, 3, 4.
NEGLIGENCE, 4.

1. Section 5, Act of March 22, 1882, concerning polygamy, applies to the selection of grand jurors, and an indictment for one of the offenses named, by a grand jury from which persons believing in polygamy were excluded, is good.
Clawson v. United States, 179
2. A venire may be issued and the jury completed where the names of 200 jurors, provided for by sec. 4, Act of June 23, 1873, "concerning courts and judicial officers in Utah," have been exhausted.
Idem, 179
3. When the court instructs the jury in a manner sufficiently clear and sound as to the rules applicable to the case, it is not bound to give other instructions asked by counsel on the same subject, whether they are correct or not.
Iron Silver Mining Co. v. Cheesman, 712

JURISDICTION.

SEE APPEAL AND ERROR, 15, 21, 28, 38, 30-32, 46-48, 51, 56, 65, 92-94.
BANKRUPTCY, 1-3.
CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 35, 35, 46.
EVIDENCE, 27.
EQUITY, passim.
HABEAS CORPUS, 11, 14, 15.
INJUNCTIONS, 1.
JUDGMENTS AND DECREES, 6.
LANDS, 12.
MANDAMUS, 6.
PATENTS, 13-16.
PROHIBITION, 9.
REMOVAL OF CAUSES, passim.
TERRITORIES, 3.

1. Under the Act of March 3, 1875, the holders of promissory notes or of foreign or domestic bills of exchange, who are citizens of a State in which the decisions of the courts have been adverse to their interests, cannot by collusive transfers to citizens of other States create a case apparently cognizable in the courts of the United States, and have it prosecuted by their assignees in those tribunals for their benefit.
Farmington v. Pillsbury, 114
2. The jurisdiction of this court for the review of a judgment of the highest court of a State depends on the decision by that court of one or more of the questions specified in sec. 709, R. S., and in the way there mentioned.
Detroit City R. Co. v. Guthard, 118
3. To give this court jurisdiction it must appear affirmatively on the face of the record, not only that a federal question was raised, but that it was decided, or that its decision was necessary to the judgment or decree rendered in the case.
Idem, 118
4. A bill which sets up a cause of action on which there is an adequate remedy at law, fails for want of equitable jurisdiction.
Litchfield v. Ballou, 132
5. The admiralty courts of the United States have jurisdiction of collisions occurring on the high seas between vessels owned by foreigners of different nationalities.
Steamship Belgenland v. Jensen, 152
6. The courts will use a discretion about assuming jurisdiction of controversies between foreigners in cases arising beyond their territorial jurisdiction, yet where such controversies are communis juris special grounds should appear to induce the court to deny its aid to a foreign suitor when it has jurisdiction of the ship or party charged.
Idem, 152
7. Upon appeal the action of the court of first instance in assuming jurisdiction can only be questioned on the ground that its discretion has been exercised on wrong principles, or so unjustly as to justify the court of appeals in holding that it has been exercised wrongly.
Idem, 152
8. Where the parties are not only foreigners but belong to different nations and the injury or salvage service takes place on the high seas, there seems to be no good reason why the party injured, or doing the service, should ever be denied justice in our courts.
Idem, 152
9. The general maritime law, as understood and administered in the courts of the country in which the litigation is prosecuted, should be applied in such cases.
Idem, 152
10. When the question in a state court was, whether the presentation of a check drawn on a banker by a depositor transferred to the holder so much of the debt due the drawer as was sufficient to pay the check, no federal question is presented and this court is without jurisdiction. The subsequent bankruptcy of the drawer and a claim by the bank of a set-off against his deposit under sec. 5073, R. S., do not operate to give this court jurisdiction.
Boatman's Sav. Bk. v. State Sav. Asso., 174
11. The 16th clause of sec. 629, R. S., does not embrace an action of trespass on the case in which the plaintiff seeks a recovery of damages against a tax collector in Virginia, who, having rejected a tender of tax-receivable coupons, issued under the Act of March 30, 1871, seeks to collect a tax for which they were tendered by a seizure and sale of personal property of the plaintiff.
Carter v. Greenhow, 202
12. Although the right to have such coupons received in payment of taxes is founded on a contract with the State, the only mode of redress in case of any disturbance or dispossession of property, or for other legal rights based on such violation of the contract, is to have a judicial determination, in a suit between individuals, of the invalidity of the law, under color of which the wrong has been committed. No direct action for the denial of the right secured by the contract will lie.
Idem, 202
13. This court has jurisdiction to review the judgment of a state court against the validity of a title claimed under a sale in bankruptcy.
N. O., S. F. & L. R. Co. v. Delamore, 244
14. The jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court to adjudicate a railroad company bankrupt and to administer its property, under the Bankruptcy Act is settled by the decisions of the circuit courts, and this court is unwilling at this late day to re-examine the question.
Idem, 244
15. The Court of Claims has no jurisdiction of a claim against the United States for moneys received from Mexico under the Convention or Treaty of July 4, 1868, it being a claim founded on and growing out of a treaty with a foreign nation within sec. 1066, R. S.
Alling v. United States, 272
16. The Act of June 18, 1878, confers authority on the Secretary of State to distribute the awards made by the commission organized under said Treaty.
Idem, 272
17. Neither the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia nor this court has any appellate jurisdiction over the naval court-martial, nor over offenses which such a court has power to try.
Wales v. Whitney, 277
18. Where, upon the face of the record, the value of the property involved is sufficient to give the court jurisdiction, and the appellee declines to appear in this court, it is too late to present extrinsic evidence of the actual value of the property upon a motion to set aside the judgment.
Dodge v. Knowles, 296
19. Where a sale of the lands of a bankrupt estate has been made and confirmed by order of the bankruptcy court, and the lands have been conveyed by the assignee, the Circuit Court of the United States is without jurisdiction at the suit of the purchaser to enjoin a sale of the same lands about to be made upon the order of a state court.

Sargent v. Helton, 412
20. This court has jurisdiction of a controversy involving a dispute as to the validity of a transfer by a trustee in bankruptcy, and a question involving the limitation prescribed by the Bankrupt Act.
Traer v. Clews, 467
21. Section 9 of the Judiciary Act of 1789, which conferred exclusive jurisdiction on the district courts of suits for penalties and forfeitures under the customs laws of the United States, still remains in force, there being no conflict between said section and sec. 1 of the Act of March 3, 1875.
United States v. Mooney, 550
22. The restricted meaning attached for eighty-six years to the language of sec. 11 of the Act of 1789 is presumed to attach to the same language in the Act of 1875.
Idem, 550
23. This court recalls the mandate in a case decided on the merits earlier in the term, the question of its jurisdiction having now been raised and decided adversely in a similar case.
Cannon v. United States, 561
24. The clause of sec. 1059, R. S., which invests the Court of Claims with jurisdiction of claims referred to it by either house of Congress, is subject to other clauses defining its jurisdiction, and fixing the period within which all claims must be asserted against the United States.
Ford v. United States, 608
25. Suits in rem for forfeitures for violations of the internal revenue laws are within the original jurisdiction of the Circuit Court.
Coffey v. United States, 681
26. Where the citizenship of the parties was alleged in the declaration, and was such as, if truly stated, gave the court jurisdiction, and the defendant, purposely omitting to make known his citizenship, pleaded to the merits, the question of citizenship did not arise, and evidence by the defendant, contradicting the allegations in the declaration as to his citizenship, was irrelevant and afforded no basis for the dismissal of the suit.
Hartog v. Memory, 725
27. The Circuit Court cannot dismiss a cause on the ground that it does not involve a dispute or controversy within its jurisdiction, unless the facts, when made distinctly to appear of record, create a legal certainty of the conclusion based on them.
Barry v. Edmunds, 729
28. In an action for a willful and malicious trespass, in seizing and taking personal property, if a claim is made for exemplary damages in excess of the sum necessary to bring the case within its jurisdiction, the court should not dismiss the case merely because the value of the property seized was less than the jurisdictional limit.
Idem, 729
29. It was error for the Circuit Court to hold, as a matter of law, that there could be no recovery in a case such as that stated in the declaration, of an amount equal to that which is necessary to support its jurisdiction.
Idem, 729
30. The district courts established by the Act of the Legislature of Kentucky of December 19, 1795, had jurisdiction of actions to foreclose mortgages.
Applegate v. Lexington & Carter Co. Mining Co., 892
31. Where a court of general jurisdiction is authorized to bring in, by substituted service, nonresident defendants interested in property within its jurisdiction, but is not required to place the proof of service upon the record, and the court orders such service, it will be presumed in favor of the jurisdiction that service was made as ordered, although no evidence thereof appears of record, and a judgment affecting the property will be valid.
Idem, 892
32. The Circuit Court of the United States has no jurisdiction of an action brought by a citizen of California against a municipality of New Jersey upon bonds assigned to the plaintiff by citizens of New Jersey for purposes of collection only.
New Providence v. Halsey, 904
33. The Circuit Court of the United States has jurisdiction of an action brought by a citizen of California against a municipality of New Jersey upon bonds purchased by the plaintiff for a valuable consideration from citizens of New Jersey, although he is compelled to rely on the title of his vendors to avoid matters pleaded in bar of the action.
Idem, 904
34. The Supreme Court has jurisdiction to review a decision of a state court to the effect that a discharge in bankruptcy of the defendant was not a bar to the action.
Dimock v. Revere Copper Co., 994
35. It appearing that the decision of a question as to the effect of a discharge in bankruptcy upon the right of a party to enforce a lien upon property in existence at the time of the commencement of the proceedings in bankruptcy, was necessarily involved in the decision of a state court, and that such decision was adverse to the right set up under the discharge, this court has jurisdiction to review the decision.
Long v. Bullard, 1004

LANDS.

SEE CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 31-36.
EQUITY, 9.
EVIDENCE, 19-26.
MANDAMUS, 8.
MINES, passim.
MORTGAGES, passim.
PRINCIPAL AND AGENT.
REPLEVIN, 2.
STATUTE OF FRAUDS.
TERRITORIES, 1, 2.

1. To charge the holder of the legal title to land under the patent, as trustee of another, the claimant must show himself entitled to it, and its refusal to him in consequence of errors in the rulings of the Land Department upon the law applicable to the facts found.
Bohall v. Dilla, 61
2. The preemption laws require a residence both continuous and personal. The settler may be excused for temporary absences for causes given.
Idem, 61
3. The United States has the same remedy in a court of equity to set aside or annul a patent for land, on the ground of fraud in procuring its issue, which an individual has.
United States v. Minor, 110
4. The doctrine of the conclusiveness of judgments and decrees as between parties is not applicable to the United States, in proceedings before the land officers in granting patents for public land.
Idem, 110
5. The officers of the Land Department exercise functions in their nature judicial, in cases in which individuals have, as between each other, contested the right to a patent, and their decision as to the facts before them is conclusive between those parties. But fraud or imposition on those officers, or a radical mistake by them of the law, is subject to remedy in a court of equity; and where there has been no contest, and the claimant produces without opposition his ex parte proofs of performance of the necessary conditions, it is especially needful that equity should give the government a remedy if those proofs are founded in fraud and perjury.
Idem, 110
6. Under the Act of July 23, 1866, the land grant of the St. Joseph & Denver Railroad Company attached to the adjoining sections when the route was adopted by the company, and a map designating it was filed with the Secretary of the Interior, and accepted by him.
Walden v. Knevals, 167
7. A subsequent entry by one without notice created no interest in him, and the patent issued upon that entry passed none.
Idem, 167
8. Under the Act of July 23, 1866, passed to remedy the effects of the unauthorized survey and selection by the State of California of school lands granted by the Act of March 3, 1853, land claimed to be within a valid Mexican grant is within the excepting clause of sec. 1.
Aurrecoechea v. Bangs, 170
9. After the survey the land thus restored to the public domain is open to preemption, and the preemptor acquires a valid title as against one who claims under the invalid section made by the State.
Idem, 170
10. A patent obtained pending a litigation by the defendant for a new claim affecting the subject matter of the litigation cannot be set up against the plaintiff.
Richmond Mining Co. v. Rose, 273

11. When a contest arises under sec. 2326, R. S., all proceedings are stayed in the Land Department until the controversy is settled by a court of competent jurisdiction, or the adverse claim is waived.
Idem, 273

12. In adjusting Congressional grants of land to a State, the only questions for consideration by the officers of the general government are, whether the State possessed the right to claim the land under her grant, and whether the land was subject to selection by her agents. Those officers have no jurisdiction to review transactions between the State and her purchasers or locating agents.
Frasher v. O'Connor, 311

13. Surveys under the Act of July 23, 1866, "to quiet land titles in California," become operative by approval of the United States Surveyor General for the State, and his filing in the local land office of the township plats. Lands thereby excluded from a confirmed private land claim become subject to state selections and other modes of disposal of public lands. Previous approval of the survey by the commissioner of the General Land Office is not necessary.
Idem, 311

14. Lists of lands certified to the State by the commissioner of the General Land Office, and the Secretary of the Interior, convey as complete a title as patents; and lands embraced therein are not thereafter open to settlement and preemption.
Idem, 311

15. In an action of ejectment for lands in California, where the plaintiff traces title to the lands from a patent of the United States issued to a settler under the preemption laws, oral evidence is inadmissible on the part of the defendant to show that the lands were not open to settlement under those laws.
Ehrhardt v. Hogaboom, 346

16. It is the duty of the Land Department, of which the Secretary of the Interior is the head, to determine whether lands patented to a settler are of the class subject to settlement under the preemption laws, and his judgment as to this fact is not open to contestation, in an action at law, by a mere intruder without title.
Idem, 346

17. Mere occupancy and improvement of public lands give no vested right therein as against the United States or any purchaser from them.
Sparks v. Pierce, 428

18. To entitle a party to relief in equity against a patent of the government he must show a better right to the land than the patentee. It is not sufficient to show that the patentee ought not to have received the patent.
Idem, 428

19. A person who makes improvements upon public land, knowing that he has no title and that the land is open to exploration and sale for its minerals, and makes no effort to secure the title to it as such, has no claim to compensation for his improvements as an adverse holder in good faith when such sale is made to another and the title is passed to him by a patent of the United States.
Idem, 428

20. Lands granted by Congress to aid in the construction of railroads do not revert upon condition broken until a forfeiture has been asserted by the United States, either through judicial proceedings or by some legislative action sufficient to manifest an intention by Congress to reassert title and resume possession.
St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. McGee, 446

21. The Act of July 28, 1866, does not declare a forfeiture and reassert title in the United States except as to mineral lands included within the original grant, and a new company which succeeded to the rights of the Cairo & Fulton Company holds under the original grant subject to the rights of purchasers of lands sold by the old company.
Idem, 446

22. The lands granted to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company are not subject to taxation by the local authorities while the legal title remains in the United States as security for the payment of the costs of surveying them.
N. P. R. R. Co. v. Traill Co., 477

23. The Act of 1870 requiring the payment of these costs by the company, is valid, though the original grant imposed no such condition.
Idem, 477

24. In proceedings required in the alienation of the public lands, in the absence of fraud or imposition, the action of the Land Department, upon matters of fact cognizable by it, is conclusive.
Lee v. Johnson, 570

25. If the Department issues a patent to one not entitled to it, under a mistake of law, a court of equity will correct the error by requiring a transfer of the legal title to the true owner.
Idem, 570

26. In proceedings before the Department, if it appears that the claim of the moving party is against public policy or the law, it should be disregarded although such objection was not raised by the allegations of the parties.
Idem, 570

27. If the proper officers of the United States approve a selection of lieu school lands, the school selections being in disputed territory outside the limits of an unsettled survey by the United States of a private claim, and issue the proper certified lists, and the purchaser under such a title enters into possession of the land and improves, cultivates, and holds it, no one by forcibly or surreptitiously getting into possession can make a preemption settlement which will defeat his title.
Mower v. Fletcher, 593

28. The Act of March 1, 1886, confirmed the title of the State of California to the lands in question, and such confirmation inured to the benefit of those holding under the State.
Idem, 593

29. The Act of April 10, 1869, to renew certain grants of lands to the State of Alabama, previously granted by the Act of June 3, 1856, to aid a certain railroad company, is not to be construed as making a new grant, but is to be treated as an extension of the time named in the original grant for the completion of the road.
Doe, ex. dem., v. Larmore, 593

30. The completion of the road within the time fixed by the new Act perfected the title of the company under the original grant, and this title inured to the benefit of its prior grantees.
Idem, 593

31. In the construction of land grant Acts in aid of railroads, "granted lands" are held to be those falling within the limits specially designated, the title to which attaches, when the lands are located by an approved and accepted survey of the line, filed in the Land Department, as of the date of the Act of Congress; while "indemnity lands" are those selected in lieu of parcels previously disposed of or reserved, the title to which accrues only from their selection.
Barney v. Winona, etc. R. R. Co., 858

32. The reservation made by the third section of the Act of March 3, 1865, increasing a prior grant of lands to Minnesota for railroad purposes, applies to the "granted lands" of the prior grant falling within the six mile limit, and not to the possible "indemnity lands" which might be subsequently acquired.
Idem, 858

33. Prior to August 1, 1877, title could be acquired under the statutes of Montana by three years' adverse possession.
Dunphy v. Sullivan, 912

34. Where, in case of a grant by an Act of Congress to a State in trust for each of two railroad companies of every alternate section of land, designated by odd numbers, for ten miles in width on each side of their roads, and, in case any of these lands had been disposed of, lands in lieu thereof to be selected within twenty miles of the roads, it was found that the grants overlapped; held, (1) that the title acquired from the United States related back to the date of the grant and that neither company could, by any act of its own, as by prior location or construction, or by any omission of the other road, obtain any superiority, provided that there was no forfeiture of the grant; (2) that this principle did not apply to lieu or indemnity lands outside the ten mile limit; (3) that as to overlapping lands within ten miles of both roads the companies each took an undivided moiety; (4) that as to lands within ten miles of one road and more than ten miles from the other, the nearest took the entire title, though otherwise the further road would have been entitled to indemnity lands therein; (5) that as to lands more than ten, but less than twenty miles from each road, the decree dividing these lands equally was, under the circumstances, correct.
Sioux City & St. P. R. R. Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 928

35. Where a debtor executed a deed, absolute in terms, to his creditor with the verbal agreement that it was to secure a note and that if the note was not paid at maturity the creditor should be authorized to sell the land, a bona fide purchaser of the land on a sale by the creditor after default, who paid just the amount due on the note, takes the land free from all rights of creditors of the first grantor who levied an attachment on the land prior to the sale. Such attaching creditors have no right of redemption.

Jackson v. Lawrence, 1024

LICENSE.

SEE CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 73.

1. Under the laws of Virginia an assessment, made by law a condition precedent to obtaining a license for pursuing a profession, is payable in coupons of bonds issued by the State, being within the meaning of the words, "taxes, debts, dues and demands due the State," as used in the Act of March 30, 1871.
Royall v. Virginia, 735
2. It is the right of the coupon holder to have his coupons received for taxes when offered, and the Act of March 15, 1884, in so far as it forbids their receipt in payment of license taxes, is void as against coupon holders.
Idem, 735
3. Where an applicant for a license has tendered coupons in payment therefor, he need not resort to a mandamus to compel its issue when wrongfully withheld, but may, without a license, pursue the business of his calling, which is not unlawful in itself, and which he has a constitutional right to prosecute.
Idem, 735
4. A practising lawyer in Virginia has the right to pay his license tax in the coupons of bonds issued by the State, and the proper officer may be compelled by mandamus to receive coupons tendered to him for verification under the Act of January 4, 1882.
Sands v. Edmunds, 739

LIEN.

SEE BONDS, 3, 6, 9.
RAILROADS, 3, 4.

LIMITATIONS.

SEE APPEAL AND ERROR, 84.
BANKRUPTCY, 4.
DUTIES, 4.
JURISDICTION, 20, 24.
LANDS, 33.
TAXES, 19.

1. The Act of Congress of June 11, 1864, concerning limitations of actions, applies to causes and proceedings in the courts of the States as well as to those in the courts of the United States.
Mayfield v. Richards, 334
2. When a trust is repudiated by clear and unequivocal words and acts of the trustee, with the knowledge of the beneficiary, the general rule that the Statute of Limitations does not run against an express trust, does not apply.
Philippi v. Philippe, 336
3. The Supreme Court of Alabama has sustained the general rule that, in the absence of a statute of limitations, if twenty years are allowed to elapse without the commencement of proceedings or the recognition or admission of the trust, a presumption of settlement arises.
Idem, 336
4. A promise to render an account of partnership and trust affairs and make a final settlement of the same, is not an acknowledgment that anything is due. A bill for such settlement which contains no averment that anything is due the complainant, is insufficient.
Idem, 336
5. Under sec. 3 of the Act of July 27, 1868, chap. 276 (15 Stat. 243) now embodied in sec. 1059 R. S., in an action of trover brought against a former secretary of the treasury of the United States, in a court other than the Court of Claims, to recover a sum of money as the value of certain cotton, alleged to have been the private property of the plaintiff, it is held, that, without reference to the question whether the cotton was, in fact, abandoned or captured property within the Act of 1863, the fact that it was taken as being such, under such claim, made in good faith, was a bar to the action, under the Act of 1868, and sec. 1059 of the Revised Statutes.
Lamar v. McCulloch, 360
6. The Mississippi Code of 1871, sec. 2173, by which any action to recover property, because of the invalidity of an administrator's sale by order of a probate court, must be brought within one year, does not apply to an action brought by the heir to recover land bid off by a creditor at such a sale for the payment of his debt, not otherwise paid for than by giving the administrator a receipt for the amount of the bid.
Clay v. Field, 375
7. Under the Civil Code of Louisiana, a widow is not liable in solido with the surviving partners for the payment of a note made by the firm of which her husband was a member; and payments made on the note by the surviving partner cannot be given in evidence to show interruption of prescription running in her favor.
Henderson v. Wadsworth, 377
8. Where fraud is the foundation of the action, the limitation of two years under the Bankrupt Act, does not begin to run, in the absence of negligence or laches of the plaintiff, until the discovery of the fraud.
Traer v. Clews, 467
9. The repeal of a statute of limitations does not deprive a debtor in whose favor it had become a defense, of his property without due process of law in violation of the provisions of the Fourteenth Amendment.
Campbell v. Holt, 483
10. There is a distinction between the effect of statutes of limitations in vesting rights to real and personal property, and their operation as a defense to contracts.
Idem, 483
11. A bill in equity to enjoin a judgment, obtained in an action at law on a mere legal title, is a continuation of that suit.
Webb v. Barnwall, 595
12. Such a bill against an assignee in bankruptcy, may be filed within the time limited by sec. 5057, R. S., after the complainant has been evicted, or his title held insufficient, where he was in possession under what he supposed to be a good title.
Idem, 595

MANDAMUS.

SEE BONDS, 15.
COSTS, 3.
EQUITY, 3.
LICENSE, 3, 4.
TAXES, 6.

1. A writ of mandamus does not lie to compel the judge of an inferior court to authorise the withdrawal of money from the registry of the court where said court has expressly adjudged that the litigation is not ended.
Ex parte Hughes, 134
2. Mandamus lies to require an inferior court to decide a matter within its jurisdiction, but not to control the decision.
Ex parte Morgan, 135
3. The judgment of an inferior court upon a motion to amend its original judgment in a cause cannot be reviewed by mandamus.
Idem, 135
4. Mandamus to compel officers of the State of Virginia to receive coupons in the payment of taxes does not lie.
Moore v. Greenhow, 240
5. Upon a petition for a mandamus to compel the levy of a tax for the payment of a judgment against a county, the answer stated that the proceeds of the maximum levy allowed by law were insufficient to meet the ordinary current expenses of the county government. It is held upon general demurrer to the answer, that the petitioners are not entitled to the writ.
Clay Co. v. McAleer, 482
6. Mandamus lies to compel a court to take jurisdiction in a proper case, but not to control its discretion.
Ex parte Brown, 676
7. In matters which require the exercise of judgment and consideration by an executive officer of the government, or which are dependent upon his discretion, no rule to control his action will issue.
U. S. ex rel. Carrick v. Lamar, 677
8. Whether Arsenal Island, situated in the Mississippi River opposite St. Louis, is open to preemption and settlement, and should therefore be surveyed, is a matter of doubt and within executive judgment or discretion.

Idem, 677

MASTER AND SERVANT.

SEE NEGLIGENCE, 5.

1. A person who hires a public hack and gives the driver directions as to the place to which he wishes to be conveyed, but exercises no other control over the conduct of the driver, is not responsible for his acts or negligence, or prevented from recovering against a railroad company for injuries suffered from a collision of its train with the hack, caused by the negligence of both the managers of the train and of the driver.
Little v. Hackett, 652

2. Where fellow servants are engaged in a common employment, each, in undertaking the service, assumes the risk that the others may fail in that care and vigilance which are essential to his safety.
Northern Pac. R. R. Co. v. Herbert, 755

3. It is the duty of the employer to select and retain servants who are fitted and competent for the service, and to furnish sufficient and safe materials, machinery or other means, by which it is to be performed and to keep them in repair and order. No duty required of him for the safety and protection of his servants can be transferred so as to exonerate him from liability. This rule is not changed by the Dakota Code.
Idem, 755

4. The liability of the employer is the same whether he totally fails to provide persons to perform a duty he owes to his servants, or provides persons who are incompetent and unskillful.
Idem, 755

5. The rule of law as to contributory negligence applied to the facts of a particular case.
Idem, 755

MILITIA.

SEE STATES.

MINES.

SEE CONTRACTS, 6.
LANDS, 21.
PARTNERSHIP, 1, 2.

1. A mining claim which includes more than 200 feet, and does not affect rights already acquired, is void only as to the excess.
Richmond Mining Co. v. Rose, 273

2. The right of a locator to hold more than 200 feet additional as discoverer will be sustained after five years, though there was a mistake as to his discovery of a new vein or lode.
Idem, 273

3. The locator of a mining claim who does not interpose an adverse claim in proceedings instituted by another to obtain a patent for a claim including part of his claim, thereby waives his rights and loses the benefit of his location.
Gwillim v. Donnellan, 348

4. In proceedings to obtain a patent for a mining claim, where an adverse claim is not interposed, the United States may assume that no such claim exists, and the holder thereof is barred.
Idem, 348

5. No title from the United States to land known at the time of sale to be valuable for its minerals of gold, silver, cinnabar or copper can be obtained under the preemption or homestead laws, or the town site laws, or in any other way than as prescribed by the laws specially authorizing the sale of such lands, except in the States of Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Missouri and Kansas.
Deffeback v. Hawke, 423

6. A certificate of purchase of mineral land upon an entry of the same by a claimant at the local land office, if no adverse claim is filed, and the entry is not canceled or disaffirmed by the Land Department, passes the right of the government to him, and as against the acquisition of title by any other party, is equivalent to a patent. The land thereby ceases to be the subject of sale by the government, which thereafter holds the legal title in trust for the holder of the certificate.
Idem, 423

7. The officers of the land department have no authority to insert in a patent any other terms than those of conveyance, with recitals showing a compliance with the law. The patent of a placer mining claim carries with it the title to the surface included within the lines of the mining location.
Idem, 423

8. There can be no color of title in an occupant of land, who does not hold under an instrument or proceeding, or law purporting to transfer the title or to give the right of possession. Nor can good faith be affirmed of a party in holding adversely, where he knows that he has no title and that under the law he can acquire none. So held where, in an action of ejectment for known mineral land by the holder of a patent of the United States, the occupant set up a claim to improvements made thereon under a statute of Dakota.
Idem, 423

9. It would seem that there may be an entry of a town site, even though within its limits mineral lands are found, the entry and the patent being inoperative as to all lands known at the time to be valuable for its minerals, or discovered to be such before their occupation and improvement for residences or business under the town site title.
Idem, 423

10. Discovery and appropriation are the source of title to mining claims, and development by working is the condition of continued possession.
O'Reilly v. Campbell, 669

11. The location of a vein or lode as running in a certain direction, not marked or developed for years, but simply indicated by a notice, is invalid as against a claim subsequently located on ground different from that indicated, after the development of the latter claim without objection, though subsequent explorations by the first locators disclose the fact that their vein in its true course covers the subsequent claim.
Idem, 669

12. Section 2322, R. S., gives to the owner of a mineral vein or lode the right to follow it when it passes outside of the surface lines extended vertically. But this right is dependent, outside of the lateral limits of the claim, upon the vein outside being identical with and a continuation of the one inside those lines.
Iron Silver Mining Co. v. Cheesman, 712

13. The Acts of Congress use the words "vein, lode," or "ledge" as embracing a more or less continuous body of mineral, lying within a well defined boundary of other rock, in the mass within which it is found.
Idem, 712

14. A vein is by no means always a straight line, or of uniform dip or thickness, or richness of mineral matter, throughout its course. But if the mineral disappears, or the fissure with its walls of the same rock disappears, so that its identity can no longer be traced, the right to pursue it outside of the perpendicular lines of claimant's survey is gone.
Idem, 712

15. Whether any deposit of mineral matter, about which a contest arises before a court or jury, has been shown to belong to one of these veins within a prior location, is a question to be decided by the application of these principles to all the evidence in the case.
Idem, 712

16. In procuring a patent for a placer mining claim under sec. 2333, R. S., where the claimant is also in possession of a lode or vein included within the same boundaries, the patent shall cover both, if he makes this known and pays the amounts required by law.
Reynolds v. Iron Silver Mining Co. 774

17. Where no such vein or lode is known to exist, the patent for a placer claim shall carry all such veins or lodes within its boundaries which may be afterwards found to exist under its surface.
Idem, 774

18. But where a vein or lode is so known to exist, and is not in claimant's possession, and not mentioned in the claim on which the patent issues, the title to it does not pass to the patentee.
Idem, 774

19. Where the title thus remains in the United States, the patentee and those claiming under him can dispossess no one who is in peaceable possession of such vein or lode whether with or without title.
Idem, 774

MISTAKE.

SEE APPEAL AND ERROR, 6.
MINES, 2.
PARTNERSHIP, 3.
PATENT-RIGHTS, 35.

MORTGAGES.

SEE APPEAL AND ERROR, 30.
BANKRUPTCY, 12.
CORPORATIONS, 4.
DEED.
INJUNCTIONS, 3.
LANDS, 35.
RAILROADS, 6, 30, 34.
REMOVAL OF CAUSES, 22.
TAXES, 2.
TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES, 5.

1. In a suit to foreclose a mortgage on land in Louisiana, given to secure the payment of negotiable promissory notes to their holder, it was held on the facts, that the plaintiff was never the owner of the notes, as against the mortgagor, or those holding the land under him by deeds in which they assumed the payment of the notes and mortgage.
Weaver v. Field, 143

2. The authority to mortgage the franchises of a railroad company necessarily implies the power to bring the franchises so mortgaged to sale, and to transfer them with the corporeal property of the company to the purchaser.
N. O., S. F. & L. R. Co. v. Delamore, 244

3. Where the franchises of a railroad corporation essential to the use of its road, and other tangible property, can, by law, be mortgaged to secure its debts, the surrender of its property, upon the bankruptcy of the company, carries the franchises, and they may be sold at the bankruptcy sale.
Idem, 244

4. Under the decisions of the Supreme Court of Arkansas, to bar a suit to foreclose a mortgage there must not only be an adverse possession for such a length of time as would bar an action of ejectment, but there must be an open and notorious denial of the mortgagee's title.
Smith v. Woolfolk, 357

5. Under a deed of trust, covering land in the District of Columbia, made by a debtor to two grantees, their heirs and assigns, to secure the payment of a promissory note with power, on default, to sell the land at public auction "on such terms and conditions, and at such time and place, and after such previous public advertisement" as they should deem advantageous and proper, and to convey the same in fee simple to the purchaser, a sale was had by public auction, under a notice of sale, signed by both of the trustees, and duly published in a newspaper, but at the sale only one of the trustees was present. Held that the absence from the sale of one of the trustees, was not a sufficient reason, of itself, for setting aside the sale, as against the former owner of the land.
Smith v. Black, 398

6. The creditor was the purchaser at the sale, and it was held that there was nothing shown which disqualified him from becoming such purchaser.
Idem, 398

7. Alleged inadequacy of price considered, and the sale upheld as against the allegation.
Idem, 398

8. The purchaser, at the time he took the deed from the trustees, settled with one of them, on the basis of a purchase for cash, although the terms of sale provided for a credit, and, as holder of the note secured, credited on it the amount of the net proceeds of the sale, leaving a sum still due on the note; held, that no right of the former owner of the land was violated.
Idem, 398

9. Under the laws of Pennsylvania, upon a sale under foreclosure proceedings, the judgment debtor is a party and is bound by the confirmation as by a judicial decree.
Gibson v. Lyon, 440

10. The purchaser of lands sold by the Orphans' Court of Philadelphia, subject to a mortage, is estopped from denying the authority of the court to sell such lands except clear and discharged of all liens.
Idem, 440

11. A mortgagee is not bound to accept a tender by a stranger of the amount due on account of the mortgage and make an assignment thereof.
Idem, 440

12. An agreement merely to take land, subject to a specified incumbrance, is not an agreement to assume and pay the incumbrance.
Shepherd v. May, 456

13. In the absence of the mutual agreement of the grantor, grantee, and holder of the incumbrance to that effect, the relation of principal and surety does not exist between the grantee and grantor, and the latter is not discharged from his liability by an agreement between the other parties to extend the time of payment.
Idem, 456

14. A clause in a trust deed prescribing that the terms of sale should be the amount due on the note, and the expenses of sale, in cash, does not estop the holder from denying payment in full.
Idem, 456

15. The words "all other property" in the mortgage executed by the Alabama and Chattanooga Railroad Company on March 2, 1870, in favor of the State of Alabama, to secure it for a loan of its credit to said company, do not operate to include within the mortgage all of the lands belonging to the company not specifically described.
Alabama v. Montague, 1000

16. A owned in fee an undivided one third in a certain lot and a life estate in the remaining two thirds, of which his two daughters owned the remainder. The three mortgaged the lot for $20,000. For the purpose of partition, the daughters conveyed to their father's appointee the south one third in fee, and the father conveyed to the daughters as tenants in common the remainder in the north two thirds. On payment of $10,000 the mortgagee released the south third. A building was erected on the north two thirds and insured for $15,000, payable in case of loss to the mortgagee to be credited on the mortgage. The entire business was conducted by A who collected and used the rents. The building was totally destroyed by fire and the $15,000 paid to the mortgagee. By contract between A and the mortgagee, of which the daughters had no knowledge, it was provided that the $15,000 should be used in rebuilding, the funds to be deposited in a bank and paid out on the joint order of the mortgagee or his agent and A on certain conditions. The money was so deposited, but none of it was ever paid out on checks signed by the mortgagee or his agent and none of it was used in rebuilding and no building was erected on the lot. In an action to foreclose the mortgage, held: (1) that the policy of insurance was a collateral security for the joint debt and the mortgagee, having received the proceeds, could not surrender them to A or divert them from the purpose to which they had been devoted by the mortgagors without the consent of the daughters; (2) that if the money could be devoted to rebuilding the mortgagee was bound to see that it was so applied and, as to the daughters, was responsible for its diversion: (3) that the whole indebtedness was a lien on A's estate; that the $15,000 was to be credited to the daughters; that the excess of the indebtedness over the $15,000 was a lien on the daughters' estate; that the proceeds of A's estate were to be first applied on the indebtedness for which there was no other security; and that none of them were to be applied to taxes and costs until the debt for which they were the sole security was entirely discharged.
Conn. Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Scammon, 1007

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.

SEE BONDS, passim.
EQUITY, 1, 8.
MANDAMUS, 5.
REMOVAL OF CAUSES, 12, 21.
STATE LAWS AND DECISIONS, 6, 9.
STREETS, passim.
TAXES, 5.

In an action of ejectment brought to recover the possession of lands sold for nonpayment of taxes levied generally to defray the expenses of opening Montgomery Avenue, in San Francisco, under the Act of the Legislature of California of April 1, 1872, the landowner may show that the petition for the opening presented to the mayor, although acted on by him, the Board of Public Works and the County Court was not signed by the owners of the requisite amount of frontage.
Zeigler v. Hopkins, 1019

NAVIGATION.

The Healy Slough is not a navigable stream at the point where it is crossed by the bridge maintained by the Chicago & Alton Railroad Company.
Healy v. Joliet & Chi. R. R. Co. 607

NAVY.

SEE PROHIBITION, passim.

1. Under the Act of June 16, 1862, if a naval officer is delayed in his promotion because he has not been examined owing to absence on duty, he is entitled when promoted to the increased pay of the new grade from the time when his examination should have taken place.
Hunt v. United States, 674

2. Under the law and regulations, though a first assistant engineer becomes eligible to examination and promotion when he has served two years at sea, he is not entitled to examination until his turn for promotion has arrived or nearly so.
Idem, 674

3. Cadet engineers who had finished their course at the Naval Academy and received their diplomas prior to the passage of the Act of August 5, 1882, became graduates and were not made naval cadets by that Act.
United States v. Redgrave, 697

4. The provision of said Act limiting the number of appointments and providing for the discharge of surplus graduates applied only to those graduating after 1882.
Idem, 697

5. A cadet engineer, a graduate of the Naval Academy in 1881, is an officer within the meaning of sec. 1229, R. S., and he cannot be discharged at will by the Secretary of the Navy.
United States v. Perkins, 700

6. When Congress, by law, vests the appointment of inferior officers in the heads of departments it may limit and restrict the power of removal as it deems best for the public interest.
Idem, 700

NEGLIGENCE.

SEE MASTER AND SERVANT, passim.
SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE.

1. When the facts found furnish conclusive proof of negligence, it may be regarded as properly found amongst the conclusions of law as a legal inference from those facts.
Steamship Belgenland v. Jensen, 152

2. The mere failure of a steam ferry company to provide a seat for a passenger on its boat is not of itself proof of negligence.
Burton v. West Jersey Ferry Co., 215

3. Where a person approaching a railroad crossing with which he was familiar, could have seen a coming train, within a distance of 70 rods from the crossing, from any point within 600 feet from the crossing, and was struck by the train at the crossing and injured, he was guilty of contributory negligence, even though the train was not a regular one, and was running at a high rate of speed, and did not stop at a depot 70 rods from the crossing in the direction from which the train came, and did not blow a whistle or ring a bell between the depot and the crossing.
Schofield v. C. M. & St. P. R. Co., 224

4. On these facts it was proper for the trial court to direct a verdict for the defendant.
Idem, 224

5. In an action brought against the District of Columbia by a laborer to recover damages from an injury caused by the falling of a gravel bank, it is held by this court that different parts of the instructions of the court below were inconsistent, and that it was error to instruct the jury that, in determining the question of contributory negligence they need only inquire whether the plaintiff continued at his work longer than was reasonably sufficient to enable the supervisor to provide some one to watch the bank.
District of Columbia v. McElligott, 946

6. The questions whether the District of Columbia is liable for the negligence of its supervisor resulting in the personal injury of those who labor under his direction on public works, and whether such supervisor and laborers are fellow servants, are not decided.
Idem, 946

NEW TRIAL.

1. The exaction, as a condition of refusing a new trial, that the plaintiff should remit a portion of the damages awarded him by the verdict of the jury, is within the discretion of the trial court.
Northern Pac. R. R. Co. v. Herbert, 755

NOTES (Editorial) INDEX TO

APPEAL AND ERROR.
Final judgment; what is.
Johnson v. Keith, 888

BANKRUPTCY.
Validity of state laws.
Tua v. Carriere, 855

BANKS AND BANKING.
Liability for general deposit.
Leather Mfrs. Bk. v. Morgan, 811

BILLS AND NOTES.
Parol evidence as to; as to consideration; defenses.
Burnes v. Scott, 991

BONDS.
See Jurisdiction.
Recitals; effect of; unauthorized issue; validating Act.
Hayes v. Holly Springs, 81
Municipal; recitals; estoppel; overissue.
Daviess Co. v. Dickenson, 1026
Municipal; action on; jurisdiction of circuit court; Act of 1875; estoppel.
New Providence v. Halsey, 904

CHAMPERTY AND MAINTENANCE.
Burnes v. Scott, 991

CONFEDERATE NOTES.
Contracts made payable in; validity; tender; discharge.
Glasgow v. Lipse, 901

CONSTITUTIONAL LAW.
Validity of state bankrupt laws.
Tua v. Carriere, 855
Commerce; regulation of; power of Congress and State.
Pickard v. Pullman Southern Car Co., 785
Interstate commerce; regulation of; power of Congress; how far exclusive.
Gloucester Ferry Co v. Pa., 158
Impairing obligation of contracts.
Amy v. Taxing District, 172
"Due process of law."
Wurts v. Hoagland, 229

CONTRACT.
Made payable in confederate notes; tender; discharge.
Glasgow v. Lipse, 901
Applicability of parol evidence to written contracts.
Burnes v. Scott, 991
Laws impairing obligation of.
Amy v. Taxing District, 172

CORPORATIONS.
Power to mortgage franchises.
Chesapeake & O. Railway Co. v. Miller, 121
Exemption from taxes by charter.
Tennessee v. Whitworth, 830, 833

COURTS.
See Jurisdiction; Mandamus; Removal of Cause.

DECEIT.
What necessary to sustain.
Ming v. Woolfolk, 740
Marshall v. Hubbard, 919

ESTOPPEL.
Recitals in municipal bonds.
Daviess Co. v. Dickenson, 1026
Action on municipal bonds.
New Providence v. Halsey, 904

EVIDENCE.
Parol; applicability to written contracts.
Burnes v. Scott, 991
Parol; as to bills and notes; consideration.
Idem, 991
Declarations of vendor of chattels; admissibility against vendee.
Jones v. Simpson, 742

GUARANTY.
Notice of acceptance; when necessary.
Davis S. M. Co. v. Richards, 489

HABEAS CORPUS.
Jurisdiction; what considered.
Ex parte Royall, 868
HUSBAND AND WIFE.
Wife's separate property; how charged.
Dodge v. Knowles, 144
INSURANCE.
Breach of conditions by third parties; when policy invalidated.
L. & L. & G. Ins. Co. v. Gunther, 575
Life; false statements inserted by agent in application.
N. Y. Life Ins. Co. v. Fletcher, 934
JURISDICTION.
See Removal of Cause.
Of Supreme Court; amount in controversy.
Ex parte Phœnix Ins. Co., 923
Bruce v. Manchester & K. R. R. Co., 990
Of circuit court in action on municipal bond; Act of 1875.
New Providence v. Halsey, 904
Collusive transfers of municipal bonds and coupons.
Farmington v. Pillsbury, 114
On habeas corpus.
Ex parte Royall, 868
Review of federal questions arising in state courts.
Detroit City R. Co. v. Guthard, 118
MANDAMUS.
Control of inferior courts; discretion.
Ex parte Morgan, 135
MASTER AND SERVANT.
Negligence of fellow servant; who are fellow servants.
Northern Pacific R. R. Co. v. Herbert, 755
MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.
See Jurisdiction.
Bonds; recitals; estoppel; overissue.
Daviess Co. v. Dickenson, 1026
Bonds; action on; jurisdiction of circuit court; Act of 1875; estoppel.
New Providence v. Halsey, 904
PATENTS.
Patentability.
Thompson v. Boisselier, 76
PRINCIPAL AND AGENT.
See Usury.
RELIGIOUS SOCIETIES.
Exemption from taxation.
Gibbons v. District of Columbia, 680
REMOVAL OF CAUSE.
On ground of citizenship; Act of 1875.
Smith v. Akers, 888
Local prejudice.
Jefferson v. Driver, 897
Separable controversies.
Core v. Vinal, 912
Fidelity Ins. etc. Co. v. Huntington, 898
Rand v. Walker, 907
What are separable controversies.
Sloane v. Anderson, 899
By one of two or more defendants.
Idem, 899
SALE.
Judicial; inadequacy of price; setting aside for.
Graffam v. Burgess, 839
Warranty; breach; rescission; absence of fraud; vendee's remedy.
Pope v. Allis, 393
Declarations of vendor of chattels; admissibility against vendee.
Jones v. Simpson, 749
STATUTES.
See Constitutional Law.
TAXES.
Exemption of corporation by charter.
Tennessee v. Whitworth, 830, 833
Exemption of church property.
Gibbons v. District of Columbia, 680
TRIAL.
Verdict; when directed by court.
Marshall v. Hubbard, 915
USURY.
Acts of lender's agent; when transaction usurious.
Call v. Palmer, 550

OFFICERS.

SEE ACTIONS, 2.
CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 16, 18, 19, 21.
EQUITY, 3, 4.
MANDAMUS, 4, 7, 8.
NAVY, passim.
PATENT-RIGHTS, 14, 15.
PENALTIES, 2.
RAILROADS, 5.
TAXES, 13.

An officer of the army, dismissed from the service during the recent civil war by order of the President, could not be restored to his position merely by a subsequent revocation of that order. The vacancy so created could only be filled by a new appointment.
United States v. Corson, 254

PARTIES.

SEE APPEAL AND ERROR, 39, 41.
BANKRUPTCY, 9.
CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 74, 75.
CORPORATIONS, 3.
EVIDENCE, 20.
FINES.
PLEADINGS, 9.
PROHIBITION, 7.
REMOVAL OF CAUSES, passim.
REPLEVIN, 1.

1. Where a bill has been filed on behalf of the complainants and all other creditors, the court may incidentally decree in favor of all other creditors who come in under the bill.
Stewart v. Dunham, 329

2. In a suit for the assignment of dower in lots, the legal title to which is in one defendant for the joint use of himself and another defendant, these two defendants being in joint possession and the prayer of the bill being against both for damages as well as for assignment of dower, both are necessary parties.
Rand v. Walker, 907

PARTNERSHIP.

SEE ATTACHMENT, 2.
EVIDENCE, 30.
INSURANCE, 10, 11.
LIMITATIONS, 7.
REMOVAL OF CAUSES, 41.
WITNESSES.

1. There is no relation of trust or confidence between mining partners which is violated by the sale and assignment by one partner to a stranger, or to one of the associates, of his share in the property and business.
Bissell v. Foss, 126

2. A mining partner is not entitled to share in a purchase by his copartners of the share of another in the absence of an express contract.
Idem, 126

3. Certain members of a copartnership agreed to pay a retiring member a fixed amount as his capital, all erroneously believing the firm to be solvent. The new firm borrowed on its own notes and applied the proceeds in payment of part of the capital so agreed upon, and of some of the debts of the old firm. Upon the failure of the new firm the holders of its notes cannot charge the old firm or the retiring partner with the money loaned.
Penn Nat. Bk. v. Furness, 168

4. Fraudulent misrepresentations of fact by a partner to the injury of innocent persons dealing with him, as representing the firm, and without notice of any limitations upon his general authority as agent for the partnership, bind his partners; especially where the firm appropriates the fruits of the fraudulent conduct of such partner.
Strang v. Bradner, 248

5. Where three persons form a partnership and agree to bear the losses and share the profits in proportion to their contribution to the capital, and two of the partners furnish all of the capital, and do all of the work, they are entitled to be repaid their advances out of the partnership assets before payment of the individual creditors of the other partner.

Hobbs v. McLean, 940

6. Where a person in anticipation of obtaining a government contract forms a partnership with two other parties for the execution of the contract, when it shall have been obtained, such contract of partnership is not, under the circumstances of the case, void, as a violation of either secs. 3477, 3737, R. S.
Idem, 940

7. Where two of three partners are entitled under the articles of partnership to a sum due from the government on a contract with the third partner, an agreement executed by such third partner to pay the sum due to each out of moneys he might thereafter receive from the government does not, as against the assignee in bankruptcy of such third partner, deprive the other partners of their right to the funds paid by the government.
Idem, 940

8. The right of action for the recovery by two of three partners, as assets of the firm, of moneys collected on a contract (the subject of the partnership), between the third partner and the government, does not accrue until the moneys have actually been paid over by the government to the defendant. The bankruptcy and death of the third partner and the substitution of his assignee in bankruptcy as defendant in no respect affects this question.
Idem, 940

PATENT RIGHTS.

SEE COSTS, 6.
PRACTICE, 3.

1. A combination is patentable only when the several elements of which it is composed produce by their joint action a new and useful result, or an old result in a cheaper or otherwise more advantageous way.
Stephenson v. Brooklyn Cross-Town R. R. Co. 58

2. Letters patent No. 186369, for improvements in time-locks in which the patented combination includes a bolt turning on an axis, is not infringed by a structure in which the combination lock has not a turning or revolving bolt.
Sargent v. Hall Safe & Lock Co., 67

3. In patents for combinations of mechanism, limitations and provisos imposed by the inventor, especially such as were introduced into an application after it had been persistently rejected, must be strictly construed against the inventor.
Idem, 67

4. To be patentable, a thing must not only be new and useful, but must amount to invention or discovery.
Thompson v. Boisselier, 76

5. The third claim of reissued letters patent No. 978, for "improvements in water closets," construed, and the state of the art set forth.
Idem, 76

6. Under the recent decisions of this court said claim does not involve a patentable invention, or it is not infringed.
Idem, 76

7. The first claim of letters patent, No. 21734, for an "improved water closet," namely a drip box "arranged upon the top of or over the trunk," must, in view of the state of the art, be limited to a drip box arranged above or on top of the closet, and is not infringed by a drip box near the top.
Idem, 76

8. To constitute identity of invention, and therefore infringement, not only must the result obtained be the same, but in case of a combination of known elements, the elements combined must be the same, and combined in the same way, so that each element shall perform the same function, provided, however, that the differences alleged are not merely colorable, according to the rule forbidding the use of known equivalents.
Electric R. R. Signal Co. v. Hall R. Signal Co., 96

9. In letters patent, No. 140536, for an improvement in circuits for Electric Railroad Signals, insulated sections of the rails, as circuit closers, constitute an essential element in the combination described, and said patent is not infringed by the use of a separate instrument used as a circuit closer placed near the track and depressed by the wheels of passing trains.
Idem, 96

10. A patent of a combination to operate signals at many stations along the line of a railroad, with one battery by a metallic circuit divisible into a number of subsidiary circuits of unequal size and resistance, and requiring the equalization of the resistances by means of independent and additional devices, is not infringed by a combination for the same purpose, which avoids the necessity of subsequent rectification by an original adjustment of equal resistances, and uses the earth as the return part of the circuit.
Idem, 96

11. Letters patent, No. 140536, is not infringed by the device covered by letters patent, No. 165170, granted July 13, 1875, to Hall & Snow.
Idem, 96

12. Where the defendant has used the complainant's patented machine he will be held accountable for the profits realized thereby, although it appears that the product was an article of merchandise and for sale at a less sum than said profits.
Thomson v. Wooster, 105

13. Section 739, R. S., providing that no civil suit shall be brought before the United States courts against an inhabitant of the United States in any other district than that in which he is an inhabitant, or in which he may be found, applies to suits brought under sec. 4915, concerning the issue of patents.
Butterworth v. Hill, 119

14. The official residence of the Commissioner of Patents is at Washington.
Idem, 119

15. The written acceptance at Washington of the Commissioner of Patents of the service of a subpœna issued by a district court situated elsewhere, "to have the same effect as if duly served by a proper officer," merely admits the service with the same effect it would have if made by an officer in the District of Columbia. No appearance is thereby entered in the cause.
Idem, 119

16. A letter written by the Commissioner at Washington acknowledging the receipt of the bill, returning the subpœna, "service accepted," and stating that he declines to appear, does not amount to a waiver of the objection to the jurisdiction.
Idem, 119

17. Only nominal damages should be allowed where no profits have been made by the defendant.
Dobson v. Hartford Carpet Co., 177

18. Where a bill founded on a design patent with a claim for a pattern and separate claims for each of its parts, is taken as confessed, it alleging infringement of the "invention," the patent will be held valid for the purposes of the suit.
Idem, 177

19. A claim of "the design for a carpet substantially as shown" refers to the description and the drawing, and is valid.
Idem, 177

20. An objection that a patent for a design is for an aggregation of old ornaments, and embodies no "invention," is concluded where the bill alleging infringement of the "invention" is taken as confessed.
Idem, 177

21. Where the master reported no profits, and nominal damages, in a suit in equity for the infringement of a patent for a design, and on exception by the plaintiff, the Circuit Court allowed a sum for damages, and this court reversed its decree, the plaintiff was allowed costs in the Circuit Court to and including the interlocutory decree, and the defendant was allowed his costs after such decree.
Idem, 177

22. Reissued letters patent, No. 6954, for the process of compressing the coating used in the insulation of telegraph wires, is void, having been substantially anticipated by the process described in certain English patents.
West. Elec. Mfg. Co. v. Ansonia Brass and Copper Co., 210

23. Reissued letters patent, No. 6954, for a process, being invalid, it follows that reissued letters patent, No. 6955, for the product, is also invalid.
Idem, 210

24. The scope of letters patent should be limited to the invention covered by the claim, which cannot be enlarged by the language in other parts of the specification.
Idem, 210

25. Under sec. 4888, R. S., an element of an invention not described in the specification is not covered by the patent.
West. Elec. Mfg. Co. v. Ansonia Brass, etc., Co. 210
26. The use in succession of two distinct pairs of dies of well known kinds, not combined in one machine nor co-operating to one result, but each pair doing by itself its own work, is not a patentable invention.
Beecher Mfg. Co. v. Atwater Mfg. Co., 232
27. Letters patent, No. 66130, granted to James B. Clark, June 25, 1867, for an "improvement in the manufacture of blanks for carriage thill shackles," are not infringed by the manufacture of blanks for shackles in accordance with letters patent, No. 106225, granted to Willis B. Smith, August 9, 1870.
Clark v. Beecher Mfg. Co., 352
28. In the construction of letters patent reference will be made to the existing state of the art at the time of the invention.
Wollensak v. Reiher, 355
29. Reissued letters patent, No. 9307, original patent No. 136801, limited to the combination claimed.
Idem, 355
30. A patentee who has claimed less than that to which he is entitled, is bound to discover the defect within a reasonable time or he loses his right to a reissue. Idem, 355
31. Where it appears from the bill that the sole object of the reissue was to enlarge and expand the claims of the original patent, and that a delay of two or more years has taken place in applying for the reissue, not explained by special circumstances showing it to be reasonable, a general demurrer lies to the bill for want of equity.
Idem, 355
32. The decision of the Patent Office as to the reasonableness of the delay is not conclusive.
Idem, 355
33. The delay being prima facie unlawful, it is incumbent on the party seeking to establish the jurisdiction of the Patent Office to grant the reissue to show the facts on which it rests.
Idem, 355
34. In view of the state of the art, the only invention covered by letters patent, No. 142154, consists in the particular organization of the machine described.
Eachus v. Broomall, 419
35. In the absence of an error arising from inadvertence, accident, or mistake, a patent for a machine will not sustain a reissue for a process.
Idem, 419
36. The application of an old process or machine to a similar or analogous subject, with no change in the manner of applying it and no result substantially distinct in its nature, will not sustain a patent, even if the new form of result has not before been contemplated.
Miller v. Foree, 552
37. Letters patent, No. 185119, and reissue thereof, No. 8060, are invalid, as the evidence shows that the invention was anticipated. And, independent of this, the state of the art at the time of the application for the patent was such as to leave no ground for its issue.
Idem, 552
38. Letters patent, No. 155077, for an improvement in glove fastenings, is not infringed by a spring fastening which acts in a different manner.
Field v. De Comeau, 596
39. Where a lever or its equivalent as a mechanical instrument is made an essential element of a claim in a patent, the use of the human hand instead is not the use of an equivalent.
Brown v. Davis, 659
40. Reissued letters patent, No. 8589, for an improvement in grain drills construed and limited, and held not to be infringed by the defendant's machine.
Idem, 659
41. Where an applicant for a patent to cover a new combination is compelled by the rejection of his application by the Patent Office to narrow his claim by the introduction of a new element, he cannot, after the issue of the patent, broaden his claim by dropping such element.
Shepard v. Carrigan, 723
42. In a patent for an improved hose carriage certain elements and their combination being old, the description of the hose reel as "a reel of large diameter to allow the water to pass through the hose when partially wound thereon" is not sufficient to sustain the patent.
Preston v. Manard, 763
43. A variation of eccentricity in the rollers is a material feature of the invention secured by letters patent No. 98622, for an improvement in permutation locks, or is made so by the description and claim, and said patent is not infringed by a lock in which the same combination or an equivalent is not used.
Yale Lock Mfg. Co. v. Sargent, 950
44. The scope of letters patent must be limited to the invention covered by the claim, which may be illustrated but cannot be enlarged by language used in other parts of the specification.
Yale Lock Mfg. Co. v. Greenleaf, 952
45. A change in a mechanical device, which would occur to an unskilled mechanic, is not patentable.
Idem, 952
46. The first claim of reissued letters patent granted to George Rosner, July 25, 1871, for an "improvement in permutation locks" was anticipated, and is, therefore, void.
Idem, 952
47. The first claim of reissued letters patent No. 4696 for an improvement in locks is not an unlawful expansion of the claims of the original patent.
Yale Lock Mfg. Co. v. Sargent, 954
48. A patent for an improvement in locks, held not to be void for want of novelty.
Idem, 954
49. A patent for an improvement in locks, held to be infringed by a competing device.
Idem, 954
50. In an action for infringement of a patent for a "turning bolt device," an improvement in locks, where the complainant had granted no licenses but was himself the manufacturer of his locks, and where the patented device was an essential feature, both of complainant's and the infringing locks, and where the patented device could not be sold except as embodied in a lock, and where the complainant had been compelled to reduce the price of his locks by defendant's competition, the defendant's infringement must be held to have caused the entire loss of complainant by such reduction of price, allowance being made for other causes which gave the defendant an advantage in selling his locks.
Idem, 954
51. The owner of the patent is the proper party to sue for damages for infringement, although he may have a partner engaged with him in the manufacture of the patented article.
Idem, 954
52. Two patents may both be valid when the invention secured by the second is an improvement on that secured by the first, but if the second includes the first, neither grantee can use the invention of the other without his consent; and a stranger who is an infringer of both cannot set up the first patent as an excuse for infringing the second.
Cantrell v. Wallick, 1017
53. Two mechanical devices are identical in the sense of the patent law when they perform substantially the same function in substantially the same way, to obtain the same result.
Idem, 1017
54. Where want of novelty is set up as a defense to a suit for infringement of a patent, the burden of proof is upon the defendant, and he must establish the defense set up beyond a reasonable doubt.
Idem, 1017

PAYMENT.

SEE ACTIONS, 2.
CONFEDERATE NOTES, 4.
CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 16, 18.
EVIDENCE, 5.
HUSBAND AND WIFE, 1.
LICENSE, 3.
MORTGAGES, 14.
PRINCIPAL AND AGENT.
TAXES, 13.

1. The payment by the District of Columbia of certificates of the Auditor of the Board of Public Works to a third person, where they have been indorsed in blank and placed in his hands by the owner, in the absence of want of actual authority to collect them, discharges the debt.
Laughlin v. District of Columbia, 701
2. A letter by the attorney of the owner sent to the Treasurer of the Board of Public Works, merely requesting him not to pay the certificates, was not sufficient to make the district liable.
Idem, 701

PENALTIES.

1. A remission by the Secretary of the Treasury under section 5394, R. S., of penalties incurred by a steam vessel for taking on board an unlawful number of passengers, when applied for before a suit in rem, brought by an informer, is tried, is a bar to the suit.

Pollock v. Bridgeport Steamboat Co., 147
2. The practice of granting remissions of pecuniary penalties and forfeitures, by officers other than the President, sanctioned by statute and acquiescence for nearly a century, is too firmly established to be questioned.
Idem, 147

PENSIONS.

1. The words "total disability" in the pension laws have a technical signification which cannot be disregarded.
Burnett v. United States, 586
2. Under section 4702, R. S., the widow is only entitled to receive the same pension to which her husband would have been entitled for a "total disability," although in fact he had received a larger pension because of a "permanent specific disability."
Idem, 586

PLEADINGS.

SEE EVIDENCE, 6, 7.
JURISDICTION, 23.
PRACTICE, passim.
REMOVAL OF CAUSES, 6, 7.
TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES, 4.

1. An answer which states material facts omitted from the bill, waives any objection to such omission.
Cavender v. Cavender, 212
2. A defendant to a bill, who states in his answer under oath the provisions of a writing, which is presumed to be in his possession, cannot complain that the court acted upon his admission without the production of the writing.
Idem, 212
3. Pleadings must state facts, not conclusions of law.
Alabama v. Burr, 435
4. A demurrer admits all facts well pleaded, but not necessarily all statements of conclusions of law.
Pullman Palace Car Co. v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 499
5. In an action brought in a state court upon a judgment rendered in another State, an allegation as to the legal effect of the judgment in that State is admitted by demurrer.
Hanley v. Donoghue, 535
6. Two alternative claims, each belonging to many persons, one of whom has no interest in one claim, and others of whom have no interest in the other, cannot be joined in one bill in equity.
Stebbins v. Town of St. Anne, 667
7. The denial of the making of a contract lets in the defense of the Statute of Frauds as effectively as if it had been specifically pleaded.
Dunphy v. Ryan, 703
8. In some cases where a matter has not been put in issue with sufficient precision by the bill, or the prayer is not consistent with the case made, a court of equity will permit an amendment at the trial.
Graham v. Burgess, 839
9. The general rules of pleading in regard to admiralty suits in rem apply to suits in rem for a forfeiture brought by the United States after a seizure on land, the Act of June 1, 1872, having made no change in the practice in such cases.
Coffey v. United States (3 Cases), 631, 890

POLYGAMY.

SEE JURIES, 1, 2.
UTAH, passim.

1. Under the Act of March 22, 1882, a man "cohabits" with more than one woman, when, holding out to the world two or more women as his wives, by his language or conduct, or both, he lives in the same house with them, and eats at the table of each a portion of the time, although he may not occupy the same bed, sleep in the same room, or actually have sexual intercourse with either of them.
Cannon v. United States, 561
2. Objections that the indictment does not allege that the defendant is a male person, and does not allege a cohabitation with the women as wives, or as persons held out as wives, cannot be raised after the defendant has pleaded to it, especially as no substantial right was thereby prejudiced.
Idem, 561
3. This court cannot indicate in advance what the conduct of a polygamous husband towards his plural wives must be in order to conform to the requirements of the law.
Idem, 561

POST OFFICE.

SEE UNION PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY.

PRACTICE.

SEE APPEAL AND ERROR, passim, 7-9, 11-14.
BANKS, 3.
COSTS.
EVIDENCE, 25.
HABEAS CORPUS, 12-15.
INSURANCE, 7.
JUDGMENTS AND DECREES, 5. 6.
JURIES, 3.
JURISDICTION, 23, 26-29.
LANDS, 26.
LIMITATIONS, 12.
NEGLIGENCE, 4.
PATENT RIGHTS, 15, 16.
PLEADINGS, passim.
POLYGAMY, 3.
PROHIBITION, 8.
REMOVAL OF CAUSES, passim.

1. A decree pro confesso, under the rules and practice of this court, is not a decree as of course according to the prayer of the bill. It is made by the court, according to what is proper to be decreed upon the statements of the bill, assumed to be true.
Thomson v. Wooster, 105
2. Where a decree is taken pro confesso, the allegations of the bill cannot be questioned in subsequent proceedings in the court below or upon appeal. Anything in the allegations themselves tending to show that the decree is erroneous is assignable for error; but facts not found in the allegations of the bill are inadmissible to affect the decree.
Idem, 105
3. Evidence questioning the validity of the patent is inadmissible in proceedings before a master, or on appeal, after a decree has been taken pro confesso on a bill for infringement and an account.
Idem, 105
4. After a final decree the parties are not bound to take notice of subsequent proceedings unless they are served with process or enter their voluntary appearance.
Smith v. Woolfolk, 357
5. Where a petition, filed subsequent to a decree, institutes a new litigation between parties who were complainants in the original cause, service of process on the parties against whom relief is sought is necessary.
Idem, 357
6. The statutes of Arkansas do not authorize service of process by letter or on the attorney of the party.
Idem, 357
7. A complainant can have a decree against another complainant upon a supplemental or amended bill only upon notice to the latter. No decree can be had by one complainant against another without notice, if at all.
Idem, 357
8. Under the practice of New York, where the answer fairly covered a certain defense, although so indefinitely that greater certainty might have been required, and evidence proper to establish such defense had been admitted without objection, it was improper to instruct the jury not to consider such evidence.
Liverpool & L. & G. Ins. Co. v. Gunther, 575
9. Under the practice authorized by the Code of California, where the agent of a foreign corporation, which is charged with contempt, willfully conceals himself to avoid service of an order to show cause, service may be made upon its attorney of record.
Eureka Lake & Y. Canal Co. v. Superior Ct., 671
10. The general rules of pleading in admiralty suits in rem apply to suits in rem for a forfeiture, brought by the United States, after a seizure on land.
Coffey v. United States, 631
11. In a proceeding kindred to an admiralty proceeding in rem, a plea of former conviction is held to have been put in issue without a reply or replication to the answer, and the issue of fact thus raised is held to have been found against the claimant by the general verdict there having been no demurrer to the answer, or bill of exceptions raising specific questions.

Coffey v. United States, 681
12. Decrees of the Supreme Court already entered, modified in accordance with stipulation of counsel.
"Express Cases," 791
13. Where, giving the defendant the benefit of every inference that could have been fairly drawn from the evidence, it was insufficient to authorize a judgment in his favor, a peremptory instruction for the plaintiff was proper.
Marshall v. Hubbard, 919
14. The Supreme Court of the District of Columbia has not, at a special term, the same discretionary power over its judgments, rendered at a previous term, without any motion or other proceeding to that end made or taken at that term, to set them aside and grant new trials, which it has over judgments when such proceedings are taken during the term at which they were rendered.
Phillips v. Negley, 1013
15. After the term at which judgments were rendered the power of the court over the parties and over the record remains only in certain excepted cases, when on motion it may be purged of clerical errors, or the judgment reversed by proceedings for errors of fact, in analogy to the practice in cases of writs of error coram vobis, unless it be invoked by bill in equity.
Idem, 1013
16. The decisions of the Maryland courts, founded on general principles, rendered since the organization of the District of Columbia, are not binding on the courts of the district as authorities.
Idem, 1013

PRINCIPAL AND AGENT.

SEE BANKS, 2.
EQUITY, 6.
INSURANCE, 5.

Under the circumstances of the case presented the purchaser of the land was not the agent of the other party, and the law implies no promise by the latter to repay the price as for money paid out at his request.
Dunphy v. Ryan, 703

PRINCIPAL AND SURETY.

In the absence of the mutual agreement of the grantor, grantee, and holder of the incumbrance to that effect, the relation of principal and surety does not exist between the grantee and grantor, and the latter is not discharged from his liability by an agreement between the other parties to extend the time of payment.
Shepherd v. May, 456

PROHIBITION.

1. The final judgment of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia on a petition for a writ of prohibition to the Secretary of the Navy and a court martial convened by his order to try a public officer for offenses punishable by dismissal, may be reviewed by this court if the salary of which such officer might be deprived upon conviction exceeds $5,000.
Smith v. Whitney, 601
2. Whether the court below should grant or refuse a writ of prohibition, is not a matter of discretion when the court whose action is sought to be prohibited is clearly without jurisdiction, and the defendant objected to its jurisdiction at the outset and is without other remedy, and a refusal to grant it, where all of the proceedings appear of record, may be reviewed by this court.
Idem, 601
3. If an officer of the navy, while serving by appointment of the President as chief of a bureau and Paymaster General in the Navy Department, makes unlawful contracts or payments to promote the interests of contractors, he may lawfully be tried and convicted of scandalous conduct tending to the destruction of good morals, and to the dishonor of the naval service, by a court martial composed of naval officers, and a writ of prohibition will not be issued to prevent such trial and conviction.
Idem, 601
4. Where a court martial has jurisdiction of the subject matter of the principal charge, the addition of another charge varying in form, but for the same or similar acts, affords no ground for issuing a writ of prohibition.
Idem, 601
5. A naval court martial may, at any time before its dissolution by the Secretary of the Navy, be reconvened by him to reconsider its proceedings.
Idem, 601
6. A writ of prohibition cannot be made to serve the purpose of a writ of error or certiorari.
Idem, 601
7. Upon an application for a writ of prohibition to a naval court martial, the Secretary of the Navy should not be joined as a party defendant.
Idem, 601
8. It seems that proceedings upon a petition for a writ of prohibition must be considered as on the common-law side of a court having both common law and equity powers.
Idem, 601
9. Whether the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia has power in any case to issue a writ of prohibition to a court martial is not decided.
Idem, 601

PUBLIC LANDS.

SEE LANDS, passim.

RAILROADS.

SEE APPEAL AND ERROR, 30.
BONDS, 1, 8, 9, 13.
CARRIERS, passim.
CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 44, 45, 46, 73.
EQUITY, 6
INDIANS, 2.
JURISDICTION, 14.
LANDS, 6, 20-23, 30-34.
MASTER AND SERVANT, 2-5.
MORTGAGES, 2, 3, 15.
NAVIGATION.
NEGLIGENCE, 3.
PATENTS, 9, 10.
REMOVAL OF CAUSES, 10, 11.
STREETS, 2-4.
TAXES, 1-4, 7-19.

1. A judgment creditor of a railroad company, having a right of way acquired by grants from the owners and by statutory proceedings, levied on such right of way and purchased it at sheriff's sale. He subsequently contracted with another company to complete the road and convey to it all his title to the franchises, right of way and property of the old company. He completed the road and gave possession, though not paid in full, to the corporation, the franchises of which with its interest in the road subsequently passed by foreclosure to a third company, against which the said purchaser brought ejectment. Held, that he could not recover; that the right of way could not be sold to one who did not own the franchise, and that the defendant was not estopped from disputing his right to recover.
East Ala. R. Co. v. Doe, 136
2. The authority of the Kansas Pacific Railway Company to extend its road into Missouri was granted by Congress under its power "to regulate commerce among the several States."
Union Pac. R. Co. v. Myers, 319
3. The statutes of North Carolina giving a lien to mechanics and laborers and regulating sales under mortgages given by corporations, do not give to those performing labor and furnishing materials in the construction of railroads, a lien upon the property and franchises of the corporation owning and operating such roads. Ordinary mechanic's lien laws should not be interpreted as giving a lien upon the roadway, bridges, or other property of a railroad company, that may be essential in the operation and maintenance of its road for the public purpose for which it was established.
Comrs. of Buncombe Co. v. Tommey, 305
4. On petition for rehearing this court adheres to its original opinion that in North Carolina railroads are not subject to ordinary lien laws.
Idem, 305
5. The president of a railroad company is not personally liable for losses alleged to have resulted to the purchasers of its bonds through fraudulent representations contained in circulars of the company signed by him as president.
Van Weel v. Winston, 384
6. Representations contained in circulars issued by a railroad company to advertise a new issue of bonds for the construction of a branch line, are held to have been superseded by the mortgage, given by the company to secure the bonds, in so far as said representations differed from the terms of that instrument.

Idem, 384
7. A provision that the branch line should not exceed fifty miles in length does not require that it should be of that length, especially as the holders of the bonds were also given a second mortgage on the company's main line.
Idem, 384
8. There is no privity or trust relation existing between the president of a railroad company and the purchasers of its bonds. In this case the purchasers obtained in the mortgage the only security for which they contracted. For any improper or fraudulent appropriation of the proceeds of the bonds the president is only liable to the company or its stockholders, unless it be to a judgment creditor, with an execution returned nulla bona.
Idem, 384
9. The Legislature of a State may fix the amount of damages beyond compensation to be awarded to a party injured by the gross negligence of a railroad company to provide suitable fences and guards of its road, or prescribe the limit within which the jury, in assessing such damages, may exercise their discretion. The additional damages are by way of punishment to the company for its negligence; and it is not a valid objection that the sufferer instead of the State receives them.
Mo. P. R. Co. v. Humes, 463
10. The present Missouri Pacific Railway Company was created by the dissolution of several old companies, under the laws of Missouri, and the establishment of the new company to take their place.
Pullman Palace Car Co. v. Missouri Pac. R. Co. 499
11. A contract made by the former Missouri Pacific Company with Pullman's Palace Car Company to use the latter's cars on "its own road, and all roads which it now controls, or may hereafter control, by ownership, lease, or otherwise," during a certain period, is binding on the new company only as to all roads owned or controlled by the former company at the time of the consolidation.
Idem, 499
12. The St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern Railway Company is not controlled by the Missouri Pacific Railway Company within the meaning of the contract, although the controlling interest in the stock of the former company is owned by the latter.
Idem, 499
13. A court of chancery can grant no relief to the Pullman Company based on the nature of its business and its past relations to the St. Louis Company.
Idem, 499
14. A State has power to limit railroad charges for transportation within its own jurisdiction, unless restrained by contract, or the power of Congress, and this power can only be bargained away, if at all, by words of positive grant or their equivalent.
Stone v. Farm. Loan & T. Co., 636
15. The grant of power to the directors of a railroad company to make by-laws, rules and regulations for the management of its affairs, does not exempt it from the operation of laws subsequently enacted, within the scope of legislative power, for the regulation of the business in which it is authorized to engage.
Idem, 636
16. The grant to a railroad company of the power "from time to time to fix, regulate and receive the toll and charges" to be received by it for transportation confers merely the power to fix reasonable charges, leaving the State free, within the limits of its general authority, to declare what shall be deemed reasonable.
Idem, 636
17. The charter of the Mobile & Ohio Railroad Company contains no contract the obligation of which is impaired by the Mississippi statute of March 11, 1884, creating a commission to provide for the regulation of freight and passenger rates, prevent unjust discrimination, and enforce certain police regulations affecting railroad companies doing business in that State.
Idem, 636
18. A railroad company chartered by, and carrying on its business in two or more States, is, for all purposes of local government, a domestic corporation in each State, and, within each State, subject to its laws as to all matters not within the exclusive control of Congress.
Idem, 636
19. The Act in question does not deny to the company the equal protection of the laws, nor deprive it of its property without due process of law, within the meaning of the Fourteenth Amendment.
Idem, 636
20. This court agrees with the Supreme Court of Mississippi that said Act is not repugnant to the Constitution of that State.
Idem, 636
21. This court also holds that said Act is not so inconsistent and uncertain as to be absolutely void upon its face.
Idem, 636
22. The grant of power to the president and directors of a railroad company to establish such rates for transportation as they may deem proper and to change them at pleasure, leaves the State free, within the limits of its general authority, to act as to the reasonableness of such rates.
Stone v. Ill. Cent. R. R. Co., 650
23. A corporation of one State when operating a road in another State as lessee subjects itself, as to that road, to such local legislation as would have been applicable to the lessor had no lease been made.
Idem, 650
24. The provision in the charter of the New Orleans & Northeastern Railroad Company, that in fixing rates there shall be no discrimination in favor of any other road, does not bring into that charter the rate clauses in charters subsequently granted fixing maximum rates so as to exempt said company from the operation of the Railroad Supervision Act of Mississippi.
Stone v. N. O. & N. R. R. Co., 651
25. Where a statute provides that certain property of a railroad corporation shall be exempt from taxation "for ten years after the completion of said road," the time preceding the completion of the road is as distinctly excluded as the time succeeding ten years after its completion.
Vicksburg, S. & P. R. R. Co. v. Dennis, 770
26. An intention to surrender the taxing power will not be presumed where the Legislature has not manifested it in clear and unmistakable terms.
Idem, 770
27. The omission of the taxing officers of the State in previous years to assess the property in question cannot control the duty imposed by law upon their successors, or the power of the Legislature, or the legal construction of a statute under which an exemption is claimed.
Idem, 770
28. The Kentucky & Great Eastern Railroad Construction Company acquired no ownership of, or lien on, the constructed road between Newport and Catlettsburgh under its contract of May 22, 1873, with the Kentucky & Great Eastern Railway Company for the construction of said road.
Wright v. Kentucky & G. E. R. Co., 821
29. The Construction Company's contract was subject to the terms and conditions of the contract of January 15, 1873, between the owners of the Maysville & Big Sandy Railroad and the Kentucky & Great Eastern Railway Company for a conditional sale of said road to the Railway Company, of which contract the Construction Company had notice.
Idem, 821
30. Under the mortgage executed by the Kentucky & Great Eastern Railway Company on February 15, 1872, the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, as mortgagee, took only such rights as the mortgagor had, or subsequently obtained, as against the vendors of the Maysville & Big Sandy Railroad, and was therefore bound by the forfeiture under the conditional sale; and as to any rights of way acquired by the mortgagor along the line of the Maysville & Big Sandy Railroad, other than those purchased from the owners of said road, the cross bill is not so drawn, nor the evidence such that they can be subjected to the mortgage in this proceeding.
Idem, 821
31. A grant to a railroad company of "all the rights, powers, and privileges," or "all the powers and privileges" of another company, entitles it to the same exemptions from taxation that the other company has. The application of this rule to a statute of Tennessee is not affected by art. XI, sec. 7, of the Constitution of 1834, of that State.
Tennessee v. Whitworth, 833
32. Upon the consolidation of two or more railroad companies, under authority of law, the presumption is that the new company has all the powers and privileges of the old companies.
Idem, 833
33. Where the Act of consolidation provided that the new company should, "for its government, be en-entitled to all the powers and privileges, and be subject to all restrictions and liabilities, conferred and imposed" upon another company, the phrase "for its government," is held to have been intended, not as a limitation of its powers, but for its regulation and control.

Pennoyer v. Whitsworth, 853

38. The Peoria, Atlanta & Decatur Railroad Company, the Paris & Decatur Railroad Company, and the Paris & Terre Haute Railroad Company, three Illinois corporations, each constructed a certain line of road and issued bonds secured by mortgage thereon. Subsequently the other companies conveyed all of their property to the Peoria, Atlanta & Decatur Company, and that company soon thereafter changed its name to that of the "Illinois Midland Railway Company," and issued its bonds secured by a mortgage to the Union Trust Company covering all of its property, including that purchased from the other companies.

Pending subsequent litigation in a state court and the court below, to which various stockholders, judgment creditors, bondholders and others were or became parties, the property was controlled and operated under directions of said courts by successive receivers, who issued eighteen distinct series of receiver's certificates on account of repairs, taxes, betterments and operating expenses. Many of the questions presented have arisen out of the issue of said receiver's certificates, the contest being substantially one between the Peoria and Decatur bondholders and those, who as holders of said certificates or otherwise, claim priority of lien, and this court holds:

1. That certificates issued for necessary repairs are entitled to priority.

2. That the bill filed in the state court by Harvey, the holder of a majority of the stock of the corporations, and certain judgment creditors, was sufficient to enable the court to administer the property as a trust fund and marshal the debts, making proper parties before adjudging the merits.

3. That the power of a court of equity, having charge of railroad property, to make necessary repairs does not depend on the consent of those interested, nor on prior notice to them.

4. That a subsequent opportunity to be heard, as to the propriety of the expenditures and of making them a first lien, is judicially equivalent to prior notice, the receiver and those lending money to him, on certificates issued on orders made without prior notice, taking the risk of the final action of the court. But such final action will only be affected by such objections to the merits as would have been availing if made before.

5. That certificates issued to pay tax liens are entitled to priority.

6. That third persons, not connected with the case or with the parties who bought directly from the receiver his certificates, were not bound to see to the application of the proceeds.

7. That holders of certificates sold within the limit of discount, fixed by the court, are entitled to their face with interest.

8. That certificates issued to replace earnings diverted from paying for operating expenses and ordinary repairs, to pay for necessary betterments or improvements, leaving large debts on account of such expenses and repairs, are entitled to priority.

9. That, in view of the facts presented, the Paris and Decatur bondholders cannot insist that want of affirmative consent by them or their trustee, deprived the court of power to create, on the corpus of the property, any lien taking priority over the mortgage lien.

10. That while the ordinary expenses of the receiver in operating the road are first payable out of income, if any, the corpus may be resorted to when the items are proper, after scrutiny and opportunity for those opposing to be heard.

11. That wages due the employees of the Illinois Midland Company within six months immediately preceding the appointment of the first receiver, were properly allowed priority.

12. That the terms of the orders, appointing the various receivers, did not impair or exclude the ample authority of the court to order said ordinary expenses and "six months' labor claims" paid out of the property itself, with priority.

13. That the final decree of the court below properly provided that the receiver's certificates, so made liens prior to the bonds, should be borne by the three several railroad properties in proportion to their relative lengths, although the terminal rentals and charges of the different roads were relatively unequal.

14. That the legality of the sales by the other companies of their properties to the Peoria, Atlanta & Decatur Company cannot now be questioned by the Paris and Decatur bondholders, their acquiescence, pending litigation and the contraction of debts by the receivers with respect to the whole line operated as a unit, amounting to an estoppel.

15. That the expenses of the various receiverships, incurred under the direction of the court for the benefit of all of the roads, should be borne by each in proportion to its length, such expenses not being chargeable to the purchasing company alone.

16. That 294 bonds of the Paris and Decatur issue, held by Waring Brothers, having been surrendered and exchanged for Illinois Midland bonds, were cancelled, and are now invalid and cannot be placed on a footing with other Paris and Decatur bonds not so exchanged, surrendered and cancelled.

17. That no valid objection lies to the clause in the decree which provides that the several properties shall be offered for sale separately and then as a whole; that the highest bid received for the entire properties shall be accepted, if it exceeds the aggregate of the highest bids for them when offered separately; and that the proceeds shall then be applied in proportion to said separate bids.

18. That certain claims for terminal facilities, track rents, traffic balances, stores supplied and labor performed, are entitled to priority.

19. That claims for certain large amounts borrowed from various banks by one of the receivers, without previous authority of the court, are not entitled to priority, although they were applied toward the payment of the proper expenses of the receivership.

20. That eight receiver's notes aggregating a large amount, although representing, in the main at least, proper expenses of the receivership, are not entitled to priority, the receiver having borrowed the money for which they were given without previous authority of the court.

21. That claims for rent and extraordinary depreciation of rolling stock, right of way and certain other claims, are not entitled to priority.

22. That, with the exception of debts for taxes and receiver's certificates issued to pay taxes, there should be no priority or preference among the various debts and claims allowed precedence over the mortgage bonds of any road, notwithstanding certain orders made by the court below.
Union Trust Co. v. Ill. Midland R. Co., 963

23. No costs are allowed in this court for or against any party, and the expense of printing the record is to be borne equally by certain of the appellants.
Idem, 963

RELEASE.

SEE ACCORD AND SATISFACTION.

RELIGIOUS SOCIETIES.

SEE TAXES, 7.

REMEDIES.

SEE EQUITY, 3, 4, 5.
GARNISHMENT, passim.
JURISDICTION, 12.
MANDAMUS, 4.

REMOVAL OF CAUSES.

SEE HABEAS CORPUS, 9.

1. The last clause of sec. 2 of the Act of March 3, 1875, refers only to suits where exists a separate and distinct cause of action, on which a separate and distinct suit might be maintained. It has no application to cases in which the defendants are sued jointly and as joint contractors.
Louisville & N. R. R. Co. v. Ide, 63
Putnam v. Ingraham, 65

2. A separate controversy is not introduced into the case by separate defenses to the same cause of action.
Idem, 63
Idem, 65

3. A defendant cannot make an action several which a plaintiff has elected to make joint.
Idem, 63
Idem, 65

4. An action brought in a state court against an incorporated company of that State and a citizen of another State to compel the transfer of stock on the books of the company, is not removable into the federal courts. The company is a necessary party although the citizen of the other State raises a separate issue as to the validity of the proceedings under which said sale was had.

St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Wilson, 66
5. A petition, showing a right to removal, signed by plaintiff's attorneys, and not sworn to, but accompanied by an affidavit by the plaintiff made prior to the commencement of the suit, will sustain a removal of the cause, the affidavit being sufficient under sec. 639, R. S. and the absence of an oath to the petition being an informality which the defendant waived by not taking the objection on a motion to remand.
Canal and Cl. St. R. R. Co. v. Hart, 226
6. In a suit in a court of New York against a corporation of that State upon a judgment recovered in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Ohio, merely alleging in a petition for removal, that the defendant was not an inhabitant of Ohio, and was not found there, and was not personally served with process by itself or its officers, was not sufficient to raise a defense under sec. 739, R. S. of want of jurisdiction in the circuit court, without also negativing service of process on an agent of the defendant in Ohio and the actual appearance of the defendant to the suit.
Prov. Sav. L. Assur. Soc. v. Ford, 261
7. Want of jurisdiction set up to avoid a judgment must be shown with the greatest certainty.
Idem, 261
8. The mere fact that a suit in a state court is brought on a judgment recovered in a federal court does not entitle the defendant to removal.
Idem, 261
9. The colorable transfer of a right of action from a person against whom the defendant would have a right of removal to one against whom he has no such right, made to deprive the federal court of jurisdiction is not a ground for removal.
Idem, 261
10. Corporations of the United States are entitled as such to remove into the Circuit Courts of the United States, suits brought against them in state courts.
Union Pac. R. Co. v. Myers, 319
11. The Union Pacific Railroad Company and the Texas Pacific Railway Company are corporations of the United States though certain state and territorial corporations have been consolidated with them.
Idem, 319
12. In proceedings for widening a street a trial before the mayor is in its nature an inquest of valuations and assessments, not having the character of a suit, and a petition for removal may be filed after appeal taken to a state court.
Idem, 319
13. Under such proceedings there is a distinct controversy between the city and the company, although many others are made parties defendant.
Idem, 319
14. A suit brought by citizens of one State against citizens of the same State and citizens of another State, is not removable though there be separate defenses.
Pirie v. Tvedt, 331
15. Where the cause of action is several as well as joint, the plaintiff may elect to sue each defendant separately, or all jointly, and the defendants are not permitted to object.
Idem, 331
16. The fact that judgment may be rendered against a part of the defendants only, does not divide a joint action in tort into separate parts any more than it does a joint action on contract.
Idem, 331
17. A suit in equity brought by a citizen of one State, against a corporation of the same State, and a citizen of another State, is not removable into the Circuit Court of the United States under sec. 2 of the Act of March 3, 1875.
Crump v. Thurber, 328
18. After a cause has been properly removed, the introduction of new parties cannot oust the jurisdiction.
Stewart v. Dunham, 329
19. Where it appears that some title, right, privilege or immunity on which the recovery depends, will be defeated by one construction of the Constitution or a law of the United States, or sustained by the opposite construction, the case is one arising under the Constitution or laws of the United States.
Starin v. Mayor etc. of N. Y. 388
20. A separate defense by one defendant in a joint suit against him and others upon a joint or joint and several cause of action, does not create a separate controversy so as to entitle him to removal under the Act of 1875.
Idem, 388
21. The decision of the questions whether the City of New York has, under its charter, the exclusive right to establish ferries between Manhattan Island and the shore of Staten Island on the Kill Von Kull; and, if so, whether the defendants have, in law and in fact, interfered with that right by setting up and operating such a ferry, does not depend on the Constitution or the laws of the United States.
Idem, 388
22. In a suit to foreclose a mortgage under the Connecticut statute brought against the grantee of the mortgagor, the latter is an indispensable party where it is sought to charge him with any insufficiency in the appraised value of the property to discharge the debt, and if he and the mortgagee are citizens of the same State the cause cannot be removed.
Coney v. Winchell, 610
23. A joint cause of action cannot be removed by the defendants unless all join and are citizens of different States from the plaintiffs. All are affected by the loss by one of his right to remove.
Fletcher v. Hamlet, 679
24. A suit begun in a state court of Louisiana by service of process on a firm through one of its members, is not so changed in character as to make it a new suit by subsequent service on another member of the firm.
Idem, 679
25. A suit cannot be removed from a state to a federal court on the ground of citizenship of parties unless the plaintiff and defendant are citizens of different States at the time when the suit was brought as well as at the time when the petition for removal is filed.
Smith v. Akers, 888
26. Where the Circuit Court has acquired jurisdiction of a cause by removal because of citizenship, it is not devested by the introduction, under a state statute, of the defendant's landlord, who is a citizen of the same State as the plaintiff, as a codefendant.
Phelps v. Oaks, 888
27. Under sec. 914, R. S., a court of the United States is not required to conform its practice to that of the state courts where the effect would be to defeat its jurisdiction once lawfully attached under an Act of Congress.
Idem, 888
28. It was proper in this case for the court below to admit the landlord as codefendant with the tenant, but this did not arrest or interfere with the jurisdiction already established by the plaintiffs against the tenant in possession.
Idem, 888
29. Removals of actions from state to federal courts on the ground of local prejudice can only be had where all the parties on one side are citizens of different States from those on the other side.
Jefferson v. Driver, 897
30. A person who purchases property pendente lite, and who is made a party, comes into the suit subject to the disabilities of the other parties, in respect to a removal of the cause, at the time he came in.
Idem, 897
31. A creditor's bill to subject incumbered property to the payment of a judgment by sale and distribution of the proceeds among lien holders according to their respective priorities, constitutes but a single cause of action. Though separate defendants have separate defenses this does not create separate controversies within the meaning of the Removal Act.
Fidelity Ins. Trust & Safe Deposit Co. v. Huntington, 898
32. An action of tort against several defendants for a wrongful seizure of the property of the plaintiff is not removable, though separate answers are filed, if a necessary defendant and the plaintiff are citizens of the same State.
Sloane v. Anderson, 899
33. The right to remove a suit on the ground of separable controversy is, by the statute, confined to the parties to that controversy.
Rand v. Walker, 907
34. Where a party by a supplemental bill seeks to avoid the effect of a judgment of a federal court, not by avoiding the judgment as between the parties, but by showing that as to her it is of no effect, she not having been a party to it, no question is raised under the authority of the United States so as to confer jurisdiction on the Circuit Court.

Rand v. Walker, 907
35. After a case has been tried in a state court and the judgment reversed by a superior state court and the case remanded for a new trial, it is too late to file a petition for a removal of the case to the federal court.
Core v. Vinal, 912
36. In a joint action for tort against two defendants, one of the defendants cannot remove the cause on the ground of citizenship if the other defendant is a citizen of the same State as the plaintiff.
Idem, 912
37. The right to remove a suit under the Act of March 3, 1875, is lost by a failure to file a petition "before or at the term at which said cause could be first tried and before the trial thereof," and it is not restored by a subsequent amendment of the pleadings presenting different issues.
Phœnix Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Walrath, 924
38. A state court is not bound to surrender its jurisdiction of a suit on a petition for removal until a case has been made, which, on its face, shows that the petitioner has a right to the transfer.
Stone v. South Carolina, 962
39. All issues of fact made on the petition for removal must be tried in the circuit court, but the state court is at liberty to determine for itself whether on the face of the record a removal has been effected. If it decides against the removal its action will, after final judgment, be reviewable in the Supreme Court of the United States.
Idem, 962
40. An action in which a State is a party is not removable from a state to a federal court on the ground of citizenship.
Idem, 962
41. An action against partners for money, paid to them as such is not removable unless all the parties on one side of the controversy unite in the petition for removal.
Idem, 962
42. A proceeding under the Act of Assembly of Virginia approved January 14, 1882, as amended by the Act of March 12, 1884, for the identification and verification of coupons tendered in payment of taxes, debts, or demands due the State is not a suit of a civil nature arising under the Constitution or laws of the United States within the meaning of the Act of Congress of March 3, 1875.
Stewart v. Virginia, 1006

REPLEVIN.

1. A tenant in common cannot maintain replevin against a cotenant, because they have each and equally a right of possession. This rule is recognized in Pennsylvania.
Bohlen v. Arthurs, 454
2. Where, under a contract for the purchase of an undivided interest in land, the purchaser cuts timber and removes it, and the owners of the remaining interest take possession of it, he cannot maintain replevin against them.
Idem, 454
3. The Pennsylvania Act of May 15, 1871, No. 249, sec. 6, concerning actions of replevin, has no operation as between tenants in common.
Idem, 454

RULES.

1. Custody of prisoner on habeas corpus pending appeals. 4

SALES.

SEE APPEAL AND ERROR, 35.
CONTRACTS, 1, 4, 5, 6, 9.
FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCE, 1, 2.
INTERNAL REVENUE, 1.
JUDGMENTS AND DECREES, 2.
LIMITATIONS, 6.
1. In a mercantile contract, a statement descriptive of the subject matter, or of some material incident, such as the time or place of shipment, is ordinarily to be regarded as a warranty, or condition precedent, upon the failure or nonperformance of which the party aggrieved may repudiate the whole agreement.
Norrington v. Wright 366
Filley v. Pope, 372
2. Under a contract for the sale of "5,000 tons of iron rails, for shipment from a European port or ports, at the rate of about 1,000 tons per month, beginning February, 1880, but whole contract to be shipped before August 1, 1880," the sellers are bound to ship 1,000 tons in each month from February to June inclusive, except that slight and unimportant deficiencies may be made up in July.
Idem, 366
3. Under a contract for the sale of 500 tons of pig iron, "shipment from Glasgow as soon as possible," shipment from Glasgow is a condition precedent.
Filley v. Pope, 372
4. Where goods of a specified quality, not in existence or ascertained, are sold, and the seller undertakes to ship them to a distant buyer, and, when they are made or ascertained, delivers them to a carrier for the buyer, the latter, on their arrival, has the right if they are not of the quality required by the contract, to reject them, and rescind the sale, and, if he has paid for them, to recover back the price in a suit against the seller.
Pope v. Allis, 393
5. Under the laws of Kansas a sale by the vendor to defraud his creditors is not invalid as against the vendee if he purchased in good faith and for a sufficient consideration.
Jones v. Simpson, 742
6. The law presumes the possession of the vendee to have been rightfully acquired; and when it appears that a sufficient consideration was paid the vendee is entitled to a verdict and judgment, unless it appears affirmatively that he purchased in bad faith.
Idem, 742
7. A sale will not be set aside for inadequacy of price unless it is so great as to shock the conscience, or unless there be additional circumstances against its fairness.
Graham v. Burgess, 839
8. If, in addition to gross inadequacy of price, the purchaser has been guilty of any unfairness, or has taken any undue advantage, or if the owner or party interested in the property has been misled or surprised, the sale will be regarded as fraudulent and void, or the party injured will be permitted to redeem.
Idem, 839
9. In judicial, as well as private sales, great inadequacy of price is a circumstance which a court of equity will always regard with suspicion, unless it appears that it was no fault of the buyer.
Idem, 839
10. Upon examination of the entire case this court finds a design on the part of the defendant to mislead the complainant and lull her into security, and thus to prevent her from redeeming the property in question within the time prescribed by law; and sustains the decree of the court below allowing further time to redeem.
Idem, 839

SET-OFF.

SEE CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 13, 26.
1. A counterclaim cannot be sustained to recover money, which the defendant alleges in his pleadings to have been advanced by him, and used with his concurrence, to carry on a gambling transaction. And the fact that the plaintiff believed the transaction to be legal does not affect the right of the defendant to recover on his counterclaim.
Higgins v. McOrea, 764
2. Under the Ohio Code a counterclaim stands on the same footing and is to be tested by the same rules as if it were an independent action.
Idem, 764

SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE.

In case of gross laches or inexcusable negligence on the part of a party who seeks a specific performance, or a material change in the circumstances affecting the rights of the parties, where time is not expressly or impliedly of the essence of the contract, a court of equity will refuse to decree a specific performance.
Holgate v. Eaton, 538

STATE LAWS AND DECISIONS.

SEE APPEAL AND ERROR, 10, 41.
BONDS, 9.
CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 13-30, 35, 41-65, 73, 76, 78.
CORPORATIONS, 2, 4.

CRIMINAL LAW, passim.
EVIDENCE, passim.
GARNISHMENT, passim.
GUARDIAN AND WARD, passim.
JURISDICTION, 1-3, 30, 31.
LIMITATIONS, 3, 4, 6, 7.
MORTGAGES, 1, 4, 9, 10, 15.
PRACTICE, 6, 9, 16.
RAILROADS, 9, 10, 15, 16, 18-25, 31, 30.
REMOVAL OF CAUSES, 22, 42.
REPLEVIN, 3.
SET-OFF, 2.
STREETS, 4.
TAXES, 1, 4, 15.

1. The decision of the Supreme Court of the State, though single, is entitled to peculiar respect, the questions involved arising upon the local law of the State; but it is not conclusive in the courts of the United States unless it has become a rule of property.
Gibson v. Lyon, 440
2. Where the decisions of the highest court of a State establish a rule of property they will as a rule be followed by this court.
Gage v. Pumpelly, 449
3. Under the decision of the Supreme Court of Illinois, a tax sale of real estate is void when a part of the tax for which it is made is illegal.
Idem, 449
4. Under the decisions of the same court a judgment by default, in a tax sale proceeding, is not conclusive upon the taxpayer, but may be impeached collaterally.
Idem, 449
5. This court cannot consider an objection raised by the appellee to the decree appealed from.
Idem, 449
6. Where the liability of a municipal corporation upon negotiable securities, depends upon a local statute, the rights of the parties are to be determined according to the law as declared by the state courts at the time such securities were issued.
Anderson v. Santa Anna, 633
7. While the courts of the United States accept and apply the construction of the courts of a State of its Constitution and statutes, it is the settled doctrine of this court, that rights accruing under one construction will not be lost merely by a change of opinion in the state court.
Idem, 633
8. Where such rights have accrued before the state court has announced its construction, the federal court although leaning to an agreement with the state court, must determine the question upon their own independent judgment.
Idem, 633
9. The Act of the Legislature of Illinois of February 28, 1867, is held by this court to be valid as within the principle that the Legislature may, by retroactive statutes when not restricted by the Constitution, legalize the unauthorized acts and proceedings of subordinate municipal agencies, where such acts and proceedings might have been previously authorized by the Legislature.
Idem, 633

STATES.

SEE CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 5, 8, 10, 17, 33.
STATE LAWS AND DECISIONS, passim.
LANDS, 12, 13.
LIMITATIONS, 1.
RAILROADS, 14, 15.
REMOVAL OF CAUSES, 40.
TAXES, 9.
TERRITORIES, 1.

The States have the power to control and regulate the organization, drilling and parading of military bodies and associations, except when they are authorized by the military laws of the United States.
Presser v. Illinois, 615

STATUTE OF FRAUDS.

SEE DEBTOR AND CREDITOR, 3.
PLEADINGS, 7.

A parol agreement that one of the parties to it shall purchase a tract of land on the best terms possible, and then convey an interest therein to the other, is within the Statute of Frauds and cannot be enforced.
Dunphy v. Ryan, 703

STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.

SEE LIMITATIONS, passim.

STATUTES.

SEE CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 23.
POLYGAMY, 1.
RAILROADS, passim.
STATE LAWS AND DECISIONS, passim.
UNION PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY, passim.

1. In the Revised Statutes, sec. 699 stands separate from the other parts of the "Civil Rights" Acts, and is to be construed accordingly, but with reference to the general rules of interpretation applicable to the revision.
Bowman v. Chicago & N. W. R. R. Co., 502
2. The Constitution and a statute under it will be construed together as one law.
Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 414
3. Statutes must be interpreted, if possible, so as to make them consistent with the Constitution and the paramount law.
Presser v. Illinois, 615
4. Statutes that are constitutional in part only will be upheld so far as they are not in conflict with the Constitution, provided the parts are separable.
Idem, 615
5. In construing statutes which are binding on States as contracts, the words employed, if capable of more than one meaning, are to be given that meaning which it is apparent the parties intended them to have.
Tennessee v. Whitworth, 830

STREETS.

1. The title to the streets of Washington is in the United States, and the right to use them for any other than the ordinary use of streets should proceed from Congress.
Edmonds v. Baltimore & P. R. R. Co., 216
2. The Baltimore & Potomac Railroad Company can occupy only such streets in the City of Washington as have been expressly designated by Congress for that purpose.
Idem, 216
3. The said company was not organized under the general corporation law of the District of Columbia and it derives no authority under that Act to use the streets of the City of Washington.
Idem, 216
4. The Maryland charter of the said company does not confer any power to use the streets of a city as an incident of its right to run to or from such city.
Idem, 216

SUBROGATION.

SEE INSURANCE, 3.

TAXES.

SEE ACTIONS, 1.
CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 12, 14-29, 31, 34, 38-44, 73, 76, 77.
BONDS, 15.
EVIDENCE, 15, 16.
EQUITY, 18.
INDIANS, 2.
INJUNCTIONS, 1, 2.
INTERNAL REVENUE, 2, 6.
JURISDICTION, 11, 12.
LANDS, 22.
LICENSE, passim.
MANDAMUS, 4, 5.
MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.
RAILROADS, 25-27, 31, 32, 34.
STATE LAWS AND DECISIONS, 3, 4.

1. The exemption from taxation of the property of the Covington & Ohio Railroad Company, granted by the Act of the Legislature of West Virginia of March 1, 1866, incorporating said company, was a privilege personal to the corporation, which did not pass to the purchaser of the property under foreclosure proceedings.
Chesapeake and O. R. Co. v. Miller, 121
2. Under the Act of the Legislature of West Virginia of February 18, 1871, amended February 20, 1877, relating to sales under trust deeds and mortgages, and to judicial sales of the property of railroad or other internal improvement companies, the purchaser does not take any exemption or immunity from taxation which belonged to the old company.
Idem, 121
3. Immunity from taxation is not a franchise.
Idem, 121
4. Stock held by a citizen of Ohio in a foreign corporation is taxable notwithstanding the payment by the corporation of a tax on its property situated in the State.

Sturges v. Carter, 240
5. The law of Louisiana requiring the court, when rendering a judgment against a parish to order the levy of a tax to pay it, is properly construed with reference to the tax limit fixed by the Act of 1872.
Stewart v. Police Jury of Jefferson. 588
6. A judgment creditor, upon a judgment obtained on a contract made subsequent to the passage of the Act of 1872, is not entitled to a mandamus to compel the levy of a tax in excess of the limit fixed by that Act.
Idem, 588
7. Land, owned by a religious corporation or society in the District of Columbia, which is neither actually occupied for a church building, nor reasonably needed and actually used for the convenient enjoyment of such building as a church, is not exempt from taxation, whether used for any other purpose or not.
Gibbons v. District of Columbia, 680
8. In the exercise of its power to levy taxes in the District of Columbia for district purposes, Congress may exempt certain classes of property, or tax them at different rates.
Idem, 680
9. The right of a State in which personal property is situated to tax it is not affected by the fact that the owner resides in another State, which taxes him for the same property as a part of his general estate attached to his person.
Coe v. Town of Errol, 715
10. Products of a State, though intended for export to another State and partially prepared for that purpose by being deposited at a place or port of shipment within the State, are liable to be taxed like other property within the State.
Idem, 715
11. Exportation is not begun until they are committed to the common carrier for transportation out of the State to the State of their destination, or have started on their ultimate passage to that State. Until that time they are taxable as a part of the general mass of property in the State, though they are not taxable as exports.
Idem, 715
12. The carrying of property in carts or vehicles, or even floating it, to the depot where the journey is to commence is no part of the journey.
Idem, 715
13. A lawful tender of payment, as well as an actual payment, of taxes deprives the collecting officer of all authority for further action to enforce payment, and renders every subsequent step illegal and void.
Royall v. Virginia, 735
14. The taxes of the Blue Ridge Railroad Company are not payable in the revenue bond scrip issued by the State of South Carolina in exchange for the bonds of the company guaranteed by the State.
Hagood v. Southern, 805
15. The holder of revenue bond scrip, issued under the Act of the Legislature of South Carolina of March 2, 1872, has no legal right to have such scrip received for taxes, unless he owes taxes for which it is receivable. There is no breach of contract until a tender for taxes due from the holder has been refused.
Idem, 805
16. The charter exemption from taxation of the capital stock of the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis Railroad Company, applies to its shares of stock in the hands of individual stockholders.
Tennessee v. Whitworth, 830
17. The capital stock of the Nashville & Decatur Railroad Company is exempt from taxation in Tennessee, although it resulted from the consolidation of two corporations of Tennessee with a corporation of Alabama.
Tennessee v. Whitworth, 833
18. The relinquishment of taxing power is never to be presumed.
Idem, 833
19. Exemption from taxation, being a special privilege granted by the government to an individual, is a franchise; and acquiescence by the grantee or his successors for a long period of time (in this case sixty years), in the imposition of taxes, raises a presumption that such franchise has been surrendered.
New Jersey v. Wright, 1021

TERRITORIES.

1. Unless otherwise declared by Congress, the title of every species of property owned by a territory passes to the State upon its admission to the Union.
Brown v. Grant, 598
2. Lands conveyed to a territory, "its successors and assigns forever," and duly accepted as the site for its capitol, pass to the State when admitted, although the territory may not have occupied them, there being no condition requiring the erection of buildings thereon within any specified time.
Idem, 598
3. The question whether the grantor has been deprived of his property without due process of law, is within the jurisdiction of this court.
Idem, 598

TREATIES.

SEE JURISDICTION, 15, 16.

TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES.

SEE BONDS, 5.
HUSBAND AND WIFE, 1, 2.
PARTNERSHIP, 1, 2.
LANDS, 1.
LIMITATIONS, 2.
MORTGAGES, 5, 14.
1. Where the acts or omissions of a trustee are such as to show a want of reasonable fidelity, a court of equity will remove him.
Cavender v. Cavender, 212
2. Where trust funds are to be invested by the trustee, neglect to invest constitutes of itself a breach of trust, and is ground for removal.
Idem, 212
3. Where one person is to pay and receive the same money, and nothing remains but to make proper entries in his accounts, the law will consider that as done which ought to be done.
Idem, 212
4. A demurrer to a bill setting up a trust will not be sustained on the ground that the nature of the trust is not sufficiently set forth, when the facts stated are sufficient, if true, to enable the court to act intelligently.
Idem, 212
5. Where the payee of a promissory note secured by a trust deed on two lots, the trustee having power under the trust deed to sell the lots at private sale on direction of the payee, accepted the lots in satisfaction of his debt, which was of thrice their value, and directed their conveyance in trust for the children of the maker of the note as a gift to them, it is held that such conveyance is valid as against other creditors.
Van Riswick v. Spalding, 913

UNION PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY.

1. In a controversy between the Union Pacific Railway Company and the United States arising under the Act of July 1, 1862, it is immaterial whether the amount actually found to be due for transportation of the mails, "at fair and reasonable rates of compensation, not to exceed the amounts paid by private parties for the same kind of service," as required by said section, is ascertained upon evidence comparing them with the rates previously determined and fixed by the company, or with those allowed by the accounting officers of the government. The only material thing is to adjudge what is due according to the rule prescribed by the statute.
Union Pac. R. Co v. United States, 920
2. The bridge of the Union Pacific Railway Company between Council Bluffs and Omaha is subject to the provisions of the Act of July 1, 1862, as to the rates to be paid by the government for transportation service over it.
Idem, 920

USURY.

1. To constitute usury, there must be an intention knowingly to contract for or to take usurious interest.
Call v. Palmer, 559
2. When an agent who is authorized by his principal to lend money for lawful interest exacts for his own benefit more than the lawful rate, without authority or knowledge of his principal, the loan is not thereby rendered usurious.
Idem, 559

3. Where the promisor in a usurious contract makes it the consideration of a new contract with a third person not a party to the original contract, or to the usury paid or reserved upon it, and the new contract is not a contrivance to evade the statutes against usury, the latter is not illegal or usurious.
Call v. Palmer, 559

UTAH.

SEE APPEAL AND ERROR, 3.
POLYGAMY, passim.

1. The Board of Commissioners appointed for the Territory of Utah under the Act of March 22, 1882, have no power over the registration of voters or the conduct of elections. Their authority is limited to the appointment of registration and election officers, to the canvass of the returns made by such officers of election, and to the issue of certificates of election to the persons appearing by such canvass to be elected.
Murphy v. Ramsey, 47

2. The registration and election officers thus appointed are required, until other provisions be made by the Legislative Assembly of the territory, to perform their duties under the existing laws of the United States, including the Act of March 22, 1882, and of the territory, so far as not inconsistent therewith.
Idem, 47

3. Any rules promulgated by said board to govern the registration and election of officers were null and void; but their illegality is no ground of liability against the Board of Commissioners.
Idem, 47

4. The registration officers were bound to register only such persons as, being qualified under the laws previously in force, and offering to take the oath as to such qualifications prescribed by the territorial Act of 1878, were also not disqualified by the eighth section of the Act of Congress of March 22, 1882.
Idem, 47

5. The registration officer must either require such disqualifications to be negatived by a modification of the oath, the form of which is given in the territorial Act, or otherwise to satisfy himself by due inquiry that such disqualifications do not exist.
Idem, 47

6. The plaintiffs in actions seeking to recover damages for being unlawfully deprived of their right to be registered as voters, must allege in their declarations, as matter of fact, that they were legally qualified voters, or, that allegation being omitted, must allege all the facts necessary to show as matter of law, that they were qualified voters; and to this end it is necessary that they should negative all the disqualifications pronounced by the law.
Idem, 47

7. A bigamist or polygamist, in the sense of the eighth section of the Act is a man who, having contracted a bigamous or polygamous marriage, and become the husband, at one time, of two or more wives, maintains that relation and status at the time when he offers to be registered as a voter. The eighth section of the Act does not operate as an additional penalty prescribed for the punishment of the offense of polygamy. It is not objectionable as an ex post facto law. The disfranchisement operates upon the existing state and condition of the person and not upon a past offense.
Idem, 47

WAGER.

SEE SET-OFF, 1.

WARRANTY.

SEE SALES, 1.

WILLS.

1. In the construction of wills a latent ambiguity may be removed by extrinsic evidence.
Patch v. White, 360

2. A latent ambiguity may arise upon a will, when it names a person as the subject of a gift, or a thing as the subject of it, and there are two persons or things that answer such name or description; or it may arise when the will contains a misdescription of the object or subject.
Idem, 360

3. Where a latent ambiguity consists of a misdescription, if it can be struck out and enough remain in the will to identify the person or thing, the court will so deal with it; or if it is an obvious mistake, will read it as if corrected.
Idem, 360

4. Where the testator devised to a brother "lot 6" in a certain block, and disposed of the remainder of his estate to others, and it appeared that he did not own "lot 6" but did own lot 3 in said block, and that lot 3 was otherwise properly described in the will, said lot 3 is held by this court to have been lawfully devised.
Idem, 360

WITNESSES.

SEE CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 69, 70.

1. Contradictory declarations of a witness, whether oral or in writing, made at another time, cannot be used for the purpose of impeachment until the witness has been examined upon the subject, and his attention particularly directed to the circumstances in such a way as to give him full opportunity for explanation or exculpation.
Steamboat Charles Morgan v. Kouns, 316

2. The exception in sec. 858, R. S., to the provision that parties may testify in federal courts in their own behalf cannot be extended by the court so as to exclude parties from testifying in their own behalf against assignees in bankruptcy.
Hobbs v. McLean, 940

3. Where, in an action by one of three partners against the government, the other two partners testify in behalf of the claimant that they have no interest in the claim except as shown by a certain memorandum, such witnesses are not estopped thereby from showing, in an action by them against the assignee of the claimant, that they had an interest in the claim, further than was shown by such memorandum.
Idem, 940

MAR 3 - 1916